REPORT PROGRESS ON SEWER WORK

Bills Aggregating $16,735.62 Are Approved and Ordered Paid by Commission.

RECOMMEND CHANGES

Right-of-Way Committee Will Meet July 14 at Greenbrook to Treat With Few Property-Owners Who Have Not Given Consent.

Bills for joint sewer work aggregating $16,735.62 were approved and ordered paid at the monthly meeting of the Sewage Commission held in the Common Council rooms, last night. In the absence of Chairman George S. Clay, of the Common Council, Mayor Robert Clark, Jr., of the borough, presided. Plainfield, North Plainfield and Dunellen were all represented at the meeting.

The bills paid last night include one of $10,000 to E. F. Bader, who is constructing the disposal works on the Darling farm in Piscataway township; another of $5,000 to the Atlantic Construction Company, and the balance was for miscellaneous expenses.

It was reported that the Atlantic Construction Company would be able to continue its work along the present right of way until August 1. The committee on rights of way will meet at Greenbrook on July 14 to treat with the few remaining property-owners who have not yet given their consents and by whose properties it is planned to run the trunk line. It is believed that little trouble will be experienced in getting these consents.

The construction committee recommended the erection of concrete poles to carry wires for telephones and power for dynamos. These will cost $17 each. Several changes recommended by the committee were also adopted, one being that an iron pipe railing be built around the settling tank at an expense of $600 and that iron steps be placed in the tank at an expense of $30. The commission expressed itself as being well pleased with the progress being made on the sewer work.

CHIEFS ARE ELECTED BY MIANTONOMO TRIBE

Miantonomo Tribe, No. 148, I. O. R. M., elected officers last night, as follows: Prophet, Lewis K. Clark, sachem, Charles Meyer, Jr.; senior sagamore, Peter Lund; junior sagamore, Elmer Bailey, and trustee, Daniel W. Mundy. The new officers will be installed July 14, at which time there will be a class adoption. Three new proposals for membership were made last night. Delegations from Somerville, Westfield and Cranford will attend the installation and the class adoption exercises July 14.

INFORMAL GATHERING OF JUNIOR DRAMATIC CLUB

Members of the Junior Dramatic Social Club held an informal gathering at the home of one of the club's members, Miss Mary Welsh, of 622 West Third street, last evening. The affair was well attended and those present spent the evening playing games, singing and listening to piano selections rendered by several of the members. Toward the close of the festivities an election of officers for the ensuing year was held.

Edwin Lee Sullivan was chosen president, with Miss Elizabeth McAlvanah as secretary. There were no other officers chosen. After partaking plentifully of refreshments, the little gathering dispersed.

WOMEN'S LEAGUE PLAN SHIRTWAIST RECEPTION

Extensive preparations are being made for the "Shirtwaist Reception," which the Women's League, of St. Joseph's church, is arranging to give on Monday night, July 12. The affair will be held in the new hall at Watchung and Jackson avenues, and will immediately follow a short business session of the organization. Tickets will be sold at the door only. Prof. Alfred Squire's orchestra will furnish music for the occasion and ice cream and home-made cake and candy will be sold.

The committee in charge is composed of Miss Katherine Conshay, chairman; Miss Nora Bergen, Mrs. Katherine Sutton, Miss Elizabeth Day, Miss Hannigan, Miss Mary Jacobs, Miss Margaret Conroy, Mrs. J. B. Willis, Mrs. N. Helreigen and Miss Katherine Howe.

AUTO AMBULANCE FOR MUHLENBERG

Mrs. Hettie F. Milliken to Give Institution a Motor Driven Vehicle.

The board of governors of Muhlenberg Hospital announced today that through the generosity of Mrs. Hettie F. Milliken, of this city, the institution is to have a modern automobile ambulance, the lack of which has greatly handicapped the hospital for sometime. It was necessary to use the old horse-drawn vehicle that has been in service for a number of years. The governors did not feel as though there was sufficient funds to appropriate money for an automobile ambulance, hence the gift of Mrs. Milliken is all the more appreciated.

At the time of the opening of the children's ward and the completion of the alterations to the administration building, the need of a modern motor driven ambulance was made known through the columns of the Daily Press. Immediately following the appeal a generous supporter of the hospital made the offer to the Board, through the president, of a motor ambulance.

The board, as well as all other friends and supporters of the hospital, are indebted to Mrs. Hettie F. Milliken for her gifts which adds another to the many previous evidences of the interest of the donor in the affairs of the hospital. As the result the contract has been signed for a thoroughly modern motor ambulance costing about $2,200 and this ambulance will be in use in the hospital service some time in August.

This removes what has been one of the weak features in the hospital service for a considerable time and enables the friends of the institution to point with pride to the fact that its every department is now of the most modern and up-to-date character.

TOUCHING TRIBUTE TO NELSON RUNYON

Plainfield Bar Association Takes Action on Death of Late Member.

Evidence of the respect entertained for the late Nelson Runyon by his colleagues in the Plainfield Bar Association was shown yesterday afternoon, at a remarkable demonstration in the District Court rooms, where President Samuel S. Swackhamer had called a meeting for the purpose of instructing the organization concerning the part the association will have in the funeral services this afternoon. A committee composed of William A. Coddington, Harry C. Runyon and William Newcorn was appointed to draw up resolutions and expressions of condolence to be forwarded to the family of the deceased practitioner and also to arrange for a large floral piece to be sent to the home this afternoon. A large delegation signified its intention of attending the services in a body.

Men well known in the work of the organization and as Plainfield lawyers spoke touchingly on the life of Mr. Runyon. Each individual's remarks were highly complimentary to his ability as a lawyer, his personal dealings with those who sought his advice and particularly to his unerring memory, one of his prominent characteristics. Professional men who had known him for years eloquently described incidents exemplifying his honesty and ability and all present at the meeting were noticeably touched.

SEWER DITCHES FILLED IN BY HEAVY DOWNPOUR

The heavy rain last evening caused a settling of the dirt used to fill in the sewer ditch on Somerset street, just across the brook, where the contractor was working yesterday and the day before, and just before midnight a gang of men were called out to shovel in more dirt and stamp it down. The rain caused the filled-in material to settle to such an extent that the road became dangerous to traffic, and it was thought best to fill in the depressions and round up the topping at once and not wait until morning.

OFF FOR BOYS' CAMP.

Twenty-two boys, in charge of Y. M. C. A. Boys' Secretary Edwin Glaentzer and Frank O. Dunning, left the association building early this morning, for a two weeks stay at Camp Wawayanda, in the upper part of the State. The party went by motor bus and expected to arrive about noon.

MODEL CAMPAIGN NOW PROPOSED

Cause of Temperance to Be Promoted Here Along Educational Lines.

RESTRICTIONS SOUGHT

Movement Started By Monday Afternoon Club Will Direct Its Attack Against the Supply of Saloon Fodder—Committee Named.

Plainfield is to have a new sort of a temperance campaign. This time it is not a drive against the saloons, but against the supply of saloon fodder. The women started it, as they have started so many good things in this community. The idea is to "pump" Plainfield full of information concerning the physical, economic and social effects of drink in the hope that individuals will cut it out, boys will not form the habit, and public opinion will be strengthened to place further restrictions upon the traffic. It is a community welfare, not a political proposition, and it appeals to all classes of citizens.

The Monday Afternoon Club, at a recent meeting, had a discussion on the question and a committee was appointed by that club to organize an educational campaign, such as was carried on with great success at Boston under the auspices of the Associated Charities of that city.

The Prison Commission of Massachusetts had found that over 90% of those incarcerated in jail in one year were intemperate, and the Associated Charities, tired of competing with the liquor problem at the wrong end, decided to appoint a committee of fifteen to inaugurate an educational campaign. Seven of this committee were prominent doctors of the city and the others well known laymen. They caused to be printed large posters tending to show the evil effects of alcohol and these were posted throughout the city. Other cities took the cue and carried on the same campaign.

It is a campaign of this character that the Monday Afternoon Club decided to foster in Plainfield. The committee from this club consisted of Mrs. Eugene H. Hatch, Mrs. Henry E. Hawes, Mrs. Henry D. Hibbard and Mrs. Samuel T. Carter, Jr.

They caused the matter to be presented to various organizations in the city and to persons interested in the question, with the result that the following poster campaign committee has been constituted to undertake the work:

Allen E. Beals, Herbert G. Condict, R. A. Claybrook, Mrs. S. T. Carter, R. Henry Depew, Mrs. Orton Dale, Joseph W. Gavett, George M. Holstein, Mrs. Frank Hyde, G. E. Hall, Henry E. Hawes, Augustus V. Heely, Dr. B. VanD. Hedges, A. B. Jones, J. E. Kimball, Dr. Edward Krans, H. G. Lapsley, James P. Murray, William D. Murray, Mrs. H. W. Maxson, Charles W. McCutchen, Frederick I. Smith, Duncan W. Taylor, Howard H. Williams.

The officers are: Chairman, Arthur M. Harris; vice chairman, Samuel T. Carter, Jr.; secretary, Mrs. Henry D. Hibbard; treasurer, Mrs. Henry E. Hawes.

Sub-committees have been appointed and the work will begin at once. There has been a very ready response on the part of those who have been approached to interest themselves in the movement, and the feeling seems prevalent that a quiet campaign of education will most effectively emphasize the evils occasioned by the use of alcohol.

DUTCH ARMS BAND TO PLAY AT C. E. FESTIVAL

The annual festival of the Christian Endeavor Society of Warren chapel was held this afternoon and will be repeated tonight on the lawn of the chapel. The children had an opportunity to attend from 4 to 6 o'clock while the evening will be for the older people from 7 to 10 o'clock. The Dutch Arms Band of this city will furnish music during the night. There will be a sale of ice cream, home-made cake and candy, and fruit punch. In case it should rain the committee has arranged to have the festival in the chapel. Theodore J. Martin is supervisor of the entire arrangements and he is assisted by members of the various departments.

OPEN-AIR SERVICE.

The regular services of the Christian and Missionary Alliance will be held tomorrow afternoon in the German Reformed church at Craig place and Duer street, at 3:30 and 7:45 o'clock. Saturday evening the Alliance will hold an open-air service at the corner of Watchung avenue and Front street. The service Sunday is conducted at 4 p. m.

OPPORTUNITY FOR THOSE WHO KICK

Chief Kiely Ready to Do His Duty if Some Real Evidence is Shown Him.

CO-OPERATION SOUGHT

Police Department Being Criticized Because of Affair Monday Night But No Grounds for Action Have Been Pointed Out.

Talk concerning the "attack" on the "Pillar of Fire" in this city Monday night has led Mayor Calkins to request Police Chief Kiely to make a detailed report of the conditons existing on Watchung avenue on the night in question for presentation to the Councilmanic Police Board. Affidavits covering the case thoroughly were secured by the police department head and are ready to be turned over to the proper authorities. It is understood that prominent men have offered testimony in the matter and Chief Kiely intends to give the case all the attention it demands. In speaking with reporters this morning Chief Kiely said:

"I was at the Pillar of Fire tent on Monday night until after 9 o'clock. There was a crowd of perhaps 1,000 of our citizens about the tent and on the adjacent streets.

"There was nothing about the appearance of these people to indicate that they constituted a mob, and to assume that they had assembled for the purpose of committing an act of violence would have been an unwarranted presumption upon the part of the person who entertained such a thought. Among those who assembled were two police officers.

"Some time after I left there was a boisterous demonstration and the officers were putting the people off the lot when the tent fell, but whether it was cut down or dragged down I do not know. There were several small boys on the lot and they may have loosened the ropes.

"I am informed that when the tent fell the members of the sect ran into the open and that the crowd gathered about them. They started to run from the lot and the crowd followed, shouting and cheering. It has been charged that the members of the sect were assaulted with stones, eggs and clubs, but I cannot believe that this is true, for if it were true some one in the crowd other than the objects of the alleged attack would have been struck by these missiles.

"Had the police who were present charged the crowd with clubs and blackjacks, as is the method employed in dispersing mobs, every person who stood in the way of an officer would have been indiscriminately beaten down.

"An act of this kind would have provoked more serious criticism than is now heard. If there is anyone who saw the Pillar of Fire tent pulled down and recognized the persons who did it, or saw any person committing an assault upon any member of the sect the instrumentalities of the law are available, and if advised as to the identity of such persons they will be apprehended and prosecuted.

"The members of the Pillar of Fire sect came to me and complained that they were molested on Saturday and Sunday nights. I told them that they were the only religious denomination that had ever been molested here; that we would preserve law and order within this city, and that if their street talks were provocative of trouble they would have to stop.

"A woman who spoke for the Pillars of Fire assured me that she was not assailing one denomination more than another; that she had not mentioned the name of any individual, and that she knew better than to do that.

"She wanted a special policeman, and I advised that the services of an officer assigned to such duty must be borne by those who employ him, because we never detail a man anywhere on private property unless he is paid for his services.

"The local theatres pay for the police officer that serves them, and there have been several fashionable weddings here where such service was furnished and paid for by individuals.

"I am making an investigation, trying to learn who, if any one committed violence against the person or property of the Pillars of Fire. Any one who can aid in this investigation will be welcomed, and will help in upholding the law.

"But to say that the police were lax or that they should have resorted to the methods that prevail in dealing with mobs in riot, is not only an injustice to the police department, but also an injustice to the hundreds of innocent men, women and children who assembled in Watchung avenue, ran after the fleeing members of the sect and shouted or cheered, as the impulse of the moment may have affected them.

"Those who claim to have been assaulted have not appeared before the

QUEEN MARY'S GRATEFUL WORDS

APPRECIATE ARTICLES

Local Branch Has Thus Far Made and Shipped 37,448 Bandages, Surgical Dressings, Comfort Kits, etc., to England for the Soldiers.

The New Jersey Branch of the Prince of Wales Relief Fund has been greatly encouraged in its work through the receipt of a letter from Queen Mary of England acknowledging the arrival of the many cases of useful articles for the soldiers engaged in the European war. The letter, which was signed by Annie Lawley, the honorable secretary to the Queen, is as follows:

"Queen Mary's Needlework Guild.
"Friary Court,
"St. James Palace, S. W.,
"14th June, 1915.

"Dear Sir:

"I beg to acknowledge the safe arrival of the cases sent by the Samland and the Manhattan. There seems to have been a great delay in delivering them, but I suppose we cannot help that, as the work at the docks is very disorganized.

"I am commanded by Her Majesty the Queen to tell you how grateful she is to your ladies' committee, the committee of the Junior War Relief, and the New Jersey Branch of the Prince of Wales Relief Fund for the continued and practical help that they are giving her guild. The things that you send are always so splendid and in this case are quite invaluable to us, as we are getting so many more appeals from hospitals than from the troops. Your gifts are being shipped to the Dardanelles, and to the clearing hospitals at the front.

"I have just got back from France and can testify how much everything is wanted. I saw many of the things which came from New York, being worn by the wounded and they asked me to convey their thanks to the ladies who were taking so much trouble to help them.

"It may interest you to hear that some of the children's clothing which arrived in your cases today, has been sent to the victims of the Zeppelin raid in London.

"I hope the ladies realize how much we all appreciate their kindness and help.

"Believe me, yours truly,
"(Signed) ANNIE LAWLEY,
"Honorable Secretary."

The local members of the New Jersey Branch of the Prince of Wales Relief Fund realized with the arrival of summer that the time had come to somewhat change the character of their work and a hospital relief committee has been formed with the following members: Mrs. N. Pendleton Rogers, chairman; Mrs. Van der Linde, Miss Mary Campbell, Mrs. Rufus Delafield, Mrs. John Jewett, Mrs. William Griscom, Miss Annie Barclay and Mrs. Henry A. Fiske.

The use of a room in the Grace church parish house was obtained, the necessary apparatus in the way of tables, sewing machines, machines for rolling bandages, etc., were furnished free of cost, and since the 26th of March every Friday morning has seen a busy set of women working fast and earnestly. Each week's work has been promptly forwarded to St. George Society in New York at an average cost for transportation of 32 cents a week, the only expense involved except the cost of materials. Between the 26th of March and the 25th of June the following articles have been sent:

Slings, 130; knit articles, 64, slippers, 44 pairs; nightingales, 45; medical sponges, 28,722; bandages, 2,447; first aid bandages, 1,214, surgical dressings, 4,650; comfort kits, 82; bands of linen, 46; sewing bags, 4; total, 37,448.

That this work has been well done and has reached its destination promptly is shown by the letter from Queen Mary's secretary.

Any one desirous of helping in this work will be very welcome at Grace church parish house on Friday morning between 10 and 12. The work is very simple and if one has a little time to spare, a great deal can be done in half an hour. Our treasury needs replenishing and any gifts can be sent to the chairman, Mrs. N. P. Rogers, or given to any member of the committee.

POSTPONE MEETING.

Because Monday will be a holiday, the regular meeting of the North Plainfield Board of Health, scheduled to be held on that date, will be postponed until Monday evening, July 12.

Meetings of the Chi Gamma Chi have been suspended during the summer months. Sessions will be resumed in September.

AGREES TO EMPLOY ONLY UNION MEN

Joint Arbitration Board Adjusts Differences With Contractor Dennick.

If Contractor William H. Dennick obeys the injunction put upon him by the joint arbitration board, which met last night to investigate the charge that he has been employing non-union hodcarriers, there will be no attempt made to take all union men off the two large contracts he has underway—the Scotch Plains public school house and the Crescent Court apartment house, East Seventh street.

Mr. Dennick was instructed at the meeting to employ union hodcarriers in place of the non-union men he is alleged to have been hiring, and was warned that if he did not obey, the union carpenters, masons and other journeymen would be called off the job today. The board, which is composed of the Master Builders' Association and the Building Trades Council, met last evening in Trades Council Hall. Mr. Dennick is generally recognized as an employer of union labor, and readily agreed to retain in his employ union men only hereafter.

REGULATIONS FOR INDEPENDENCE DAY

Mayor Calkins Gives Police Chief Kiely Instructions About Explosives.

Mayor Leighton Calkins has supplied Police Chief Kiely with a list of the regulations that will govern the observance of the Fourth of July in the city of Plainfield, setting down an iron-clad code that will be strictly enforced. Many people have made inquiry concerning the laws governing the discharge of firecrackers and other explosives and the city executive has put the ordinance in a concise form in order that there will be no misunderstanding. Chief Kiely has announced that his department will enforce the law to the letter and those committing violations will be severely dealt with.

No fireworks of any kind can be discharged on any street or in any public place. Fireworks can be discharged only on private property.

The only fireworks of any description which may be used or discharged on private property are: (a) Roman candles not over fifteen balls, (b) mines not over fifteen inches in length, (c) triangles not over twelve inches, (d) colored fires, (e) fire crackers not over two and one-half inches in length and not over one-half inch in diameter, (f) torpedoes not over three-quarters of an inch in diameter, and (g) paper cap toy pistols exploding small paper caps only. Fireworks may not be discharged except between the hours of 6 a. m. and 12 o'clock midnight.

It is forbidden anywhere within the city limits, including private property, to fire or discharge any cannon, gun, revolver, toy pistol or fire-arm of any description even with blank charges; but this does not prohibit the use of small paper cap toy pistols exploding small paper caps only.

It is forbidden within the city limits, including private property, to set in motion any toy or other balloon containing burning material of any kind.

It is also forbidden to sell or expose for sale within the city limits, any cannon, toy pistol or fireworks of any description, except the roman candles, mines, triangles, colored fires, fire crackers, torpedoes and paper cap toy pistols, mentioned in paragraph 2 above, which the law permits to be used and discharged on private property only.

Persons violating the ordinance are subject to fine according to the nature of the violation not exceeding one hundred dollars for each offense. The Mayor is authorized to issue permits, on written application therefore, to qualified parties to display and discharge fireworks of specified character at specified time and place; and also to permit the sale of fireworks intended to be used exclusively in connection with exhibitions for which he has issued such special permit.

MAY TAKE OVER WIRELESS PLANT

Government Thinks Sayville Office Has Violated Neutrality.

GERMAN FLEET ROUTED

Russians Drove Enemy Away From Port of Windau in Baltic on Monday—French Repulse More Attacks All Along the Line.

Washington, July 1.—Unless something unforeseen develops the United States government will take over the Sayville wireless plant before the end of the week. As a result of conferences between Secretaries Daniels, Lansing and Redfield it has been definitely established that there is basis for complaints that the station is violating neutrality. Secretary Daniels declined to comment on the matter today.

Ambassador Page cabled the State Department today that the steamer Armenian, torpedoed off the Cornwall coast by a German submarine, was engaged in business for the British Admiralty. The American ambassador was informed of this fact by the British Admiralty officials today. The Armenian carried no passengers, Ambassador Page's cable stated.

London, July 1 (Central News Cable). A German squadron on Monday shelled the Russian port of Windau, on the Baltic Sea, in the province of Courland, says a statement from Petrograd. The German squadron consisted of one battleship, four cruisers and a number of torpedo boats. The Russian land batteries turned their guns on the Germans, while a fleet of torpedo boats and destroyers emerged from the harbor. The Germans withdrew. One German torpedo boat struck a mine and sank.

The British bark Thistlebank, which sailed from Bahia Blanca, Argentina, April 26, with a cargo of wheat for Queenstown, was torpedoed by a German submarine yesterday off Fastnet, Ireland. Some of her crew were landed at Baltimore yesterday.

Rome, July 1.—Today's Italian war statement says: "Continued unfavorable weather has imposed new obstacles which our troops surmount with unchangeable tenacity. In the mountainous part of the theatre of operations fog caused a slackening of artillery action. Actions favorable to us have occurred in Val Chiese Manazzo, in Vel D Assa."

Vienna, July 1.—The following announcement was made today: "The wharf at Belgrade was bombarded on Wednesday by an air squadron. The camp at Orasac was bombarded with excellent results."

Paris, July 1.—Today's French war statement says: "The night was quiet in the north, in the region of Arras and as far as Champagne. The German attack in the Argonne reported yesterday as particularly violent. The forces engaged were estimated at two divisions. An attack was broken up. Two new attacks on our trenches east of Bernarville were repulsed. Another violent attack made by the enemy in the region of Metzeral was completely checked. The Germans suffered heavy losses."

Petrograd, July 1.—The Russian war statement issued today says: "There has been a lull in the Shavli region on the Niemen and Narew fronts and on the left bank of the Vistula. The enemy offensive between the Vieprz and the Bug on the Zandstie-Sokolka front continues. On the western Bug and on the Gnila Lipa on the 28th and 29th we successfully repelled enemy attacks. Noticing the enemy crossing the Dniester near Halicz we took the offensive and drove him back, making hundreds of prisoners."

NAMED AN ASSEMBLYMAN.

Former Assemblyman Sydney Clinton Crane, of New York city, was on Tuesday named as assemblyman in the Twenty-third District to succeed Assemblyman Boschen, who has just been made assistant superintendent of public works. Mr. Crane is the son of Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Crane, of this city, and a brother to Robert Newton Crane, the well-known local attorney. He was born and formerly lived in Plainfield.

CRESCENT AVENUE SERVICES.

There will be prayer meeting at the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church on Wednesday night, July 7, and beginning on Sunday and continuing for the rest of the summer there will be but one service on Sunday at the church, that being at 10:30 o'clock in the morning. Rev. Dr. J. S. Zelie will leave about July 12 for Maine, where he will spend his vacation.

JUDGE CAMPBELL FAVORS SUFFRAGE FOR WOMEN

Judge David S. Campbell, borough recorder, yesterday afternoon declared himself as being unreservedly in favor of the right of suffrage for women, the Judge being led to make the announcement by a representative of this paper while the organization of the local Suffrage League was being discussed. He is of the opinion that as long as ninety per cent. of the women of the great Commonwealth desire the privilege to cast the ballot, they should receive such a right at the hands of the present voters, and not be held up because the remaining ten per cent. are opposed.

"Let those opposed," said the Judge, "stay away from the polls if they so desire, as is the case with those men who cannot see their duty in visiting the polling places once or twice a year, but by no means deprive those patriotic citizens who will not side-step the burdens of their country of the divine right to express themselves at the ballot box."

FREQUENT SOUNDING OF BELL ANNOYS RESIDENTS

Many complaints are being heard against the bell located at the Chestnut street crossing of the Central Railroad. The sounding of this bell may be heard for half a mile in any direction and its almost continuous ringing has become an annoyance to many residents in the immediate vicinity, and more so when a long freight train passes that point. A petition is to be circulated by the residents of the locality and directed to the officials of the road so as to ascertain as to whether some other means may not be used for protecting life and property at this crossing.

ANTI-SALOON SERVICE.

Rev. Dr. E. J. Richardson, an Ohio preacher, has been announced as the speaker for the union service to be held at 7:30 Sunday evening, at the First Presbyterian church. The service will be under the direction of the New Jersey Anti-Saloon League. A large gathering is expected.

EQUAL SUFFRAGE MEETING.

The home of Mrs. E. F. Feickert this afternoon will be the scene of the organization of the Dunellen Equal Suffrage League. Officers will be elected and the charter roll closed, while a tentative set of by-laws will be drawn up.

FIRST EXCURSION.

The Methodist church, of Dunellen, will be included with the Sunday-schools of Plainfield who are to take the trip to Asbury Park on Thursday of next week. The trains will leave the Dunellen station at 8:04. A large number of boroughites are expected to take in the event.

PERSONAL MENTION.

Miss Lulia Stites, daughter of Collector and Mrs. Isaac J. Stites, is spending the week visiting an aunt at Pleasant Point, Staten Island.

Wesley Hughes, of Greenbrook road, has accepted a position at the office of the Pond Machine Tool Company.

The Marlow house on Dunellen avenue is being treated this week to a new coat of paint.

A. F. Basten and family, of Plainfield, are today moving into one of the modern bungalows on Fourth street, the borough. Mr. Basten is an employe of the Saurer plant of the International Motor Company, of Plainfield.

Miss Cora Gray is entertaining a cousin from the Bronx, this week.

Mr. and Mrs. Elwood Gary and family have been visiting Mr. Gary's brother, Fred Gary, of Stewartsville. Mr. and Mrs. Gary will move the latter part of this week from their home on Second street to another on Dunellen avenue.

The funeral services of Mrs. Michael Boyle, of South avenue, who died Tuesday afternoon after a long illness, will be held from St. John's Catholic church tomorrow morning at 9 o'clock, when a solemn high mass of requiem will be celebrated. The service will be in charge of Rev. Father Dunphy. The interment will be at St. Mary's cemetery, Plainfield.

Postmaster Henry S. Garretson left this morning for New York, where he will enter the Ear and Eye Infirmary to undergo a minor operation for a cateract on his right eye. Mr. Garretson will probably remain at the institution for the next week.

ANTI-SUFFRAGE MEETING.

The local Anti-Suffragists have made arrangements to present their side of the present political agitation to the men of the borough at the September meeting of the Board of Trade. The Suffragists presented their side of the question at the June meeting of the civic organization, and the opposition is now desirous that the other side be granted a similar privilege, in order that he voters may know how they feel about the proposition, before the matter comes to a vote next fall.

Work on the excavation of the cellar for the new edifice of St. John's church is now well underway, from 75 to 100 men of the parish reporting each evening to accomplish the work. By this method of doing the work, the church will be able to save in the neighborhood of $400.

Work is finished on the lowering of the culvert on Russell road, an improvement authorized at the last session of the Union County Board of Freeholders. It makes a difference of about ten inches and now affords better drainage to that section of the borough.

One more officer has been added to the executive board of the local Rifle Club. Bradley Barrett was elected vice-president at the last meeting. This was done partly to make certain that at least one officer would be in charge of every meeting, heretofore the president and secretary having been absent on several occasions.

The Rev. J. Madison Hare, pastor of the Baptist church, and Mrs. Hare will return tomorrow from Pocono Pines, Monroe county, Pa., where they have been spending the past two weeks. On his return Mr. Hare will have an announcement as to the speaker he has secured for the community picnic.

Philip Van Arsdale, of the Valley road, is reported at Muhlenberg Hospital as slowly recovering from the broken collarbone and numerous other minor injuries which he sustained in a fall from his bicycle in coming down the mountain last week. John Meggy and Benjamin Elliott, the other two local people who are at present inmates at that institution, are also slowly recovering, the former from appendicitis and Mr. Elliott from an operation for stomach trouble.

Definite announcement has now been made that the union services under the auspices of the Anti-Saloon League of America will be held, the weather permitting, on the lawns surrounding the Baptist church on Sunday afternoon.

The weekly meetinf of the Lend-a-hand Society will be held in the parlors of the Baptist church tomorrow afternoon.

There will be no meeting of the Borough Council until after the Fourth of July celebration is over and if any extra marshals are appointed for that day it will be in the hands of the police committee. It has not heretofore been deemed necessary to make any appointments and will probably not be this year. The same problem in the 'Plains will likely be taken care of at a meeting of the Township Committee tomorrow night. As it is there is none on duty in the township now. There has only been one occasion when one was needed during the two months that the position has been vacant and that was last Sunday night when "a character about town" had taken to freely of the cup that cheers and became abusive to passersby on Park avenue. Ira G. Walker, president of the Township Committee, happened to be passing, and cloaked in his official office, took the fellow to the jail for a night's lodging.

A scul tfor $100 in tort was instituted in the district court at Plainfield yesterday, Judge Hetfield presiding, by John Kandelky against Benjamin Elliott, Jr., both of Scotch Plains. Kandelky aleges that he was sold a horse by Elliott some two months ago under false pretenses. The horse was returned to Elliott a short time tgo, and, after ailing for several days with an illness unexplained by veternarys, was reported dead. Elliott claims he never owned the animal, but sold for a friend. The case was postponed until July 17.

AUTO AND MOTORCYCLE COLLIDE ON PARK AVENUE

While driving an automobile south on Park avenue at 8 o'clock this morning, Ellsworth Kockersperger, of Doylestown, Pa., swerved suddenly into East Second street, running his car directly in front of a motorcycle driven by Charles Perry, of 935 West Front street. The vehicles came together with a terrific impact and both were badly damaged.

Lieut. Maurice Higgins, who happened along at the time, brought both parties to police headquarters. According to Higgins the Doylestown man was at fault, as he neglected the traffic post regulations at this juncture of Second street and Park avenue. Upon his agreement to pay for the damange done to the motorcycle, Rockersperger was allowed to go. George Lung, who was riding on the rear seat of the motorcycle, was the only one who sustained an injury, and his was of a minor nature.

A Galley o' Fun!

The clerk called to another in the back of the store, who came forward. To the other he said: "Say, Bill, do you know of a book called Cornatine by a fellow named Cobb?"

"What's that?" he asked in surprise.

"I'm afraid you've made a mistake," said the new arrival with a twinkle. "Cobb's Cornatine is a new breakfast food."

"Ah, now I see why the grocer didn't understand me when I asked him for a package of Queed," remarked the customer in manifest relief.

THE HEIGHT OF INDIFFERENCE.

PROBABLY.

Sally Gay—I have just been reading that a well-known scientist predicts that man will reach a condition where he will be toothless and hairless and walk on all fours.

Jack Swift—And will woman continue to pursue what is left of him with the same avidity as of yore?

Little Minnie—Oh, Mama, what's that dreadful noise?

ABOUT A WOMAN.

Mr. Gudeman—Little boys should be tight. Won't you let me help you out?

Muggsy—Sure! As dis is going to be fer blood, you might stand over dere and catch de lady in case she swoons!

PROPER SPIRIT.

"Do you really think it necessary to give Mrs. Bigwad anything on her birthday?"

"Yes, Harold, we really must. She remembered all our children at Christmas, and now the least we can do is to retaliate."

TOO OFTEN FOOLED.

In the ancient fable it was a man who cried, "Wolf! Wolf!" when there was no wolf, and who, having so deceived his neighbors, was left by them to be devoured when the wolf came indeed.

Now, however, it was a woman shrieking as in agony. Her neighbors ran in. But she was not in distress—only rehearsing her part in the opera. More than once it came out thus. Then a burglar entered the woman's house and threatened her life.

"Help! Murder!" she screamed.

"It is some new thing by Strauss or Debussy!" observed the neighbors and never lifted a hand.

MY PIPE AND I.

Oft in the restful twilight,
In smoke-wreaths' curling whim,
We try to read old memories—
Old friendships past and dim—
My pipe and I.

Soft, in a hazy background,
In tender, mellow glow,
Some lines of loves and faces
That dare we none should know
But pipe and I

Sweet, as in yore and willing,
Those lips seem near our own—
As once still yearning, smiling—
Nay, even warmer grown
To pipe and I.

Thrills more the dear temptation
Anticipation's hope—
Through eyes half closed in dreaming
To joy old-time we grope,
The pipe and I.

Yea, with my pipe conjuring,
The past is ever mine;
Its wealth not lost, but added,
When in the dusk recline
My pipe and I.

EXHIBIT SHETLAND PONY AT PROCTOR'S

One of the Three to Be Given in the Contest Admired by Young and Old.

The patrons of Proctor's Theatre yesterday afternoon and evening, had an opportunity to see one of the registered Shetland ponies that the merchants of Plainfield are giving away. The management of the theatre made arrangements with the McKeon Pony concern to exhibit one of the prizes on the stage. The boys and girls enjoyed the novel sight and showed their approval with hearty applause when the little beauty pranced about on the stage. If the fathers and mothers want to please their children they will enroll them in the contest and assist them in securing one of the ponies. Three will be awarded and by concentrating your trade at the merchants' stores whose names appear below it will be an easy matter to win one of them. The Plainfield Daily Press is a subscriber in the contest and will give on every dollar paid 2,000 votes; Proctor's Theatre is the only theatre giving the votes in the McKeon Three Pony contest. Each yellow cash sales ticket marked ten entitle you to one hundred votes.

Below you will note the list of merchants who give the cash sales voting tickets with each ten-cent purchase: Proctor's Theatre; Leo Zeisei, 222 West Front street; Alprin & Miller, grocers, 330 Plainfield avenue; Olson & Givins, grocers, 222 East Front street; W. M. Walsh, druggist, 211 North avenue; Harry Werner, clothing, 214 West Front street; W. W. Warnock, baker, 237 West Front street; Carl Silbert, jeweler, 255 West Front street; F. M. Wagner, 121 North avenue and 251 West Front street; Consumers Coal Company, 225 Madison avenue; L. B. Van Camp, furniture, Front and Somerset streets; A. Baum, cleaner and dyer, 143 East Fifth street.

The attention of contestants is called to the fact that Kornfield bread wrappers are valuable and can be exchanged for votes. Tops of Colonial cake boxes count for votes. Save them.

RELIGIOUS FERVOR MARKS BAPTIST PRAYER MEETING

One of the most remarkable meetings yet held during the present pastorate occurred last evening at the First Baptist church. The service was of the olden type both as to singing and testimony, and a spirit of religious fervor characterized the gathering from commencement to conclusion, the interest at times being intense. From the youngest members to the very oldest there was a constant tide of participation, leaving not a moment's pause for over an hour.

Nine were baptized; two received by letter; one, previously a member elsewhere, upon her experience, and still another presented herself for baptism at a later date. It was unanimously voted to endorse and in every way support the proposed union evangelistic meetings planned for the future, and it was further voted to send the pastor, Dr. Philip B. Strong, to the National Anti-Saloon League convention next week at Atlantic City, paying his expenses.

U. S. ASTOR THEATRE

Wallace Eddinger, breezy juvenile of the legitimate stage who attained high distinction last season by his clever work in George M. Cohan's "Seven Keys to Baldpate," will appear again at the U. S. Astor Theatre today in "The Gentleman of Leisure," a roaring comedy in which Douglass Fairbanks created the title role two years ago.

The similarity of Mr. Eddinger and Fairbanks becomes more evident than ever in this film. Their work is much the same in every phase of the character. In fact, it has been said that Eddinger does even better work in the screen version of this laugh-stimulating photo-play. It will be a delightful opportunity for Plainfield admirers of "Wally" Eddinger to see him at the pinnacle of his dramatic form.

The story of "The Gentleman of Leisure" is simple. It is interesting and it is humorous, and the humor is of the better sort. There is none of the slap-stick variety. Mr. Eddinger indulges in no Chaplinisms. The photo-play will appeal to the most discriminating theatregoer in town.

Aside from the humorous quality of the story, there are several scenes which lift the veil on the manner in which the police officers are bribed. And this prompts the announcement that George Fawcett, also well-known as a legitimate actor, will portray the character of the police commissioner.

Last night and yesterday afternoon big audiences greeted this splendid subject with every symptom of gratification. It made a bully evening's entertainment.

"Rule G" will be tomorrow's photo play feature at the Astor. It is safe to say that this is one of the biggest film productions ever exhibited in Union county. It is in line with the high-grade quality of pictures recently exhibited at the Astor.

Frank G. Hall, proprietor of the Astor Theatre announced today that he has secured exclusive rights to show first in Plainfield the big feature releases of the Paramount Picture Corporation and the V. L. S. E. which comprise the "big time" of the picture world. A splendid program of such features are booked for the summer. Mary Pickford, Marguerite Clark, Hazel Dawn, Jack Barrymore and others who are prime favorites among Plainfield folk will appear at the Astor in photo features at early dates.

PROCTOR'S THEATRE

Dustin Farnum will this evening give a screen interpretation of that old favorite play, "Cameo Kirby," at Proctor's Theatre, unraveling the most fascinating of all southern dramatic romances. Mr. Farnum will be ably supported by an all star cast, and life in the old South and on the Mississippi River in the days before the war will be shown in a faithful manner in this interesting photo-play of Paramount production.

Young women who intend entering the Pearl White "make-up" contest at Proctor's Theatre, Monday evening, should attend the shows either tomorrow afternoon or evening, and see their heroine in "The Exploits of Elaine," and "fix up" accordingly. Entries for this contest should be filed at the box-office by Monday noon.

Y. W. C. A. NOTES

Miss Kathryn Aller will lead the Bible class study tonight. Each girl is to bring her supper with her at 5:30, and then all will go to the residence of Mrs. Frederick Mead on East Front street. Supper will be eaten in her gardens and the Bible study will be conducted in the open air.

The regular weekly meeting of the orchestra club will be held at the association Saturday night. All interested are invited to come.

The regular Saturday night supper for business girls of the city will be served at 6:30 Saturday night on the large piazza in the rear of the association.

JOURNALISTIC OPINIONS

There is nothing to hinder putting out the flag on Sunday next. In fact there is every good reason why the Stars and Stripes should be displayed on that day, not only at the top of every staff, but from every point where the banner is customary flung to the breeze. The noise, the parade, the display, the eloquence, the officially planned fireworks and all the other paraphernalia of celebration are put off until Monday, out of respect for the religious sentiment which holds Sunday to be a sacred day and because the law provides for just this emergency. But flinging the flag to the breeze is not a desecration of the day. It is mingling patrotic sentiment with the deepest and most profound convictions of the human soul. The flag will be displayed on Sunday next from many of the church steeples. It will adorn many pulpits and will be the theme of many discourses. It will be eminently fitting, therefore, that the flag should wave all day Sunday, and on Monday it may be again displayed, making two days of patriotic inspirtion from its beautiful colors and uplifting suggestions.—Newark News.

RECEIVE 300 ENTRIES FOR CRANFORD CARNIVAL

Everything is in readiness for the Children's Carnival to be held at Cranford starting at 2 o'clock on the afternoon of July 5. There are about 300 entries from all over Union county in the ten classes, for which twenty silver cups are offered as prizes. Various organizations have constructed floats; the queen and her attendants will be gorgeously arrayed, and scores of children in original costumes, decorated automobiles and children's vehicles will be among the competitors.

From reports received from all over New Jersey, Manhattan and Brooklyn, there will be many parties of motorists among the spectators. If the weather should be unfavorable the carnival will be held on the afternoon of Saturday, July 10.

The queen will be crowned with elaborate ceremonies on Saturday evening of this week at the Cranford Theatre and the queen's ball will follow in the Cleveland School. After the parade there will be patriotic exercises in the Cranford Park and the awarding of the prizes.

The entire business section of Cranford is already in festive dress, and by Saturday all of the stores and residences will be draped and festooned.

SWIMMING IS POPULAR.

The invitation of the Recreation Committee to come to the High School and enter in the various events scheduled for Wednesday nights met with a generous response last night, fully fifty young women of the city and borough enjoying the various recreations. Swimming is particularly popular with all and beside the aquatic portion of the program for the evening many enjoyed playing basketball, tennis and dancing.

ANNUAL CAMP-FIRE.

The annual camp-fire of the Men's Conference Bible class, of the First Baptist church, will be held on the mountainside at Interhaven avenue and Grove street (Keller's Grove), tonight at 6:30 o'clock. All members of the class are urged to bring a friend as a guest.

JULY 1ST IN HISTORY.

1520—Cortez, retreating from Mexico City, was harrassed by natives, his treasures and manuscripts destroyed and his attendants were massacred.

1582—James Crichton, "The Admirable Crichton," assassinated. He was a native of Scotland and an extraordinary character in history.

1690—Battle of the Boyne, in Ireland, which decided the fate of the Stuart dynasty in England and placed William III on the throne.

1863—Beginning of the three days' battle of Gettysburg.

1914—The A. B. C. conference at Niagara Falls, designed to make peace in Mexico, came to an end without result.

Plainfield, N. J., July 1, 1915.

All enumerations of State census canvasses must be turned over to the State Bureau today, but as yet Plainfielders have been unable to get any information as to the number of people living within our boundaries. It has been variously estimated between twenty-four and twenty-seven thousand and indications do not point to any remarkable increase over the compilation of 1910. When the Federal authorities took the census five years ago it was thought on every side that the canvas was not a thorough one and certain Plainfielders still believe that this was the case. It is rumored, however, that the results of the State census this year will allay the fear that the census takers in 1910 did not get all the names available as the increase will not be as high as would warrant charges of laxity on the part of the previous enumerators. Supervisor P. J. Reville and his corps of assistants have conducted an unusually thorough campaign this year and it is safe to conclude that the figures are as nearly right as could be obtained. The fact that no arrests have been made in Plainfield is largely due to the manner in which the compilation was supervised, the leader always taking an active interest in the tours made by his enumerators and making a number of personal visits to force balky individuals to give out the expected information.

Inquiries coming to the Daily Press during the hours preceding holidays indicate that few persons know how to hang a flag properly. Observation made on Decoration Day carries out the opinion that the citizens at large either neglect to hang their flags properly or do not know how. A few suggestions might be appropriate at this time with the Fourth of July so near at hand. No flag should be left hanging after sunset. The blue field and stars should be to the hanger's left as one looks from the balcony from which he is hanging it and to the right of anyone looking from the street toward the house. This rule applies whether the flag is hung horizontally or vertically.

Frequently one hears expression of loyalty to country in one form or another, but the resident of North Plainfield, who celebrated his wedding anniversary this week, and who happened to be a native of England, expressed himself in a way that calls for admiration. He said that he thought America was the finest country in the world and that Plainfield was the best place in which to live and if he was to be born again and had anything to say about it the United States would be the land of his birth.

Now that the Playground Commission has secured the desired amount to properly celebrate Independence Day in a "safe and sane" way at Parker Field, it is hoped that the many friends of the Day Nursery, which is conducted by the City Union of King's Daughters, will not be overlooked. That worthy charity is in need of funds with which to carry on its noble work. Any contribution no matter how small will be acceptable. Who will be the first to send in a contribution.

There is a rumor that the Common Council is thinking seriously of making a contract with the Plainfield-Union Water Supply Co. Inasmuch as the city has had no contract with the water company for a year or more there are some people who believe that it would be good business policy for the Council to make some sort of an agreement with the company.

In these days of general complaint about the high cost of living, high taxes, etc., all thoughts of a city hall for Plainfield have been forgotten. One of these days the Common Council will awaken to the fact that all the city offices under one roof in a building owned by the city is cheaper in the long run than paying rent.

It is most fitting that the cornerstone for Plainfield's new postoffice should be laid by the Masons, and the presence here of the Grand Lodge of New Jersey would be both impressive and interesting on such an unusual occasion.

The City Amateur Baseball League has already proved itself to be a pretty healthy youngster and the teams that are striving to promote interest in the national game deserve encouragement and support.

THE FORUM

Editor Plainfield Daily Press:

The New York papers and our local papers report the unpardonable riot which occurred in this city Monday night, when a religious tent meeting was broken up, property damaged or destroyed and the lives of citizens endangered by a mob of hoodlums. This in spite of the fact that the police station was within a few hundred yards of the meeting place. How does it happen that only Officer Brower was available?

As a taxpayer and resicent of this city I wish to protest most energetically against such a condition as occurred and to demand immediate investigation by the city authorities. I feel that Mayor Calkins should at once offer the apologies of the city to the revivalists together with a guarantee of protection and a request that they return to the city to continue their efforts under the guarantee. The respectable citizens of Plainfield have no sympathy with nor will they tolerate mob tactics whether they be directed against a religious sect or individuals. The right to express an opinion is guaranteed to us all under the constitution and the city authorities will be held responsible by the citizens.

I trust that you will take a positive position in this matter and give the matter all possible publicity.

The Work of the Plainfield Board of Health

By Benjamin Rosenson.

Essay submitted in competition for the Daily Press prize at the Plainfield High School.

Perhaps the most important department of the City Government is the Board of Health. There is no phase of the city government where co-operation of the people counts for so much as the work of the Health Department. Health is one of the first necessities of life and when one is healthy he can live happily. The object of this Board is to preserve health and incidentally happiness.

Dr. T. S. Davis, president, an old-established and leading physician.

Dr. H. D. Corbusier, secretary, a leading physician and an expert in sanitation.

S. H. Voorhees, treasurer, representative of the Royal Bank of Canada.

E. T. Barrows, broker and ex-member of the Common Council.

I. L. McVoy, an expert plumber.

Eight people are now employed by the Board. They are N. J. R. Chandler, health officer, who has charge of all inspections, contagious diseases and milk supply; Miss Harriet C. Mattison, assistant health officer and registrar of vital statistics; H. Case, inspector; John J. Casey, inspector; Miss Elizabeth Rosenson, stenographer and deputy Reg. V. S.; Mrs. Howard W. Boise, bacteriologist, and Dr. J. H. Carman, medical inspector.

The office, located on the third floor of the City National Bank building, consists of three offices equipped with all modern improvements and a fine modern laboratory, where all examinations of cultures of contagious diseases and inspection of milk are carried on. Reports are sent to Washington every week and to the State Board of Health of all communicable diseases once a week and returns of all vital statistics are made to the State Bureau before the tenth of each month.

The laboratory has lately been enlarged so as to increase its efficiency. All diagnostic work and preparation of outfits and examinations of specimens are carried on in this laboratory by experienced employes.

Every effort is being made to prevent diseases and one of the most important of these is the pure food law. Inspections are made at short intervals of milk, water, ice, ice cream and all other food. Bakeries, restaurants, grocery stores, fish markets, candy shops, soda water fountains, friut stores and stands are compelled to keep their goods covered so that flies cannot get at them.

This year the list of communicable disease has been less than ever before and fewer deaths have resulted on account of the excellent prevention taken by the Board of Health. Diphtheria, typhoid fever, tuberculosis, measles, and whooping cough are the diseases the Board thought it advisable to placard all premises where such cases existed. As a result of this action the number of cases has been almost cut in two. The reports of the above diseases are received through the physician under whose care the patient is and in this way the Board gets the report as soon as the disease is discovered and can immediately take preventive measures so that it will not spread.

The ice supply has always been of the highest grade and our four sources of ice are under strict guidance of the Health Department at all times. The Health Officer inspects the ponds, analyzes the ice and investigates the source every season.

All the vital statistics are taken care of by the registrars. Five hundred and sixty-nine births were recorded during 1914, one hundred and ninety-two marriages, two hundred and ninety-four deaths, and many other matters of importance. The statistics are filed and kept for future use. Many inquiries were made last year for marriage, birth and death certificates on account of the Widows' Pension Law. Burial permits and marriage licenses are also filed and kept for future use. A weekly report of the deaths and births are sent to Washington.

Permits and licenses are also issued by this department. Ice and milk permits are two of the most important ones that are issued. Permits are issued for plumbing, keeping of poultry, goats, rabbits, etc., to collect garbage, offal and dead animals and to maintain privy vaults. Inspection of stores, premises, wagons, outfits, etc., are made regularly and if regulations are not complied with licenses and permits are not given to such offenders.

Stables are inspected regularly and manure pits must be kept covered so that flies cannot breed in them. Tuberculosis, dysentery and typhoid fever result largely from flies which are only too often bred in manure piles. Fines are imposed upon offenders of the manure ordinance.

To prevent any possible spread of disease by circuses and carnivals, etc., all persons connected with such shows are examined before they are allowed to enter the city.

Sanitary plumbing is very important to health and in order to make sure that all plumbing is done properly the department employs a plumbing inspector, licenses plumbers, requires a plan of plumbing system, issues permits for said systems, makes careful tests, inspections, etc., and issues certificates on completed work.

Disinfection is another important phase of the Health Department and this work was carried on to a great extent last year. Disinfection is performed before quarantine is raised, after a contagious disease, after death or removal of patients suffering from tuberculosis, hospital wards, rummage sales and on request of the householders.

Every spring a week is taken for a general clean-up and inspection of the entire city is made.

Every prevention of breeding places for flies and mosquitoes are made and all food-stuffs are compelled to be covered by a screen or netting. Privy vaults are abolished and garbage is disposed of by the proper licensed carriers.

The most important work of this department is the inspection of milk. Milk is one of the troublesome carriers of disease if the proper precautions are not taken. Many young babies die on account of diseased milk. To make our supply as pure as possible the health inspector makes a weekly inspection of dairies, creameries, bottling places, stores, wagons, cans and bottles. Milk is analyzed regularly and every dealer in the city must have a license. A certain percentage of fats and solids must be contained in the milk before it is allowed to be sold. A system of grading milk is being considered and reports are sent to the dealers.

The excellent work of this Board has only been possible by the co-operation of the people.

One of the greatest handicaps of this department is the lack of a municipal garbage system. The present system is inadequate, being taken care of by private individuals, who are licensed to collect the garbage and the poor who often cannot afford to have it taken away make such disposal as they can. A municipal system would greatly increase the work of this department and the health of the city.

Most of my information was gotten from the monthly reports of the Health Department and from members of the department. Some of it was gotten from practical experience.

BECKER GETS REPRIEVE; CASE TO U. S. SUPREME COURT

Albany, N. Y., July 1—Attorney Martin T. Manton, counsel for Charles Becker, announced today that Governor Whitman had granted Becker a reprieve until July 26. The lawyer conferred with the Governor about an hour today. He then said: "I have little doubt that the case will go to the Supreme Court of the United States."

PERSONAL.

Frank Hart, of West Fifth street, has returned home after spending his vacation in Asbury Park.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold N. Underhill, of 11 Rockview avenue, are stopping at the Knickerbocker Hotel in New York city, having made the journey there by automobile.

Now Comes a Trunk Sale

Just in the nick of time when you are about going away on your vacation, comes a sale of trunks on which we save you a ten dollar bill.

REGULAR 35.00
KEYSTONE WARDROBE TRUNKS
For 25.00

How do we do it? Well, the manufacturers of these famous trunks, Messrs. Ragnow & Hall, of Philadelphia, were overstocked owing to the falling off in European travel and we secured a big lot of their wardrobe trunks for our various stores at such a low price so that we can offer them at $25 instead of $35—that's the story. Now as to the trunks, Keystone Wardrobe Trunks are built of 3-ply basswood veneer, covered with vulcanized fibre, painted with best quality oil paint and finished with two coats of weather proof Spar Varnish. All thoroughly riveted with cement coated wire nails which do not rust. The carrier rods are of cold roll steel, triple nickel plated. The garment carriers are made of 5-ply laminated white maple. The drawers are built of air dried mountain basswood, table jointed, all carefully fitted, nailed and lined. We could go on filling a whole page telling you of the goodness of Keystone Wardrobe Trunks, but here's the keynote of the whole story. Keystone Wardrobe Trunks are built by well trained experienced workmen, receiving a weekly wage (not piece work) for their labor, which in itself is a guarantee of the quality, style and finish of the trunks.

We cordially invite your inspection of these trunks.

In addition to the above offering we have unusual values in

O'SULLIVAN WOULD BE A POLICE CHIEF

Plainfield Copper Resigns to Enlist Services in Scotch Plains' Cause.

After being on its honor to keep the peace for over a month Scotch Plains, beginning July 4, will have a police force. Such was the announcement forthcoming from a responsible source this afternoon. It was further learned that the "force" will be none other than one of Plainfield's "finest," Florence O'Sullivan, who has turned in his helmet and shield to accept the responsibilities in store for him in helping to boost the morals of the little suburb.

Until about a month ago Scotch Plains had as its protector one "Bill" Ashton, who also haled from Plainfield soil. "Bill's" downfall and subsequent retirement led to a search for a new minion of the law to be chief of police and other officers in the Scotch Plains' ranking, and the committee finally selected the Plainfield bluecoat as their "victim."

All that is required of O'Sullivan in his new position is to keep awake on his beat, shun "bottle" parties and become socially acquainted in the little hamlet. Ashton met his Waterloo when, it is said, he was discovered partaking of the amber fluid in the rear of the Baptist church, one night following a service in the edifice. Shortly afterward his retirement was announced and up to this time the place has been "unpoliced."

RE-APPOINTED MEMBERS OF COUNTY ELECTION BOARDS

State House, Trenton, July 1—George Stewart, of Elizabeth, a Republican, was re-appointed today by Governor Fielder to the Union County Board of Elections, after having been nominated by Republican Chairman Bugbee. Joseph M Lambrusklin, of Somerville, Republican, was re-appointed to the Somerset County Election Board.

WHEN GOING AWAY DO NOT LEAVE PETS UNCARED FOR

Mrs. Stephen G. VanHoesen, local agent for the S. P. C. A., announced this morning that a vigorous campaign is under way against owners of dogs, cats and other animals who in the past have made it a practice to go away for the summer and leave their animals uncared for.

Where offenses of this kind are committed arrests will be made upon the return of the guilty parties to Plainfield and the agent intends to make examples of certain parties who have continually violated the law in this respect.

LOVE TRAINING CLASS GUESTS AT LAWN PARTY

A delightful lawn party was tendered the Love training class of the First Baptist church Bible school by the teacher training class of the church at the home of Miss Corinne Tennyson, 612 Madison avenue, Tuesday evening, to mark the close of the season's work of both classes. The lawn was prettily decorated and lighted with Japanese lanterns and many novel and interesting games were enjoyed by the young people who were present, about twenty-five in number, after which refreshments were served.

Both classes are under the leadership of Mrs. Robert Love and are doing excellent work. The teacher training class, which was organized in the fall of 1912 has about completed the course prescribed by the National Teacher Training Institute, covering a study of the Bible, the early church, the Sunday-school, missions and psychology, pedagogy and child study. Nearly all of its members are now teaching.

The Love training class has just begun the course, having been organized this spring, but several of its members are substitute teachers, while many of both classes are actively engaged in other lines of Christian service in the First Baptist church as well as in other schools.

BANQUET FOR TUTTLE.

Former Congressman William E. Tuttle, of Westfield, will be the guest of honor at a Union county Democratic gathering in Elizabeth, Thursday evening, July 8, in St. Michael's Hall. The affair is being conducted under the auspices of the County Democratic Committee and the Elizabeth Democratic Club, and will be featured by a banquet at which many prominent men of this party will be speakers.

POLICE SWORN IN.

Maurice Higgins, Andrew Saffron, Charles J. Flynn and Dennis O'Keefe, the police officers affected by the ordinance recently passed by the Common Council, were sworn in to their new duties last night. Higgins assumes the title of lieutenant and Flynn and Saffron, who were formerly known as roundsmen, will in the future be sergeants. O'Keefe has been promoted from patrolman to sergeant.

MRS. F. F. SQUIER DIES AFTER A LONG ILLNESS

The funeral of Mrs. Amanda Grace Squier, wife of F. F. Squier, will be held at the late home, 36 Grandview avenue at 10 o'clock tomorrow morning. Rev. Dr. C. M. Anderson, of the First M. E. church, of which Mrs. Squier was a member, will officiate. The burial will be at Staten Island.

Mrs. Squier was formerly of Bayonne and at the time Dr. Anderson was pastor of the Methodist church, that place, Mrs. Squier was a member. She had lived in the borough about a year. Her death was due to complications. There survives a husband and one son.

"Every ingredient used in the brewing of PRIVATE SEAL Beer is subjected to the closest scientific scrutiny in order to eliminate all possible chance of any impurity."

PRIVATE SEAL

The Brew for You

Every aid that science has supplied to safeguard the brewing of pure beer is found in the equipment of the Feigenspan Brewery—the most rigid censorship is exercised in passing every ingredient used, and in the operation of brewing and bottling.

PRIVATE SEAL is the Beer for family use—the minimum of alcohol with the maximum of refreshing, healthful tonic qualities.

PLAINFIELD'S OPEN TENNIS TITLE MEETING

Competition Will Begin at the Country Club Monday Afternoon.

The annual Plainfield open tennis championship will be decided on the courts of the Plainfield Country Club in competition, beginning Monday morning. The event is open to all players residing in Plainfield and North Plainfield, and entries may be sent to S. W. Merriaew, 1016 South avenue, or to any member of the tennis committee, or to the superintendent at the Plainfield Country Club up to 9:30 a. m. Monday, July 5.

Play will begin at 10 o'clock Monday morning and will continue throughout the day. The final round will be played Saturday morning, July 10.

FORMER LOCAL TEACHER ON DELAWARE RIVER CIRCUIT

Reports received from the Delaware River League circuit, in which he is now enrolled, indicate that Carl Johnson, formerly head of the manual training department in the Washington School, has had his ups and downs since entering professional baseball. He resigned his position with the Plainfield Board of Education to join the Jersey City team in the International League. On the training trip he went "great guns," but soon after the team arrived on home ground his hitting and fielding dropped off perceptibly and he was used in only a few games before being released. He gave great promise as a catcher when first signed, his records around this section where he played semi-professional ball, speaking wonders for his ability.

Johnson comes from Hopewell and this season decided to cast his lot with the "Reds." He has been doing the receiving for this outfit since the "regular" catcher was injured several weeks ago. Reports from the league circuit say that he has been going great behind the bat and his pegging to second has been one of the features of the "Reds" playing. His hitting has also been all that could be asked for.

LELAND STAMFORD SHELL STRANDED AFTER CONTEST

Poughkeepsie, July 1—When Leland Stanford Junior University's crew, which finished second to Cornell in the 'Varsity four-mile race and made history here Monday, left Highland for a sightseeing trip in the East before returning to the Pacific coast, the shell was stowed away in the Columbia University boathouse. The shell, it was expected, would remain there until Stanford University raised money sufficient to pay its shipping expenses back to the Pacific coast.

Last night a committee headed by Mayor D. W. Wilbur was formed and work has already been started in raising the necessary money to insure the boat's shipment to the coast.

Although the athletic association of the college paid the traveling expenses of the oarsmen to Poughkeepsie, the individual members of the crew had to pay their own money for board while here.

RAIN STOPS RACES AGAIN.

Though Frank Kramer defeated Alfred Goullett in another heat of their match brought over from Sunday, last night at the Newark Velodrome, the management has carried the affair over until tonight, last night's contests being abandoned because of rain a half hour or so after they had been inaugurated. It was announced, after Sunday's meet had been shortened because of the rain, that the heat which Kramer won from Goullett on Sunday would count and that, if he won another heat last night, the match would be considered as closed. Before last night's meet was started, however, it was declared that the match would be re-opened and that two heats out of three would determine a winner. After the rain came last night the announcement was made that the heat won by Kramer last night would stand and that the match would be resumed tonight, with Kramer credited with one victory.

RECORDS SMASHED.

Indianapolis, July 1—With two Central A. A. U. swimming records smashed in the first day of the world championship meet at Broad Ripple, additional new records were expected yesterday. Art Raithel, the Illinois A. C. star, and J. C. Redmond, of Chicago University, established records in the 50-yard senior event, (24 4-5), and the plunge for distance (78 feet) respectively. For the first time women are competing in the same pool with the men, though in events of their own.

"MET" JUNIOR TITLE RETAINED BY CARTER

Third Consecutive Championship Won by Nassau Boy.

Philip V. G. Carter, of Nassau Country Club, won the junior championship title of the Metropolitan Golf Association for the third successive year when over the links of the Garden City Golf Club, yesterday, in the final of the annual tournament he defeated Reginald M. Lewis, of Wykagyl, 1 up, after an extra hole of play. He won his first title over the links of the Plainfield Country Club.

Although making more slips than is customary with them, the young finalists, both of whom are rated at four strokes on the United States Golf Association handicap list, gave the gallery a great treat. Misplays by Lewis enabled Carter to assume a lead of two holes at the sixth, but this was the only time throughout the match that there was more than a hole between them.

After turning all square the match continued to be evenly contested on the incoming nine holes. Coming to the home green Carter was dormie one, but he threw away the advantage by taking three putts. On the extra hole both played indifferently and Lewis threw away a great chance to prolong the match by missing a two foot putt for a half in 4 after Carter had failed to get his ball down on a holable putt for a 3.

ROYALS WILL USE PLAYGROUND FIELD

Will Play Montclair Y. M. C. A. Aggregation as Holiday Bill.

Manager "Midge" Kline, of the local Royals, stated to a Daily Press reporter this morning that he had received a letter from J. Hervey Doane, stating that the Royals might use Parker Field on Monday upon receipt of the usual rental fee. As stated exclusively in this paper yesterday, Manager Kline has been carrying on personal negotiations with the manager of the Montclair (colored) Y. M. C. A. team, relative to the appearance here of that team on Independence Day.

Kline has interviewed two Newark managers also, as he believes that the Montclair manager's boast that his team is as heavy as any colored aggregation in the East, is, perhaps, a little exaggerated. Furthermore, Kline states that he and another prominent local sportsman are going to travel with their team and will play at home every other Saturday, provided, of course, Parker Field can be obtained for the scene of these encounters. The lineup of the Royals is always an enigma and "Midge" admitted this morning that who his pitcher for Monday will be, he cannot tell. Definite information in regards to the coming Royal-Montclair match will be given out by the parties concerned tomorrow.

SPORT BRIEFS

F. G. Anderson and F. C. Anderson, father and son, win Long Island championship tennis match doubles in two sets.

Billy Roche will be the third man in the ring when Charlie White and Freddie Welsh meet at Brighton Beach on Saturday night.

Newark club of the International League, shifted to Harrisburg for the remainder of the season.

Pitcher Thomas Sheehan, of the Three-Eye League, signs with the Philadelphia Athletics.

Robert R. Rentschler, of Hamilton, Ohio, former Princeton football star, died in a local sanitarium.

Pell and Behr retain the title to the Middle States tennis championship.

Coach Courtney's condition remains unchanged.

John M. Reed, former Holy Cross football star, made professor of physical instruction and director of athletics at Franklin and Marshall College.

Islip Wanderers defeated Islip Rovers in the low goal polo tournament at Islip yesterday afternoon.

Gunboat Smith and Charles Weinert box at Ebbetts Field tonight.

Good Lineup for Representative Aggregation Being Signed up.

The Queen City team, according to Acting Manager "Red" Houston, will play the local Quakers on Crescent Oval, Monday, morning and afternoon. It was originally Houston's intention to have his charges dispose of the Quakers in the morning and the White Sox in the after-lunch melee, but for some reason the White Sox match was cancelled and a second game with the Quakers substituted.

The Queen City boys recently played a four-inning game with Spicers, rain preventing the shop boys from being entirely swamped. By virtue of this short victory the manager of the Queen City crew believes his boys are entitled to a whack at the Highlanders.

The roster of the team shows that several local stars are Queen City ballists. "Kale" Velard does the twirling stunt with Block as the recipient of his benders. Houston handles first, with Joe Paritz at second, and Frank Mullin at short. Another Mullin plays third, having as an understudy, Ray Van Ness. Randolph, Lou Paritz, Zeckendorf and "Big Babe" Gleason tend to the landscape work. Gleason, of course, is a Saurer man, but plays with the Queen City band on Sundays. The team plays only on Sundays and holidays and does not intend entering any of the Parker Field Leagues.

TROUT FISHING IN NORTH PLAINFIELD

If youthful fishermen are seen this week bearing home strings of fine brook trout, it will be because they have discovered the haunts of some of the 1,500 or more beauties Game Warden William Hoblitzell, of Rahway, liberated in Stony brook, North Plainfield, today. A large automobile truck loaded with tank cans of brook trout from the State hatchery at Hackettstown reached the borough today, and over half the load was consigned for Somerset county waters.

The trout ranged in size from six inches in length to more than twenty inches and are said by the warden to be in good biting trim. His only concern is the fear that they will all be hooked before the trout season closes, July 15. Very few people know just the exact spot where the trout were liberated, and Warden Hoblitzell maintained much secrecy about it. W. L. and Albert Smalley, of North Plainfield, and a few others accompanied the truck to the brook and witnessed the transit of the fish from the can tanks to their natural element.

After disposing of his North Plainfield quota of trout, Mr. Hoblitzell journeyed to Summit where the balance of the fish were placed in running water.

PLAINFIELD JUNIORS WON OUT BY A 5 TO 2 COUNT

Parker Field yesterday was the scene of a baseball encounter between the Plainfield Juniors and the Netherwood A. C., the former winning by the score of 5 to 2. Brennan and Kyle formed the Netherwood battery, while Batter and Snyder handled the Junor's end of the battery job. The manager of the winning combination failed to present the full box score, but the score by innings follows:

NEWARK CLUB TRANSFERRED.

After a meeting of the International League at the Hotel Belmont, New York city, yesterday, President Edward G. Barrow announced that it had been decided to transfer the franchise of the Newark club to Harrisburg for the remainder of the season. He said a good offer had been received from W. D. Douglass, who represented a number of prominent business men of that city. The club will play the first game on the Harrisburg grounds with Jersey City tomorrow.

$5,000 IN PRIZES.

The twenty-second annual Monmouth county horse show will be held at West End, Monmouth county, on July 28, 29, 30 and 31. The prize list, will cover sixty classes and cash prizes to the amount of $5,000 will be awarded. The entries, which close on July 17, are expected to total more than five hundred.

MANY TEAMS WILL ENTER BOYS' LEAGUE

Series of Games Scheduled to Be Played on Parker Field.

When the Parker Field Boys' Baseball Leagues begin hostilities on either July 6 or 8, there will be a number of youthful managers on hand, all desirous of entering the names of their teams. The two-time pennant winners, the Laurel A. C., will be on deck and it is likely that Art Kyle, the P. H. S. boy, will handle the reins for this organization during the season. The Red Star A. C., the team that for two years has teased the Laurels all during the league race, has been entered in the Senior League, and will have as its guide, George Jackson, the Quaker lad. It is thought that the Netherwood Fresh Air Camp will enter a team this year, but who will lead this clan is, of course, unknown, as the boys of the team are mostly New York lads. Under the leadership of either Dooley or Walt McCarty, the West End A. C. will enter the fray as members of the Senior League.

St. Mary's Cadets are thinking seriously of placing their team in the field, but they are not fast enough or even large enough to be given a berth in the oldest league. The leading lights of the St. Aloysius Cadets inform us that they might enter the Junior League race, while the Liberty A. C., perhaps, under the guidance of M. A. Roddy, will enter the Middle League.

The Quaker Juniors and the Laramie Parks are two aggregations that are likely to obtain places in the Middle League.

There is also a wild rumor afloat that the Trinity Church team will enter the Senior League, but this has not been confirmed. Up to date only one team has made known its incomplete roster. The Laurels are the ones referred to and the line-up follows: Butler, p or lf; Art Kyle, c, "Kid" Brennan, p or 1b; Trotter, 2b, Frank Mullin, ss; Snyder, 3b, "Gums" Venable, cf; Boos, lf, and "Tut" Luthman, rf.

INFIELD STARS ARE PLENTIFUL

National League Can Boast of Many Great Inner Men.

GOOD OUTFIELDERS SCARCE

Parent Baseball Organization Shy on Suburban Pill Handlers, While the American Is Well Fixed—Wagner, the Veteran, Is Still a Wonder.

Clubs in the National league are shy of star outfielders. There are so few real good ones that one can count them on the fingers of one hand. There are no Ty Cobbs, Tris Speakers or Joe Jacksons, and most of those who are playing regularly are only slightly above the average. The American league has the edge in the outfield department.

Where the National league shines is on the infield positions. Take first base and shortstop. At those places the older major league has the class of the game in Vic Saier of the Cubs, Jake Daubert of the Brooklyn Dodgers, John Miller of the St. Louis Cardinals, Art Fletcher of the Giants, Hans Wagner of the Pirates, Walter Maranville of the Braves, Oliver O'Mara of the Dodgers, Buck Herzog of Cincinnati and Howard Bancroft of the Phillies.

It has been years since the National league has had such great shortstops as it possesses at present. The collection is wonderful and it is difficult to pick the best one of the lot. In fielding they are experts. Fans used to think that Joe Tinker and Mike Doolan were stars in covering ground and in making sensational plays, but those two veterans never had a thing on any of the shortstops on six of the eight clubs.

Hans Wagner, of course, is the veteran of the league, and from what he has shown to date clearly indicates that he is far from a "has been." The National league has recently unearthed more finds for the shortstop position than the American, the latest of whom are Bancroft of the Phillies and O'Mara of the Dodgers. This is Bancroft's first year as a major leaguer, and he has already earned his spurs and placed himself in the class with the leaders. There is not one thing he cannot do on the field. He goes to either side with equal alacrity, comes in like a flash, has a strong arm and touches runners cleverly at second. What is more, he is full of ambition.

O'Mara was a wonderful ground coverer last year and can throw with any infielder in the league, but this season he is not living up to his 1914 performance because of a broken leg at the close of last season. He has not regained his confidence. He favors the leg a little, with the result that he has not been getting about as well, but it is expected he will be back to his true form before long. O'Mara and Bancroft are not sluggers of the Wagner, Fletcher or Tinker type, but they bat in the neighborhood of .240, which is regarded as good enough with the invaluable assistance they give in the field.

Maranville of the Braves has a reputation. Fans on the National league circuit regard him as the star of the bunch because of his inimitable style of playing. He does things different from the other shortstops. He plays a grounded and fly ball differently and has a snappier throw to bases. Maranville gets the sphere away from him as fast as any infielder in the game. He has looked better since Johnny Evers was stationed alongside of him, and the pair have easily equaled the much talked of work Evers and Tinker used to do for the Cubs. Maranville is a dangerous man at the plate in a pinch, for he has a keen eye, chokes the bat and drives the ball sharply.

PLANK STILL COMPETENT.

St. Louis Federal League Twirler, Past Forty, Classes With Best.

That Eddie Plank of the St. Louis team is still a competent pitcher is being proved by his successful work in the Federal league. Plank surely is a wonderful veteran. He has passed the forty mark, and yet continues to show rare form as a twirler.

Chief Bender, on the other hand, is not making good. He has won but a game or so this season, and most of the time has been hit hard. Bender gave signs of going back last year when he was with the Athletics, but Plank, while he cannot do a lot of work, will win a majority of his games if given the proper amount of rest between them.

Braves Hit the First Ball.

The Boston Braves, it is said, are hitting the first ball, figuring that opposing pitchers, knowing their tactics of last year, would expect them to wait 'em out. On the other hand, the Phillies, who were known as first ball hitters under Dooin, are waiting out the pitchers to the limit. It wins either way—if you hit the ball safe when you decide to swing.

Bancroft Belittles Pinch Hitters.

Frank Bancroft, who was managing ball teams when Arthur Irwin was a player, decries the age of the pinch specialist. "When I ran a ball club," grooved he the other day, "the nine men we started the game with were expected to be good in a pinch."

BUYS BIG PITCHER.

Brooklyn, July 1.—President Ebbets, of the Brooklyn National League, baseball club, announced today that he had purchased Walter Mails, a six foot one inch twirler, who weighs 180 pounds, and is only 18 years old, from the Seattle club. He will report as soon as possible.

CONDITION UNCHANGED.

Ithaca, N. Y., July 1—Coach Charles E. Courtney, confined in a local hospital with a fractured skull, spent a restful night, but his condition remained unchanged today.

AT THE END OF THE NINTH THE SCORE WAS DEADLOCKED

According to a score-card handed in at this office this morning, the B. A. C. and the New York Stars battled for nine innings to a 7 to 7 tie. Only one hit was made off Dentz, the B. A. C. twirler and only two were garnered from the delivery of Andrew, the New York Stars' slabman. Neither team is charged with an error and R. Allen seems to have been the star in the fielding line. Titsworth, second sacker of the B. A. C., clouted a homer and McKay, of the Stars, treated himself to a triple. Both twirlers made five of the enemy bite the dust and only one wild pitch is recorded, Dentz being the "Borneo" man.

FINAL PLANS FOR INDEPENDENCE DAY

Official Orders Are Issued to Boy Scouts for Their Part in the Celebration.

Final plans were completed this morning for the Boy Scouts' participation in the Independence Day celebration to be held in this city next Monday evening. Commissioner Allen E. Beals issued the following orders to all Scoutmasters yesterday:

"Scout troops will assemble at 7 o'clock Monday evening, July 5, in the rear of the First Presbyterian church, East Front street, opposite Church street, in full uniform and in full marching order. The line will be headed by Troop 5 Fife and Drum Corps and troops will fall in numerical order. All pennants and troop flags will be carried including casting ropes for use in maintaining barriers at Parker Field. All Scouts will carry their staffs.

"In view of the fact that it will be still daylight when the Scout procession takes place, flags will be carried instead of torches, each Scout in line being supplied with an American flag and staff. Line of march will be East Front to Watchung avenue, to Kensington, to Prospect, to Hillside avenue, to Randolph to North gate of Parker field. Scouts will march into reserve space and maintain the line of safety for spectators as aides to the police. A Scout detail will act as ushers and special provision will be made for first aid squads."

At a meeting of the Playground Commission held last night, resolutions of thanks were adopted as an appreciation to the people of Plainfield for the cordial response they have made for the appeal to raise $200 to provide for a suitable observance of Independence Day. Beside going on record to formally thank the patriotic residents of the community who gave so generously toward this object, the names of the contributors as far as they are known were ordered inscribed in full upon the minutes of the committee. Special thanks were given to the Plainfield Daily Press and the Courier-News for the generous editorial assistance and new column space devoted to the daily reports showing the progress of the contributions.

Through an error the name that appeared in the paper as H. T. Townley, contributor of $5 should have been H. T. Talmadge. O. G. Waring has contributed $2, making the grand total to date $353.50.

RUDOLPH P. KAMPF WEDS MISS ELIZABETH GUINEE

Miss Elizabeth Guinee, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Guinee, of 438 West Third street, and Rudolph Philip Kampf, of New Market, were quietly married in St. Mary's church yesterday afternoon at 5 o'clock. Father B. M. Bogan officiated at the ceremony. Miss Mary Brady and Hugh Reilly, of this city, were bridesmaid and best man respectively. Miss Guinee wore an attractive suit of tan material and hat to match.

Following the ceremony the couple immediately left for a short wedding trip after which they will reside in New Market. Both Mr. and Mrs. Kampf are well-known in the city and have a host of friends who extend to them their congratulations. Mr. Kampf conducts a hotel business in New Market.

RUSH MORE HELP TO KEEP HAYTIANS IN GOOD ORDER

Washington, July 1.—Request for another vessel to be sent to Haiti reached the Navy Department today from Rear Admiral Caperton on board the cruiser Washington, which was due to reach Cape Haitien today. The Secretary of the Navy immediately ordered the gunboat Eagle, now engaged in survey work near the island republic, to steam at full speed to Port Au Prince.

GIVES INTERESTING TALK.

An instructive talk on "Artistic Gardening" was given in the "Rookery" on Sycamore avenue, yesterday afternoon by Miss Edith Van Boskerck. A large number of women interested in the feature attended the session. Miss Van Boskerck is recognized authority on this feature and her address was listened to attentively.

VILLA WINS AGAIN.

Washington, July 1.—Victory over the Obregon forces by General Villa's army in a decisive battle at Lagos, a town between Leon and Aguas Calientes, was claimed by the Villa agency here today.

STRUCK BY AUTO.

Struck by an automobile as he was about to cross the road in front of his own machine yesterday, Rural-Letter-Carrier James V. N. Polhemus, of Bound Brook, suffered a fractured right arm and injuries to his right hip.

RAILROAD TIES ABLAZE.

A pile of ties along the railroad at Berkeley street caught fire last night about 7 o'clock, and an alarm was telephoned to headquarters. An extinguisher put out the blaze.

FUNERAL SERVICE OF PATRICK KENNEY

Obsequies Held in St. Mary's Church Today Are Largely Attended.

The funeral of Patrick Kenney, who died at Hampton, Virginia, Sunday last, was held this morning from the home of his brother, John J. Kenney, of Sandford avenue, and later from St. Mary's church where a requiem mass was celebrated by Father MacDonald. Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., escorted the body in and out of the church and later conducted a short service at the grave and planted an American flag at the foot of it in conclusion.

The floral offerings were unusually numerous and beautiful. Included in the set pieces was a huge wreath from the local Elks. Sprays and bouquets from relatives and friends were also displayed. Burial was made in St. Mary's cemetery, the following acting as pall bearers: Leo Kenney, Edmund Kenney, John A. Kenney, John Moynihan, Harvey Moynihan and William V. Rafferty.

David T. Kenney, a brother of the deceased, arrived this morning in time for the funeral from a prolonged business trip to Canada.

CLOSING EXERCISES OF THE PLAINFIELD LYCEUM

The closing exercises of the Plainfield Lyceum were held last night. A speaking contest under the direction of Miss A. Cobbs included the following: "A Soldier's Grave," Verna Williams; "My Hands For America," Mrs. Mary Jenkins; "The Question of the Twentieth Century," Mrs. Oliver Henry; "The Song of the Market Place," Miss Helen Carey, and "The Unknown Speaker," Miss Davie Reid.

The judges were Mrs. Honeyman and Mrs. Wardner. Prizes were awarded to Miss Davie Reid and Mrs. Oliver Henry. Following the contest refreshments were served and a social time concluded the meeting.

FIELDER TO SPEAK.

Governor James F. Fielder has consented to be present and deliver a short talk at the community picnic, to be held under the direction of the churches of Fanwood township at that place August 8. An invitation has also been extended to Assemblyman William N. Runyon, of this city.

HE WENT BY THE RULE.

But He Should Have Halted a Moment and Noted the Exceptions.

It is not bewildered foreigners alone who fall into the traps for the unwary that our confusing grammar and orthography lay. Many a despairing American with no natural aptitude for spelling hesitates or flies to the dictionary long after his student days are over because, although he remembers the rule, he does not remember the exceptions.

"And in our rules of spelling," protested one unfortunate professor—not of orthography—"it isn't even a case of 'majority rules;' it's merely plurality. Sometimes, I'm sure, the minority of exceptions to a rule isn't beaten by the words that comply with it by more than one."

A correspondent of the New York Sun recalls an illustrative incident of his school days. His teacher was self satisfied and young, thought he knew it all—but did not.

There was in the class a young lady who rejoiced in the good Scots name of Gillies. When the class was organizing the "professor" read her name as "Jillies." The young lady protested, but in vain; "'g' before 'i' is soft."

Well, of course an eighth of a quart is a jill, but what of a fish's gill? And the "know it all" teacher should have been hanged on a gibbet, but even he would not have asked the hardware man for a jimlet. Not in his jiddiest moment of pedagogic authority would he have said, "Jilbert, jive me a jilt wheeled jig," if he wanted the liveryman to supply him a gig with gilded spokes for his holiday diversions. Not even he, snapshot arbiter of linguistic niceties, would have asked at the library for Jibbon's "Decline and Fall." And if he has a daughter will she be a jirl? But Gillies must be called Jillies because "g" before "i" is soft.—Youth's Companion.

Napoleon III.

Kinglake, the British historian, gave a curious explanation of the origin of the title of Napoleon III., assumed by Louis Napoleon. He said that when Louis Napoleon's adherents were manufacturing public sentiment to receive him a subservient minister, who was preparing a proclamation, wrote these words: "The people's cry will be 'Vive Napoleon!!!'" The printer mistook the three exclamation marks for three I's, and the proclamation was so issued. This was considered a good story when it was related, but it has lacked confirmation.

Chicago.

The word Chicago is taken from the Indian word "Chacagua," the redskin word for thunder and name of the Indian thunder god. The name was given by the Indians to the "Chicago river," an inlet into Lake Michigan, and this gives its name to the city.—Indianapolis News.

An Appeal to Americans BY

The Commission for Relief In Belgium

Sole Clearing House for all Belguim Relief

We, as Americans, are enlisted for the war to save seven million men, women and children. It is the greatest commissary undertaking in the history of the world, and in the lexicon of America there is no such word as fail.

We Need Food Supplies as Well as Cash

Railroads, express companies, postoffices, governors and state committees are aiding. Our Flotilla of Mercy, comprising thirty-five chartered ships, is constantly carrying food. But—Our Supplies Are Far too Short!

Are You Helping? If Not, Send in Your Name Now!

Make out your check or money order, or send cash either to your state committee co-operating with this Commission or to the New York Headquarters:

PENROD

By BOOTH TARKINGTON

Copyright, 1914, by Double lay, Page & Company

"No cigar; I thank you." Mr. Kinosling, establishing himself in a wicker chair beside Margaret, waved away her father's proffer. "I do not smoke. I have never tasted tobacco in any form." Mrs. Schofield was confirmed in her opinion that this would be an ideal son-in-law. Mr. Schofield was not so sure.

"No," said Mr. Kinosling. "No tobacco for me. No cigar, no pipe, no cigarette, no cheroot. For me a book—a volume of poems, perhaps. Verses, rimes, lines metrical and cadenced—those are my dissipation. Tennyson by preference—'Maud' or 'Idylls of the King,' poetry of the sound Victorian days. There is none later. Or Longfellow will rest me in a timed hour.

Yes, for me a book—a volume in the hand, held lightly between the fingers."

Mr. Kinosling looked pleasantly at his fingers as he spoke, waving his hand in a curving gesture which brought it into the light of a window faintly illumined from the interior of the house. Then he passed those graceful fingers over his hair and turned toward Penrod, who was perched upon the railing in a dark corner.

"The evening is touched with a slight coolness," said Mr. Kinosling. "Perhaps I may request the little gentleman"—

"B'gr-r-ruff" coughed Mr. Schofield. "You'd better change your mind about a cigar."

"No, I thank you. I was about to request the lit"—

"Do try one," Margaret urged. "I'm sure papa's are nice ones. Do try"—

"No, I thank you. I remarked a slight coolness in the air, and my hat is in the hallway. I was about to request"—

"I'll get it for you," said Penrod suddenly.

"If you will be so good," said Mr. Kinosling. "It is a black bowler hat, little gentleman, and placed upon a table in the hall."

"I know where it is." Penrod entered the door, and a feeling of relief, mutually experienced, carried from one to another of his three relatives their interchanged congratulations that he had recovered his sanity.

His Hat Seemed to Have Decided to Remain Where It Was.

"'The day is done and the darkness,'" began Mr. Kinosling—and recited that poem entire. He followed it with "The Children's Hour," and, after a pause at the close, to allow his listeners time for a little reflection upon his rendition, he passed his hand again over his head and called in the direction of the doorway:

"I believe I will take my hat now, little gentleman."

"Here it is," said Penrod, unexpectedly climbing over the porch railing in the other direction. His mother and father and Margaret had supposed him to be standing in the hallway out of deference and because he thought it tactful not to interrupt the recitations. All of them remembered later that this supposed thoughtfulness on his part struck them as unnatural.

"Very good, little gentleman!" said Mr. Kinosling, and being somewhat chilled, placed the hat firmly upon his head, pulling it down as far as it would go. It had a pleasant warmth which he noticed at once. The next instant he noticed something else, a peculiar sensation of the scalp—a sensation which he was quite unable to define. He lifted his hand to take the hat off and entered upon a strange experience—his hat seemed to have decided to remain where it was.

"Do you like Tennyson as much as Longfellow, Mr. Kinosling?" inquired Margaret.

"I—ah—I cannot say," he returned absently. "I—ah—each has his own—ugh!—flavor and savor, each his—ah—ah"—

Struck by a strangeness in his tone, she peered at him curiously through the dusk. His outlines were indistinct, but she made out that his arms were uplifted in a singular gesture. He seemed to be wrenching at his head.

"Is—is anything the matter?" she asked anxiously. "Mr. Kinosling, are you ill?"

"Not at—ugh!—all," he replied, in the same odd tone. "I—ah—I believe—ugh!"

He dropped his hands from his hat and rose. His manner was slightly agitated. "I fear I may have taken a trifling—ah—cold. I should—ah—perhaps be—ah—better at home. I will—ah—say good night."

At the steps he instinctively lifted his hand to remove his hat, but did not so so and, saying "Good night" again in a frigid tone, departed with visible stiffness from that house, to return no more.

"Well, of all"— cried Mrs. Schofield, astounded. "What was the matter? He just went—like that!" She made a flurried gesture. "In heaven's name, Margaret, what did you say to him?"

"I!" exclaimed Margaret indignantly. "Nothing! He just went!"

"Why, he didn't even take off his hat when he said good night!" said Mrs. Schofield.

Margaret, who had crossed to the doorway, caught the ghost of a whisper behind her, where stood Penrod.

"You bet he didn't!"

He knew not that he was overheard.

A frightful suspicion flashed through Margaret's mind—suspicion that Kinosling's hat would have to be either boiled off or shaved off. With growing horror she recalled Penrod's long absence when he went to bring the hat.

"Penrod," she cried, "let me see your hands."

She had toiled at those hands herself late that afternoon, nearly scalding her own, but at last achieving a lily purity.

"Let me see your hands!"

She seized them.

Again they were tarred!

MOTHERS' WORK

Conducted by the Plainfield Mothers' Association. Every Thursday

Contributing Staff.

Mrs. Joseph Smith and Mrs. J. L. Evans.

The Daily Press for Thursdays containing the column on Mother's Work will be sent by mail for one dollar a year, in advance.

THE FIFTH.

The morning of the Fifth has come,
The silence is profound.
No blare of horn, no beat of drum,
No cannon makes a sound.

But in a darkened chamber lies,
A youth with bandaged brow,
Who had at dawn of yester skies,
More thumbs than he has now.

One leg is in a plaster cast,
Of sundry toes he's shy;
An arm in splints is prone and fast,
Swelled shut the beaming eye.

A scar extends from ear to ear,
A blister mars the cheek;
The powdered spots of blue look queer;
Our darling is a freak.

His hair has vanished from his head,
Of eye brows he has none;
We weep to see upon the bed
Our fragmentary son.

—(Phil. Ledger.)

MY TIMID PARENTS.

My life as a child was under the shadow of timidity. I was denied the activities of a child's life, the chance a child should have to develop self-reliance and a strong and able body, a swift-acting mind and a mental standpoint of quiet courage in danger. I was denied by love, by anxiety, by a vicarious timidity which came from undue importance placed on their child by two of the most loving and—I say it with all respect—most unwise parents a girl ever had. They saved themselves suffering and anxiety by denying me the normal pleasures of healthy girlhood. Now I am suffering, because the timidity they engendered in me is now mine, not only for myself but for my children. I have learned to see that if I am timid I need not be a coward and my children must not be denied pleasures that I may be saved worry. I allow venturesome activities; and hide the worry.—(Pictorial Review.)

VACATION READING.

The fact that a boy prefers Alger or Henty to Scott, or even that a girl gives some of her time to reading Mary Jane Holmes need not be looked upon as a calamity. True, we could wish them better employed, but aside from the possible waste of time, results from such occasional reading are not likely to be highly injurious. The appetite for this cheap emotionalism appears and usually disappears without working permanent harm. Capable librarians are coming to realize this fact and instead of banishing all books of the Alger-Henty type, are tactfully endeavoring to regulate the circulation. The result is that where the librarian has any degree of co-operation from the home a great deal is accomplished by way of compromise, and sandwiched in between two semi-worthless books the boy reads one really good one.

If teachers, librarians and parents are to remedy this evil, then, it is not to be done by any prejudiced wholesale condemnation of books of which we are largely ignorant, but by an intelligent recognition of the thread of value in the thinnest adventure story in which our boys delight, as well as by the ability and willingness to point out, in a manner far removed from preaching, the practical and substantial values and delights that come from an acquaintance with true literature. Intelligent, tactful, sympathetic supervision of boys' and girls' reading may well claim the attention of all interested in cultivating a love for literature.—(The Chautauquan.)

THE YOUNG MOTHER.

Is it a hard thing to acquire of the mother that she shall devote herself so closely to her child? Let her remember that motherhood is her business now! She has had her school life, she has had society, she has had literature, she has had wifehood; now she is a mother, pledged by the sacredness and the infinite impart of this new calling to self-abnegation, to the highest good of the child to whom she stands as creator and provider.—Elizabeth Powell Bond.

SEX HYGIENE.

In speaking of sexual immortality, it is more important to refer to the injuries it inflicts upon character than its hygienic dangers. It can be pointed out that the worse disease which can be contracted by anyone is that disease of the character which develops when a man accustoms himself to a course of action which cannot be sanctioned by his better self. This disease destroys the consistency of a man's inner life and prepares him for unreliable conduct in all other spheres of activity. It delivers him over to the power of momentary impulses.—F. W. Foerster.

FOR THE TINY TOTS.

No. 8964.

Perhaps no garment has ever been more universally satisfactory for the small child's needs than have been rompers. Simple, easy to make, washable, durable, comfortable—a mother need not worry about its clothes if the little one is dressed in rompers. The above illustration, Ladies' Home Journal Pattern No. 8964, is a very cute model, having a high waist, surplice blouse and circular bloomers. Cuts in sizes ½, 1 2, 4, size 4 requiring 2⅛ yards 36-inch material.

Don't fail to see Bushnell's cartoon every day in the Press.

His Daddy Told Him the Early History of His Country.

Daddy's Bedtime Story — The Boy And the Quiet Fourth of July.

"WHAT do they mean by a 'safe and sane Fourth of July,' daddy?" asked Evelyn as she and Jack came for the evening story.

"Not so many years ago," said daddy, "everybody seemed to try to make all the noise he could make on the Fourth of July, and this is done quite a little yet, but not to such a great extent as used to be the case. The reason for the change is because this noise wasn't all there was to it, not by any means. There were many giant crackers sold and small cannon and dangerous explosives that used to work much damage. Men and boys suffered many injuries and lost their legs and arms and eyes, and some had lockjaw and died as the result of the hurts they received.

"It grew so bad that the people saw something had to be done. So after awhile men began to make laws to make the day less harmful.

"There was a little boy who liked to celebrate the Fourth, and he liked big noises and danger and all that sort of thing. But his parents were worried at each Fourth. So one Fourth of July they hit upon a plan to give the little boy something else to take the place of the noisy Fourth.

"So his daddy said to him the 3rd of July, 'Sonny, get to bed early, for we are going on a nice time tomorrow.'

"And do you know that made the little boy so curious about the good time that he didn't even hardly think about the next day being the Fourth, and he didn't notice that his father hadn't bought him toy pistols and caps and little fireworks as he had done before.

"The morning of the Fourth the little boy's daddy and mamma called him early, just about dawn, and he got up in a hurry and ate his breakfast, and the daddy had a horse and carriage from the livery stable, and they all got in, with a well filled picnic basket, and drove away out in the country.

"They came to a beautiful piece of woodland, and in the center of it was the prettiest little lake you ever saw. There was a boat drawn up on the shore, and it was cool and refreshing and quiet.

"They rowed on the lake, and they spread their lunch on a tablecloth under a big tree, and they enjoyed every crumb of it, and after lunch the little boy sat with his mamma while his daddy told him of the early history of his country. The little birds sang all about as if they were glad to be where it was quiet, and altogether the little boy had the nicest kind of a Fourth.

"He always liked his Fourths quiet after that, and I guess that's the nice, quiet kind of a Fourth of July we'll have this year."

Household Hints

CANNING AND PRESERVING

Cherry and Pineapple Marmalade—Wash, drain, seed cherries and run through meat grinder. Much of the juice is lost in this process; but long continued cooking makes the flavor strong and removing part of the juice remedies this in part. Peel and slice the pineapple and run it through meat grinder. Mix with the ground cherries a fourth to a third as much pineapple. Place mixture on fire, add two-thirds as much sugar, and cook the whole slowly until it becomes thick. Stir almost constantly to prevent burning. Pour the marmalade into jelly plasses and cover it with melted paraffin.

Brandied Cherries—One pint pitted cherries, three-fourths pound sugar; alternate layers and stand over night. Then heat juice, put in cherries and boil until transparent. Put in jar and add one tablespoon brandy at last before sealing.

Gooseberry Jam—Four quarts real ripe gooseberries, three large oranges; wash and put oranges through food chopper, add four quarts sugar. Boil all together until tender. Seal in jars or jelly glasses.

THE TABLE

Tomato Shortcake—Make a baking powder biscuit dough, roll it about an inch thick. Place it in a pan and cover with a layer of sliced ripe tomatoes. Cover with butter and sugar. On top of this place a layer of sliced onions. Sprinkle with salt and pepper. Cover all with a layer of sliced green peppers and bake.

Filled Onions—Boil onions, but be sure not to overboil; better take out five or ten minutes before you consider them done (good round white onions). Press out the centers (with the thumb) and fill with pork sausage meat mixed with a few bread crumbs. Bake until done—about fifteen to twenty minutes.

Potatoes on the Half Shell—Wash six large potatoes, bake till done, cut lengthwise and take out of the shell. Put potatoes in a pan; beat up two eggs, butter size of egg, little milk; take a small bunch of parsley, cut real fine; stir this all together and put back in potato shells, put in oven to brown, then take out and serve hot.

Strawberry Shortcake—This, if made according to directions, will almost melt in your mouth: Two cups flour, one-half cup lard, two level teaspoons baking powder. Sift flour with baking powder, add lard and with a spoon thoroughly mix; add water enough to make a soft dough. Take half the dough and roll out to fit the bottom of a large pie pan. Spread this over with butter. Take remaining dough, roll out same size and place on top of first. Bake in moderately hot oven. When a nice brown color, remove from oven, lift off top layer and spread with halved strawberries sprinkled with granulated sugar. Replace top layer, cover with strawberries and sugar.

Chocolate Spice Cake—One and one-half cups sugar, one-half cup butter, two eggs, one cup sour milk, one teaspoon each cinnamon, cloves and nutmeg, one-half teaspoon allspice, two tablespoons cocoa, one teaspoon soda dissolved in the sour milk, two cups flour.

Tasty Veal Dish—One pound veal stew, three medium-sized onions, one-half small bottle catsup. Fry onions till brown. Add meat, fry till fairly tender, add cup of water, let simmer till tender, add catsup, salt and pepper to taste, cook five minutes, serve hot.

Spanish Rice—Two slices bacon diced, one cup stewed tomatoes, one green pepper shredded, three tablespoons minced onion, one and one-half cupfuls boiled rice, salt and paprika to taste. Fry bacon, add tomato, peppers and onion. Season and let cook until thoroughly done. Then add rice and serve hot.

Colorado Salad—Remove stones from red and white cherries; cut cherries in halves. Remove pulp from oranges, remove skins from bananas and cut in one-half inch cubes. Mix equal quantities of each and mix with French dressing. Serve in cups made from lettuce leaves.

Banana Cake—One cup sugar, one and one-third cups butter, half cup sweet milk, three eggs, one teaspoon soda, two teaspoons cream of tartar, two cups flour, flavor to taste. Filler: Mash two bananas to a cream, stir into boiled frosting and put between layers. To be eaten same day as made.

Glimpses of Married Life

BY MRS. EVA LEONARD

Nell opened Dick's letter and read: "Dear Little Wife: I am sitting in the living room, writing on the arm of the morris chair.

"Dr. Ellson has just left. I had him over to help me through with the evening. I never knew weeks to have so many evenings in them as these two have had. Is it only two weeks since you left?

"The doctor told me about his visit at Detroit and mentioned young Mr. Joplin's being there. He said to me:

"'He's a fine young man and of good family. I suppose he's the lucky man that will carry away the young lady,' referring to Olive.

"I told him that I very much doubted it, that my latest advices were that Mr. Joplin had disappeared from the horizon.

"He sat up with a perk and gave a thin whistle.

"'You don't mean it!' he said. 'Some temporary youthful misunderstanding, I suppose,' he added after smoking in silence a while.

"'I don't think so,' I insisted. 'I understand he's too young; not in years, you understand,' I added, 'just callow.'

"He laughed. 'That's a defect that time will remedy.'

"'Yes, if one wants to wait for a person to develop.'

"There was silence for a while; then the doctor said:

"'Charming family. Mr. Dunn is one of the brainiest, kindliest gentlemen I ever met. A wonderful friendship exists between the father and daughter. If I were Mr. Dunn I should be tempted to shoot a man on sight who threatened to take that lovely girl away from me.'

"'You see, her intimacy with that fine father has made all the young men she knows seem crude and undeveloped, and she cannot care for them. The relation has its drawbacks,' I replied.

"'Has she never cared for any one?' he asked.

"'No one; says she is immune.'

"We smoked in silence after that. After we had finished our cigars, the doctor rose and said:

"'Now I am going to help you clear things up here. I have no great faith in your housekeeping ability and when my patient returns she must find things as she left them.'

"He gathered up the dishes from our little spread and allowed me to help only on condition that I obeyed orders, for he could see, he said, that you were not a very good disciplinarian. When the last thing was put away, he remarked solemnly as he took his leave:

"'I think I can trust you to lock up and take care of the fire.'

"'And wind the cat,' I added.

"'Good-night, Dick; I envy you,' he said, looking around the cozy place.

"In spite of his aspersions, I have been a model housekeeper. The fern is in good condition and I have broken nothing; not once have I forgotten to feed the cat. I deserve honorable mention.

"A week from tonight I start for Detroit. My, Nell, I'll be glad when this is over; it's so blooming still. I don't believe in these temporary divorces. I'd give more to hear that youngster of mine tune up than to hear the finest musical composition. There have been times when I didn't appreciate my advantages in that regard; when I would have chosen the vox humana of the organ or the human tones of the violin—but not now. I read of a man who was in California, who had his baby cry over long distance from New York. Sensible stunt, I thought.

"Distribute yourself around all you want to this week. After I come I'm going to monopolize all of your time. Seal. Lovingly, DICK."

TRACT SOCIETY RESUMES PUBLICATION OF "PULPIT"

After a lapse of several years, the American Sabbath Tract Society resumes with the issue of July, the publication of the Seventh Day Baptist Pulpit, under the shorter title, "The Pulpit," pursuant to the recommendation of its committee on Revision of Denominational Literature. The magazine during the year will contain fifty-two sermons, together with portraits and brief biographies of the writers of the sermons. There are articles of interest on the editorial page, by the editor, and the body of the magazine contains, in addition to the sermons, responsive readings, and a suggested order of services for the convenience of leaders of Sabbath services of churches that are without pastors. Rev. Clayton A. Burdick is the editor of the publication.

SUCCESS MARKS RECREATION WORK

Optimistic Reports of Activities Presented to the Executive Board.

INCREASED INTEREST

Plans for the Coming Year Are Discussed—Names of Standing Committees Announced — Patriotic Play to Be Given.

Optimistic reports were read at the meeting of the executive board of the Public Recreation Committee, held at the home of Henry C. White last night, and prospects for the future seem bright. Every feature and department carried on under the auspices of the committee has been unusually successful, the interest of the individuals entered in the various clubs has been keen and the number of clubs identified with the committee has been increased. The committee feels highly appreciative to the public, without whose help and co-operation the various enterprises would have undoubtedly proven failures. Beside routine matters discussed, several notices were read. The weekly municipal dance that has been run in the Washington School Auditorium every Saturday night has been transferred to Plainfield High School Auditorium, where more capacious quarters are afforded the participants. The Thespian Club also holds its rehearsals in the High School Auditorium.

The latter will give a patriotic play in that audito-ium tomorrow night. The cast has been drilled under the careful eye of Henry C. White, and each member of the play has been perfected in his and her character parts. Prior to the performance an ice cream festival will be held on the steps of the High School building. The admission to the play is a nominal charge to cover the cost of production. The committee hopes the public will respond generously in attendance.

The names of the standing committees were given out at the meeting as follows: Finance; A. B. Jones chairman, Champlain L. Riley, William S. Tyler and William M. Sandford; extension, Mrs. H. D. Corbusier chairman, Mrs. A. B. Jones, Mrs. G. Stuart Simons, Mrs. Henry Crofut White and Mrs. Walter H. P. Veysey; publicity, Samuel Rothberg chairman, Leslie R. Fort and C. H. Frost; forum, F. W. RELIC OF OLDEN DAYS.

DIVIDEND DECLARED.

Peter B. Olney, referee in bankruptcy, has notified the creditors of the Re-Inter Borough Realty Company that a first and final dividend has been declared out of the above estate of four and thirty one-hundredths per cent. upon the claims proved and allowed.

PICK UP STRANGER CARRYING REVOLVER

J. L. Bartholamew, of Easton, Pa., Held by Boro Police Pending Investigation.

Arrested late last night as a suspicious character and for carrying concealed weapons, a young man giving his name as Lester J. L. Bartholamew and his address as 1125 Ferry street, Easton, Pa., is locked up in the North Plainfield police station until Chief Marshal George Weiss can learn something definite about him from the Easton authorities.

Marshal Herrmann made the arrest at about 11:45 o'clock last night. He noticed Bartholamew loitering about on Somerset street, carrying a satchel. Accosted by the marshal, he told his name and address and said that he had no home here and was looking for work. As he was a stranger to him, the marshal took him to the police station as a suspicious character, but a search through the man's effects disclosed a thirty-eight calibre revolver and a box of cartridges, together with some articles of wearing apparel, while in his pockets were more cartridges and a little loose change. A charge of carrying concealed weapons was then added to the original charge.

To inquiries, the man said that he was looking for work in North Plainfield and explained the presence of the revolver in his satchel by saying that as he had little money, he had brought it along to sell in case he could not find employment. When arraigned in court this morning, he was remanded back to his cell until the authorities at Easton can be heard from.

EDWARD KORMAN TO WED NEW PROVIDENCE GIRL

Miss Mary Clark, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Clark, of Union avenue, New Providence township, will be married tomorrow afternoon to Edward Korman, of Harrison avenue, North Plainfield. The ceremony will be performed at St. Mary's Catholic church, Stony Hill, by the rector, Rev. Joseph J. McGrath.

Miss Agnes Debbie, of Mountain avenue, New Providence township, a schoolmate of the bride-elect, will be the maid of honor. Herman Klinsman, half-brother of the bridegroom-elect, will be best man. The couple will live in Plainfield after a trip to Washington, D. C.

BRICK FOR POSTOFFICE CONDEMNED BY INSPECTOR

Two carloads of brick for the new postoffice building will have to go back to the Cliffwood Brick Company, of Matawan, the brick having been condemned by Government Inspector S. H. Nealy this morning. Only two or three wagon loads were delivered at the building, and these were carted back to the freight station and reloaded on the cars to be returned to Matawan.

The brick company submitted samples of brick when offering bids to supply material for the new building, and the claim made by the inspector was that the brick did not come up to the samples. Some of them were too soft and inferior in quality. If the brck had been up to standard the work would be moving forward today. As it is, a delay of a day or two, or until other brick can arrive, will be necessary.

MISS LEWIS A BRIDE.

Miss Ruth E. Lewis, for the past two years a resident of this city, was married yesterday afternoon at her home in Pottsdam, New York, to Scott North, of Lake Placid. During her stay here, Miss Lewis was kindergarten supervisor in the Lincoln School and has made a host of friends who wish her much success. She was especially liked by the younger folks and all were sorry when the closing day of school brought the parting. Miss Lewis made her home with Mrs. E. I. Smalley, of 410 Madison avenue.

MEN WANT WORK.

The Charity Organization Society wishes to remind the public that there are a few men still out of work, and by telephoning 103 their services can be secured. Handy men to beat rugs, cut grass, etc., at short notice, are available. By notifying this society one has the satisfaction of knowing that the work is given to those that need it most. The society appeals for garden work especially for one man who cannot work indoors, and whose large family is now in immediate and great need.

The service Sunday night at Warren chapel will be in charge of the young people and the young men's choir of the church will provide special music.

J. H. JEWETT BENEFICIARY OF HIS UNCLE'S ESTATE

New York, July 2.—The will of Joseph Jewett, uncle of John H. Jewett, of No. 1000 Central avenue, Plainfield, filed for probate today in the Surrogate's Court, disposes of his estate as follows:

The sum of $200 for a tombstone; $5,000 to charity; personal effects and $1,000 to friends. The rest of the estate is divided in nine equal shares, one to his Plainfield nephew, the rest of the shares of six other nieces and nephews and two friends.

Tuesday, July 13, is the date set for the proving of the document, which was executed on February 21, 1911, and names the United States Trust Company as the executors. Mr. Jewett, who was the son of the late John L. Jewett, was 83 years old, and died at his late home at No. 167 West 126th street, on June 8 last. According to the petition attached to the will, the estate is "over $10,000" in personal property.

BOUGHT CARS AT AUCTION; HASN'T SEEN THEM SINCE

John Sheridan, who lives on Verone street, Brooklyn, is looking for three men whom he hired to drive automobiles back to Brooklyn for him last Saturday, after he had purchased the cars at an auction sale in the garage of A. C. Thompson & Company, in this city. He paid the men $5 a piece in advance but has seen nothing of the three cars or his employes since they left him in this city last Saturday, presumably for the purpose of going to Brooklyn.

The men were strangers to Sheridan and he has asked the local police to aid him in the search for them. Whether or not they met with an accident is not known, but it is the supposition of the police that an attempt has been made to steal the machines.

HONORED LAWYER IS LAID TO REST

Funeral Service for Nelson Runyon Attended by Many Mourners Yesterday.

CEREMONY IMPRESSIVE

Representative Delegations From Plainfield Bar Association, Grand Army and the Local Lodge of Elks Attend—Many Floral Tributes.

Attended by relatives, intimate acquaintances gained during his half century of professional life at the New Jersey Bar, and men prominent in the State's political circles, the funeral services for the late Nelson Runyon were conducted in the Park Avenue Baptist church, at 2:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon, the Rev. Birney S. Hudson officiating. The ceremonial observance was impressive in the extreme, and the large assemblage that paid its last respects to one of Plainfield's best-known and honored citizens was a representative one. The results of his long association with the interests of the community were fully exemplified in the number and character of the mourners. The gathering in the Baptist edifice was cosmopolitan, rich and poor being alike represented.

Three of the departed lawyer's favorite hymns, "Abide With Me," "Softly Now the Light of Day," were sung by a quartet composed of Elmer D. Cutting, William G. Smith, Edward L. Wagner and B. J. Tallamy. Those rendering the vocal selections represented the Plainfield Lodge of Elks, No. 885, with which both of the surviving sons, William N. and Carroll T., are affiliated.

Dr. Hudson delivered an eloquent eulogy, drawing from the life of the departed lawyer ideals of Christian manhood that had been so characteristic of his career. The speaker commented on Mr. Runyon's interest in the church, referring to religon as a dominant feature of his life. He dwelt touchingly on the fact that visits to the Park Avenue Baptist church had been one of the important parts of his daily personal routine, and told how his interest had been unfaltering, even during his long illness.

Included in the gathering of mourners were representtive delegations from the church, the Plainfield Bar Association, the Y. M. C. A. and Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R. Mr. Runyon was one of the oldest and most prominently identified members of the Bar Association, and his connection with the Grand Army of the Republic was inaugurated with nine months' service in the Civil War, when he was a young man. The floral remembrances included set pieces from the Bar Association, Congressman John H. Capstick and the Plainfield Lodge of Elks, all being handsome.

The honorary pallbearers were: George E. Hall and David M. Runyon, representing the Park Avenue Baptist church; C. W. McCutcheon and J. Harry Manning, from the Y. M. C. A.; Post Commander T. O. Doane and Captain William C. Smith, of the G. A. R., and Walter L. Hetfield and William M. Stillman, of the Plainfield Bar Association. The pallbearers were: Walter L. Hetfield, Jr., Charles L. Moffett, Francis J. Blatz, Vincent W. Nash, Jr., Charles M. Dolliver and Harry C. Runyon. Interment was made in Hillside cemetery.

MERCHANTS TO OBSERVE SATURDAY HALF HOLIDAY

According to the usual custom seven of the local merchants, beginning tomorrow and continuing every Saturday until Labor Day, will close their places of business at 12:30 o'clock in the afternoon. This affords the employes a full Saturday half-holiday as well as the evening. Other merchants in the city as a rule make summer arrangements to suit their individual needs.

Those who will close their stores at 12:30 o'clock on Saturday for the rest of the summer are: A. M. Griffen Company, H. E. Gayle Hardware Company, F. A. Kirch & Co., J. W. Gavett, Woolston & Buckle, J. C. Hansen and Powlison & Jones.

THE TEMPERATURE.

The temperature report from The State Trust Company today is as follows: 9 a. m., 72 degrees; 11 a. m., 73 degrees; 1 p. m., 73 degrees.

CONNORS' PLANS ARE FRUSTRATED

Notorious Criminal Said to Have Instigated a Jail Delivery Attempt.

CAREFUL PLOT FOILED

Acting Warden of County Jail at Elizabeth Discovers Equipment on Its Way to Cell of Man Convicted of Ackerman Robbery.

Carefully laid plans for what bore all the earmarks of a wholesale jail delivery were frustrated by acting Warden James Johnson, late yesterday afternoon, in the Union county jail at Elizabeth, when he accidentally fell upon an assortment of equipment to aid such an attempt. From all indications the county authorities have concluded that the instigator of the movement to liberate prisoners was none other than Charles, alias "Ice-Wagon" Connors, the notorious Chicago criminal who was on December 19, 1914, convicted by the Union County Grand Jury of a charge against him for looting former State Senator Ernest R. Ackerman's home in this city almost a year before. Connors was sentenced by Judge Connolly to serve from three and one-half to seven years in State Prison, but shortly afterwards took an appeal to the Supreme Court, which was denied to him on June 21 last. Why he has not been removed to the Trenton institution from the county jail is a source of considerable wonderment on the part of those who have followed the case, as in the past it has not been customary to harbor prisoners for so long a time in Elizabeth.

MARTIN RILEY THE GUEST AT TESTIMONIAL BANQUET

As a testimonial of the esteem in which he is held by his fellow-workers in the Prudential Insurance office in this city, Martin Riley, the retiring superintendent of the local office, was tendered a banquet in the Hotel Windham, last night. Twenty business associates gathered at the hotel to honor Mr. Riley, who severs his connection with the Prudential Company next Tuesday, at which time he will leave for Pittsfield, Mass., to go into business for himself. Mr. Riley has been identified with the insurance concern for fifteen years, six years of which have been with the Plainfield office of the company.

W. H. Jenison, assistant superintendent of the local office, presented Mr. Riley with a large silver loving cup, at the same time assuring him of the good wishes of all the staff who extended him their congratulations and hoped that he would keep the token as a memento from the office force. Mr. Riley responded, thanking all, and expressed his regret at leaving the office where he had so many friends. Several other attendants made speeches.

MRS. M'CAULEY GIVEN A BIRTHDAY SURPRISE

Friends and neighbors gathered at the home of Mrs. Ella McCauley, on West Third street, last night, completely surprising her. The occasion was Mrs. McCauley's forty-ninth natal day and the observance was planned by her young daughter, Miss Loretta McCauley, who was assisted by Miss Margaret Hickey, Miss Edith Cox and Miss Florence Cox. These young women prepared the dainty favors, which were a feature of the evening and planned the entire evening's program. Dancing and games were enjoyed during the evening and refreshments were served. Music was furnished by the Cullen brothers, who were assisted on stringed instruments by the Misses Annabel McAfee, May Murray and Kathryn McCauley.

Those present were: Mrs. Ella McCauley, Mr. and Mrs. John Hickey, Francis Hickey, John Hickey, Misses Margaret and Marie Hickey, William Smith and family, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Cullen, Mr. and Mrs. John Lafferty, Mr. and Mrs. Chester Cox, Miss May Murray, Miss Annabel McAfee, Frank Cullen and James Cullen.

ENDEAVOR PICNIC.

The Junior Christian Endeavor Society of Trinity Reformed church, enjoyed a picnic yesterday afternoon, at the foot of the mountains. Twenty-five members of the society were present and passed the time in playing games and sports. Refreshments were served. The outing was in charge of the Misses Lucie Coriell, Anna Zimmer and Elsie Dunavan.

FIFTY MERCHANTS APPROVE WIDENING

Petitions for Somerset Street Improvement Ready for Presentation.

Petitions favoring the widening of Somerset street, from Front street to the bridge over Green Brook, to the extent of ten feet, five feet on each side, were in circulation yesterday afternoon and this morning among the business men in the center of the city. Up to noon today approximately fifty of the merchants had affixed their signatures to the documents expressing their approval of the improvement. The petition circulated among the owners of the property along the thoroughfare was signed by a majority earlier in the week.

Those of the owners of the real estate on the street who did not sign have expressed themselves as being favorable under certain conditions, as has several of the members of the Common Council. The petitions will be filed with City Clerk James T. MacMurray, and presented at the July meeting of the Common Council on Tuesday evening next. Among the Councilmen who have already expressed themselves in an informal way as being favorable to the work are A. D. Edgar, of the fire and building committee; F. J. Blatz, of the street committee; Juan Babcock and Charles C. Graves.

A number of photographs of conditions which exist at Front and Somerset streets every fifteen minutes, upon the arrival of the Arlington avenue, Netherwood and Fourth street trolleys, have been taken, and will be attached to the petitions when filed at the office of the city clerk. The pictures are clear, and indicate that the street is not wide enough to accomodate readily the heavy traffic which goes over this main artery of the business section from the north.

Somerset street at this point is the terminal for both the Netherwood and West Fourth street trolleys, while the Main Line cars pass the point within a few feet. While the first two cars are being turned about on the "Y" at this point, practically other vehicles must come to a stop for various periods of time, especially on the East Front street side of the thoroughfare. It is also noticeable that when the two trolleys (Fourth street and Netherwood) are being turned about at this point, traffic north and south on Somerset street, as far as wagons and automobiles are concerned, must come to a full stop until such times as the cars are swung around again on to Front street.

YOUTHFUL FARMERS IN A LIVELY COMPETITION

The garden contest instituted by the Parent-Teacher Association of North Plainfield has brought about much lively competition between youthful farmers and gardeners. As a result of the feature two hundred and fifty young men and women of the North Plainfield schools have entered and have beautiful and luxuriant garden products to show for their efforts. Beginning tomorrow every Saturday during the summer months will be known as market day for the young planters and between the hours of 8 and 10 in the morning products will be on sale in the schoolyard of the North Plainfield High School.

All entrants who have any available produce are requested to have their stock on hand early tomorrow. Members of the Parent-Teacher Association will have charge of the sale of articles. At the culmination of the summer the association will offer prizes to the most successful of those engaged in the contest.

DEATH COMES SUDDENLY TO MRS. SOPHIE E. MEYERS

Mrs. Sophie Meyers, a life-long resident of Watchung, died suddenly yesterday afternoon, at the home of her daughter, Mrs. George Wilson, on Mountain Boulevard. She was apparently in good health during the early part of the day and after dinner lied down to take a nap. Shortly afterward Mrs. Wilson went into the room where she expected to find her mother sleeping and was shocked to discover that she had passed away. The cause was heart trouble.

Mrs. Meyers was 73 years of age and was highly respected by all who knew her. She is survived by two sons, Charles and Fritz Meyers, and four daughters, Mrs. William Walker, Mrs. Silas Winans and Mrs. George Wilson, of Watchung, and Mrs. Peter Newmiller, of Plainfield. The funeral will be held at the late home on Sunday afternoon at 1:30 o'clock and at the Coontown church at 2:30 o'clock. The burial will be in Coontown.

FRENCH AVIATOR SINKS SUBMARINE

TORPEDO THREE BOATS

All Were British Steamers—Correspondent Hears That Germans Will Bring Reinforcement From Russian Front to Attack French.

Rome, July 2.—A French aviator bombarded and sank the Austrian submarine U-11 in the Adriatic, it was officially announced today.

Amsterdam, July 2.—A Zeppelin airship exploded Wednesday, while leaving its shelter at Brussels, and was completely destroyed, according to a report received here. Every man in the crew of twenty-six is said to have perished.

London, July 2.—The British steamers Caucasian and Inglemoor were sunk by a German submarine last night. The Caucasian, 4,656 tons, was bound from London for New Orleans. The Inglemoor, of 4,331 tons, was owned by the Moor Line, of London.

The British steamer Welbury, 3,594 tons, bound for England from Matenaz, Cuba, was also sunk by a German submarine off the cost of Ireland, last night.

Northern France, July 2.—The Central News correspondent has received information from private sources that the German commanders on the western front recently held a council of war at the Crown Prince's headquarters, at which were discussed the new development in their campaign. The policy formulated at the council has for its object the arrest of the French advance north of Arras, until the Germans are able to reinforce their lines with men and artillery from the Russian front.

Paris, July 2.—The French war statement issued today says:

"The cannonade was violent all night at a great number of points on the front, notably in the region of Wooston, northwest of Ypres, in that of Suchez, and in that of Verneuil, to the north of the Aisne.

"After a violent bombardment an attack by the enemy's grenadiers was lost about 2 o'clock this morning against our positions on the road from Ablain to Angres, to the north of Bethune highway. It was completely checked.

"Near La Boiselle one of our mines destroyed the advance field works of the enemy.

"In the Argonne the battle continued most violently all night. A single attack by the enemy was attempted with the support of big bomb throwers and asphyxiating bombs.

"At Quarton Reserve in the forest of Le Pretre, there was also reported a movement by the enemy which followed at violent bombardment and wich was repulsed by the fire of our infantry."

Athens, July 2.—The capture of Brithia by the Allies, on the Gallipoli Peninsula, is persistently reported but is unconfirmed.

Rome, July 2.—The Italian war statement today says:

"A detachment of the enemy preparing defenses on the positions of Monticello and Saccarant was dispersed by our artillery. In the valley of Padola barbed wire protected entrenchments were located at Heikofel, and demolished by our artillery. At the head of the valley of Sesia an important position dominating Plazzo was solidly occupied by us."

Pretoria, South Africa, July 2.—Two British aeroplanes successfully bombarded German troop trains at Otavi, German Southwest Africa, it was announced today. Nearly 100 German soldiers are believed to have been killed.

Stockholm, July 2.—Several Swedish ships in the harbor of Windau, Russia, are reported to have been sunk when that port was bombarded by German warships.

PATRIOTIC SERVICES.

Because of the fact that the Fourth of July falls this year on Sunday, Rev. C. H. Mallery, rector of the Church of the Heavenly Rest, has announced that the celebration of the Holy Communion at that church on Sunday next will partake of the nature of a patriotic service. Rev. Cortlandt H. Mallery will preach an appropriate sermon.

BELATED ANNOUNCEMENT.

Announcement was made today of the marriage of Miss Carrie Ader and Martin Kane, Jr., which took place in German Valley two years ago.

ATHLETIC PROGRAM FOR CELEBRATION ON MONDAY

The committee of the Board of Trade in charge of the Independence Day celebration to be held Monday has completed arrangements for the occasion. The program of exercises for the morning was announced in these columns of Tuesday's issue.

The following program of atletic events have been announced for the afternoon at Maurer Oval, to start at 1:30 o'clock: Flag race, for girls from 6 to 8 ypars; flag race, for boys from 6 to 8 years; roller coaster race, for boys from 8 to 10 years; rope jumping contest, for girls from 8 to 10 years; foot race, for boys from 10 to 12 years; running broad jump, for boys from 12 to 16 years; rope jumping race, for girls from 6 to 8 years, foot race, for boys from 6 to 8 years; potato race, for both boys and girls; foot race, for boys from 8 to 10 years; shoe race, for both boys and girls; marathon race, for boys from 12 to 16 years.

A baseball game will be arranged to follow immediately after the other events have been run off. Fireworks will be displayed at 8 o'clock in the evening.

COUNCIL WILL BE ASKED TO ABATE A NUISANCE

The question of the throwing of dodgers, printed leaflets and such about the public thoroughfares and dooryards without any thought of the appearance of these places when the wind gets busy and blows the bits of paper about, on the part of men who come into the borough from distant points, will be among the items taken up by the next session of the Borough Council.

A movement has been started by Oscar Runyon, a North avenue merchant, tending toward the restriction of this habit, and possibly inducing the borough fathers to pass the necessary ordinance to prohibit the willful throwing of these leaflets about the streets or about people's yards, as the matter has become a public nuisance. Mr. Runyon expects to circulate a petition among the business men asking the Council to take such steps as may be necessary to stop the practice.

CHORAL UNION MAY BE ORGANIZED PERMANENTLY

Now that the Choral Union of bygone days is being brought together again for the purpose of furnishing music for the borough Independence Day celebration of next Monday, an effort is to be made to once more mould it into a permanent organization. Augustus F. Todd, who is training the singers for their part in the celebration, it is understood, will ask the opinion of the forty odd vocalists their idea on the matter before the "Fourth" is over, in view of making an effort during the coming fall to re-organize and furnish the boroughites with a number of concerts during next season.

Thomas Fosbre, the local agent of the Union News Company, has been laid up at his home at Plainfield for several days with an attack of rheumatism, but expects to be able to resume work the first of the week.

THOUGHT HE WAS A SECRET SERVICE AGENT

Laboring under the delusion that he was a secret service agent, Walter W. Elliott, of Piscataway township, was placed under arrest yesterday afternoon on the complaint of Overseer of the Poor John M. Dayton, also of the township. Elliot was taken to the borough lockup by Constable Robert Pierce, of New Market, and so determined was Elliott's mind made up that he was employed by the Federal authorities that he made boasts of the fact that he had landed Pierce at last.

Elliott was later examined by Dr. M. J. Whitford and Dr. J. T. Longbouthem, both of the borough, who found the man to be insane. Papers of committment to the State Hospital at Trenton were made out by Recorder David S. Campbell, before whom the man had been brought.

PERSONAL MENTION.

Charles Bacon, recently appointed manager of the Park Hotel Stables, and for several years a resident of Chatham street, North Plainfield, has moved to an apartment in the Linke building, this borough.

Rev. T. E. Vassar, of New Market, is ill at his home.

Isaac Cohen, of Brooklyn, has leased the house of the Standard Investment Company on Front street, near Washington avenue, the rental being made through the Tinsman agency.

Mrs. Charles Vail, of Washington avenue, is spending a month visiting her brother, Herman Egerland, of Ridgefield Park.

Mr. and Mrs. George Hubberly, of Allentown, Pa., have returned home after visiting Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Smith. The visitors made the trip both ways on motorcycle.

George W. Day, Jr., and family have moved from the Kuldoshes flats on North avenue to the former Stephen's house on Front street.

Mrs. George Tamcamcohn, of New Market road, is confined to her home with illness.

A. L. Basten, of Yonkers, N. Y. have moved into one of the dwellings of the bungalow type on Dunellen avenue, the rental being made through the Fedderman agency.

Miss Hannah Nelson, of New Market, has returned home from her studies at college.

Mrs. F. B. Latham has returned home after spending several weeks visiting her parents at Bell Plain, Ia.

William Corriell, of Dunham's Corners has returned home after spending the past week visiting his parents Mr. and Mrs. Stewart Corriell, of Madison avenue.

Councilman Richard M. Ryan and family left yesterday for their annual vacation along the shore.

Mrs. Francis Harrison and daughter, Miss Gladys Harrison, left yesterday for Oklahoma, where they will visit Mrs. Harrison's son, George. The trip will extend over the next month.

PARK GANG BUSY.

The park gang of the New Jersey Central has been busy for the past few days making improvements to the park around the local station adding much to the beauty of the spot.

PREPARING NEW DIRECTORY.

Representatives of the Richmond Directory Company have been in the borough for several days past compiling a list of local residents. A little co-operation on the part of the citizens of Dunellen will aid materially in creating the opportunity of having an up-to-date directory for the borough.

NEW POSTMASTER.

Joseph E. Kelly yesterday assumed the position of postmaster at the New Market postoffice, succeeding Miss Fannie Jenner, who has filled the office for a number of years in an efficient manner. The last Democrat to hold this office was Dr. W. I. Nelson. Mr. Kelly was kept busy yesterday receiving the congratulations of his many friends.

OFFICERS ELECTED.

Lakeside Council, D. of L., of New Market, met last evening in regular session, transacting considerable routine business, as well as electing officers. The installation exercises will be held at the next meeting.

STORM SEWER COMPLETED.

The storm sewer on Front street has been completed by the contractor, T. Foster Callahan. The completion of this work makes a great improvement on this growing thoroughfare, several houses having been constructed here during the past few days.

SENTENCE SUSPENDED.

Mike Garaska was also arraigned last evening before Recorder Campbell, complaint having been made against him by Ernest Kepler. It appears that Garaska had been in the habit of allowing one of his cows to run abroad in the streets, and finally managed to break down a fence belonging to Mr. Kepler. Recorder Campbell issued a severe reprimand to Garaska and suspended sentence.

'Plains & Fanwood.

The regular meeting of the Junior O. U. A. M. will be held in the lodge rooms in Excelsior Hall, tonight. The installation of the new officers for the ensuing year will be made.

Ira G. Walker, president of the Township Committee, confirmed yesterday the rumor that Florence O'Sullivan, who has been a member of the Plainfield police force for several years, had been engaged as marshal in the 'Plains. He will start on his new duties on July 4. It is probable that he will also be the truant officer for the local schools.

The Rev. J. Madison Hare, who returned today from a two weeks' vacation, has announced that he has secured Governor Fielder's promise to be the principal speaker at the "community picnic" of all the local churches to be held on August 11. Some one hundred and fifty people saw the entertainment of the local Boy Scouts in the Parish House, last night, and were pleased with the whole program, from the sketch of an hour in a Bowery night school to one entitled "The King's Wardrobe," supposed to be staged on the Island of Nowhere. In their monologue and dialogue parts the boys also showed to advantage. Especially was the selections of the orchestra well received, the music being well rendered. The proceeds from the admissions and the ice cream booth total about $50, and the Scouts are now going ahead to make their plans for the two weeks' camping trip to Forest Hill Lakes during August.

The local stores will remain open several hours later tomorrow night, as they will nearly all be closed on Monday in observance of the Fourth of July.

The All Saints' Altar Guild will meet in the Episcopal church tomorrow afternoon.

Work has been started on the excavating of a cellar for a two and a half story house on Russell road, near Midway avenue. The contract for the building has not yet been awarded by James Miniszek, who is having the dwelling erected. Mr. Miniszek owns all of the remaining building lots in that section of the borough known as block 1, having acquired them early in the spring from the H. C. Lockwood Co., and the house is only the forerunner of others to follow shortly.

The bungalow on King street, formerly occupied by John Edris, has been purchased by John Leoffler, of Jersey City, who will take possession early next month.

THE BITE OF A SNAKE.

How to Tell if It is Poisonous and the Way to Treat It.

If you should be so unfortunate as to be bitten by a snake and were not quite certain what sort of a snake it was, whether poisonous or of the so called harmless variety, look at the injury. If there are four punctures or even three the chances are that it was not a venomous snake, but if there are only two punctures it is probable you have been bitten by an extremely poisonous snake. While this does not always hold good, as a nonpoisonous snake may have had opportunity to make only two incisions with his four biting teeth, it is best to take no chances at all.

The poisonous snake has but two deadly fangs, generally in the upper jaw. But, no matter what sort of a snake bites you, the head of that snake should wherever possible be kept for identification. If, as is generally the case, the bite is on an extremity, tie one or more ligatures—preferably of broad rubber bands—above the injury. Incise deeply, cutting across the puncture for at least one inch and well beyond the depth reached by the fang. Next wash in running water, manipulating the part to promote free bleeding. If running water is not available suck the wound; then rinse the mouth thoroughly with a solution of potassium permanganate. Now wash the wound well and use in and around it the potassium permanganate solution or inject a 1 to 100 solution of chromic acid, being careful to infiltrate completely not only the wound, but also the surrounding tissues.

Do not give ammonia. Stimulate with small doses of whisky if indicated, but do not overdose, as more persons have been killed by taking large quantities of whisky than by snake bite. When positively certain the poison has been removed from the wound loosen cautiously the ligatures, that nearest the heart first, but do not remove them so that they may be again tightened if symptoms recur. In all cases the victim must have the best surgical c re. The wound should be packed with ant[illegible] Tribune.

THE BETTER MAN.

Story of Two Aspirants For a Place on the Boat Crew.

A few seasons ago, says a prominent crew coach in Outing, two men were competing closely for a seat in the "varsity" boat. One day I called them together and said:

"Just now you two men are working equally well in the boat, but one has a better scholarship standing than the other, and to me that seems to indicate that one of you has a little more personal pride than the other."

As a matter of fact, the man who was not up to the scratch in his work was a bit the better of the two as far as smoothness in the boat was concerned. I thought the incident might cause him to pick up in his classes. It did not. When the time came to make a final selection of the eight I again called the pair in to see me.

"It's still hard to decide between you two. I would just as soon have you throw a coin to decide the winner," I said.

The man with the poor scholarship record was the first to speak.

"That's all right with me," he said.

The other man thought for a minute. I saw his mouth go tight. Then he said:

"No, sir; that doesn't suit me. One of us must be the best man. I want to know which and to know why I am not the best man."

Some people would probably have thought that fellow conceited, but not if they knew what it means for a youngster to put in months and months of hard training for a crew. The second man was of a quiet type, but after he spoke I knew the thing that every coach is most anxious to find out—that he was the kind who would be pulling hardest when his lungs were feeling like bursting in that last hard half mile. You can guess which man got the place. The man who did not was too easily satisfied.

Detecting Erasures.

If paper upon which erasures of writing have been made is exposed to the vapor of iodine the roughened surface takes a different tint from that portion which has not been tampered with. If the erasure has been lightly made, only the ink or pencil lead being rubbed away and the mark left in the fiber of the paper, iodine vapor causes the writing to reappear. This is because wherever the paper has been roughened more iodine is absorbed than by a smooth surface. This test is effective within three minutes after the making of the alteration.—Exchange.

A Veritable Scheme.

"How do you get your daughter's beau to go home so early, Bjones?"

"I have a trained phonograph, which plays 'Home, Sweet Home,' at 10, 'Tramp, Tramp, Tramp,' at 10:15 and 'Johnny, Get Your Gun,' at 10:30."—Seattle Star.

Man's Advantage.

One advantage a man has is that whenever he wants anything in the house he can always call to his wife and she'll tell him just where it is, but when a woman wants anything herself she has to hunt for it.—Detroit Free Press.

SERVILE FUNCTIONS.

"You may break, you may shatter, the vase if you will——"

He paused and bent a severe look upon his young wife.

"But it is customary in our station of life," he went on, "to leave that sort of thing to servants!"

The woman, on her part, bit her lip chagrinedly, but she spake never a word.

TREATMENT.

"Hum, yes," said His Majesty, "I'm languid—out of sorts. Nothing seems to interest me."

"In that case," said the Court Physician, "I should recommend an imbroglio."

Then the war-clouds began to get busy, and the diplomats hunted up their umbrellas.

"Now," said the Monarch, "I feel like a fighting-cock! Good old Family Physician!"

THE FIRST PERSONALLY CONDUCTED TOUR.

AMBIGUOUS.

Temperance Lecturer (in impassioned speech)—Perhaps there is someone in this very assemblage who has a bottle of the vile liquid in his pocket!

A KINDLY SCRIBE.

"The editor of the Weekly Plaindealer is a charitable sort of feller," commented honest Farmer Hornbeak, in the midst of his perusal of the village newspaper, wherein he had encountered an example of the linotype's peculiar perversities. "In his article on the death of Earl Dabsack who, betwixt me and you, hadn't much to recommend him except that he wasn't quite as bad sometimes as he was others, he says that the deceased was generally regarded as hijjjdyt89*hd kkisocknnwUyjjagggy bentzt.'

"And I guess that's about as near as anybody could get to making an estimate of the departed without hurting his relative's feelings."

WHY THEY GO.

First American Traveler.—Been to Europe this year?

Second Ditto—Yep.

"Any new restaurants?"

LOVE.

She—I hate you, hate you, hate you despise you, loathe you!

He—When will the wedding be, dearest?

The Harem Skirt on a Sloppy Day.

BRILLIANT.

"Clever——?"

"Oh! yes. She is so bright that she can actually say 'cute things into an ear-trumpet!"

SAME OLD STORY.

She—How did they ever come to marry?

He—Oh, it's the same old story. Started out to be good friends, you know, and later on changed their minds.

EASILY STATED.

Mrs. Stone—What is the difference between an investment and a speculation, dear?

Kirby Stone—If you lose, it's a speculation.

HIS REWARD.

"It's an unsatisfactory, disappointing kind of a world," said the old soldier. "I fought four years for the Union. I was in sixteen battles, including Antietam, Gettysburg, Fredericksburg, and The Wilderness. I was wounded twice and spent four months in Andersonville. I tramped hundreds of miles in the dust and the mud and the snow. I got rheumatism from sleeping in the wet, and I almost died with typhoid. I lived two days on three pieces of hardtack, and ate salt pork that wasn't fit for a dog.

"I enlisted as a corporal and came out of the war a private, and then they spelled my name wrong on my discharge papers."

REFORMED FOR FAIR.

"My wife married me to reform me."

"Did she succeed?"

"Yes, thoroughly. I wouldn't marry again if I lived to be as old as [illegible]"

NELSON RUNYON.

Beloved, honored and respected by his fellow men for his exemplary qualities, Nelson Runyon, the dean of Plainfield lawyers, who was buried yesterday, is mourned by hundreds who were proud to claim him as a friend. A man of irreproachable character, the benefactor of the poor, and an adviser of unusual merit, his loss will be keenly felt and his name will not soon be forgotten.

Mr. Runyon was a self-made man; one who was born of poor parents on a farm in Somerset county. He was blessed with parents who were rich in spirit, if not in material wealth, and whose Christian guidance led him through a righteous path up to the time he sought to shoulder his own burdens. Early in life he was attracted to the law, and by dint of hard work and perseverance he managed to gain enough knowledge of Blackstone to qualify for admittance to the New Jersey bar in 1862, more than a half century ago. Mr. Runyon's aim in life was attained only after he had encountered strife and hardship and had suffered the interruption of serving for nine months as a volunteer in the Civil War.

Since he entered upon his professional career at the age of twenty-two his advance had been rapid, notable among his achievements being his appointment as Plainfield's first city clerk and afterwards his service as police court judge.

The manner in which he performed his public duties won for him many life-long friends and his successors have for him nothing but praise for his honesty and ability. Plainfield as a city occupied first place in his mind and he was always ready to lend a helping hand to anything that would further the interests of the municipality. His name is linked with many of the prominent events in Plainfield's history from the time he was instrumental in securing the city's charter up to the time when he was forced to retire because of failing health.

Words of commendation advanced by the two Assemblymen who appeared here Tuesday night, representing the Legislative Committee appointed to survey existing municipal conditions, should go a long way toward allaying the fear entertained by some that the city's system of finance did not come up to the standard. Speaker Carlton Godfrey, of the House of Assembly, is authority for the statement that Plainfield is very well managed; in fact, managed better than any other municipality in the State. No little amount of surprise was expressed by the investigating committee when City Treasurer William F. Arnold gave his answers to questions directed at him, and he demonstrated that Plainfield was in good condition financially. For this status of affairs, a large part of the credit reflects on Mr. Arnold. He bore the bulk of the burden in perfecting the present system of city accounting and to his conscientious and expert management we must attribute the major portion of the praise for our commendable position.

It cannot be recalled when a prosecutor of the pleas in New Jersey has been convicted of malfeasance in office, until this week, when Matthew Jefferson, who occupied that position in Cape May county, was found guilty. As an exchange says, it is almost unprecedented for the Attorney-General of the State to appear in court in the peculiar circumstances obtaining in this case. That the task was distasteful to Mr. Wescott, and also to Prosecutor Kraft, of Camden county, who assisted him, is not to be doubted, but a high sense of public duty called for the exercise of their talents in upholding the fair name of the courts. The responsibility of deciding the issue rested with the jury. The moral of this conviction is that no officer of the court should lay himself open to suspicion by irregular practices, nor permit a subordinate to use his authority for any purpose of "graft."

A city where real estate agents' signs "For Sale" and "To Let" do not placard unoccupied buildings gives a new-comer a better impression of the place than one in which the vacant dwellings are so publicly advertised as they are in Plainfield. There are many more such signs displayed here than are needed and strangers are wont to inquire the reason why so many dwellings are vacant. Real estate men do not encourage the display of such signs, and the standing of the city is certainly injured by the practice, for it gives the impression that something is wrong with Plainfield real estate, which some recent prices have proven is not the case.

A Philadelphia newspaper nominates Speaker Godfrey for Governor in the belief that he would be a strong candidate in the North Jersey counties. If Mr. Godfrey should run on the Morris Canal platform he constructed, or rather tried to construct, in the Legislature last winter, he might get one Republican vote in ten in Hudson, though the Jersey Journal, one of the leading papers in the State expresses serious doubts about it. In Essex, Passaic, Bergen and probably Union he would fare no better. Godfrey would be the easiest mark the Democrats ever had in New Jersey.

The Paterson Press bemoans the fact that the taxes keep right on going up, although the people seem to get little for their money. Plainfielders probably will find that there has been little increase in the rate in this city, and the prospects are that present valuations will be advanced only slightly, if at all.

Former Governor J. Franklin Fort, president of the Plainfield Press Company, has written the contributed editorial for tomorrow, taking a patriotic topic as his subject.

It's too bad there isn't a censor in Mexico. If there was one, we might be able to learn the truth about conditions there.

Plainfield's Milk Supply and Inspection

By Ernest Higgins.

Few of us who live in Plainfield know much about the nine thousand quarts of milk that are supplied to us daily by nine creameries and three hundred and sixty-five outlaying dairies. If we get it regularly and find it sweet, we think no more about it.

Nevertheless, great care must be taken in supplying this universal food, because it is a very willing carrier of contagious diseases such as diphtheria, tuberculosis, scarlet and typhoid fevers.

State authorities say that if the milk producer has a clean, healthy herd, a sanitary barn to house them in, a well-drained barnyard, an abundant, unpolluted water supply, and a separate house to handle his product in, his milk will be safe, provided he is clean and healthy himself, uses only sterilized utensils and immediately cools the milk to fifty degrees Fahrenheit or lower.

This method should be further continued by shipping the milk in cold sterilized bottles to customers, who would keep the milk cool and covered until they used it, and then send the bottles back washed.

If these precautions were carried out, our milk supply would need no attention. But, as usual, the ideal is not the actual. Many of the farmers in this part of New Jersey keep cows to turn their coarse fodder into manure. Milk is regarded as merely a by-product, and, consequently, much care is not taken.

Every time a dirty man milks an unkempt cow in an unsanitary pail, bacteria, which are on all dust and dirt, will get in the milk and immediately start to multiply rapidly if the temperature of the fluid is left above fifty degrees. Bacteria either lie dormant or multiply slowly in the colder temperatures.

In the morning the milk goes to the creamery to be measured, and later to be sent to the cities.

Plainfield, like many other cities, has a standard for the number of bacteria permissible in milk. Our limit is 150,000 bacteria per cubic centimeter. If the creamery man knows his milk exceeds the count, he can kill many of the bacteria by pasteurization. He does this by heating the milk to a least 145 degrees for thirty minutes, and then suddenly cooling it down to below fifty degrees. This is a necessary and valuable process for baby's milk, providing clean, raw milk is used; but many authorities disapprove of it as a method to try to doctor up contaminated milk. Of course, it does kill the contagious disease germs, keeps the milk from souring, and is much better than using chemical preservatives; but, in the first place, prevention is better than cure, and sanitary methods keep the count down and the harmful germs at a distance.

Secondly, souring is Nature's own method for destroying any harmful bacteria that might have found their way in. Thus, if the bacteria that protect the milk are destroyed, it will be left like a city without a police force. Pasteurized milk is considered unsafe after twenty-four hours.

To insure that the milk is being produced as ideally as possible, the Board of Health keeps a rather close watch over the supply.

At the two most unexpected times in a month the inspectors go around to the wagons and stores, takng sample bottles at random. They bring these in to the laboratory, where the milk is first strained through cotton to catch the sediment. This piece of cotton is sent to the dealer with the label rating the condtion of his milk as "none," "slight," "dirty," etc. After taking the specific gravity, eighteen cubic centimeters from each sample are put in a small, long-necked bottle. Seventeen and six-tenths cubic centimeters of sulphuric acid is added, and after shaking, the bottles are put in an electric centrifuge, and whirled around 1,500 times in five minutes. As the sulphuric acid has dissolved all in the milk except the light fat, the fat is brought to the neck. The bottles are removed, filled full with hot water, spun again for a minute, and this time the amount can be read by means of a graduated scale on the neck of the flask. This process is called the "Babcock Test," and determines the quality of the milk. In Plainfield this fat should be at least three per cent. of the milk. The other standards are: Water, not over 88½ per cent., and milk solids, that is all the fats, sugar and proteds, not under 11½ per cent.

To see what care has been taken with the milk, the number of bacteria is counted. This is done by diluting one cubic centimeter of the milk from 100 to 10,000 times and letting the bacteria grow in a sterilized dish for about thirty-five hours or longer. After the time is up, the number of bacteria in this diluted portion is counted, and the count is multiplied by the number of times it was diluted. The answer is the true number of bacteria in one cubic centimeter of the milk and is called the "count."

Every month each man's average is calculated, rated, printed and sent to him. If his milk has been found below grade, his supply is stopped until he brings it up again. If he disobeys, he is prosecuted.

Last month's report showed that six of our milks came from tuberculin tested cows, that is, the cattle had been tested for tuberculin, and if there had been any that had had it, they had been killed, leaving only the healthy ones. This safeguards the milk from tuberculosis germs, and it is desired that all the cows that supply us should be so tested. The report further showed the milk to be of average good quality, the quantity of fats running from 3 2-10 per cent. to 5 4-10 per cent. Of the twenty-five supplies three are pasteurized. Six of the raw milks showed a tendency to carelessness, but sixteen, including our one certified milk, showed what we want, care in production.

The meaning of "certified milk" is often confused. A certified milk is a raw milk produced under the inspection of a medical board appointed by the State. The Board requires from the producer written statements of the cows' health made by a competent man, and an account of all milk analyses made. They further see that everything is done in a prescribed way. This all makes "certified milk" expensive as well as safe.

To verify these laboratory reports, the inspectors make frequent visits to the dairies and creameries to see that the producers are keeping their methods up to the standard. These amounted to 329 last year.

Cleanliness is the key to the ideal supply. If the dairyman has healthy, tuberculn tested stock, uses sanitary methods and sterilized utensils, the danger of infection from milk would be reduced to a minimum, and health standards would climb to firmer base; but the consumer must not forget that he, too, must take care of the milk and bottles after he gets them.

Books consulted for theory—Dictionary; Encyclopaedia Britannica; U. S. Agricultural Bulletns, No. 413 ("Care of Milk"), No. 602 ("Beter Milk"); N. J. State Experimental Station Circular, No. 116 ("Clean Milk"); articles in Ladies' Home Journal, Science, Survey, Country Life. Books and persons I consulted and interviewed to get conditions in Plainfield—N. J. Randolph Chandler, health officer in Plainfield, Miss Harriet O. Mattison, assistant health officer; John Casey, inspector; several creamery men; numerous farmers; different housewives; Plainfield Milk Reports, 1914 (Yearly), March, 1915 (Monthly).

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR FESTIVAL A SUCCESS

The annual festival given by the Christian Endeavor Society, of Warren chapel yesterday afternoon and night, was the most successful of its kind ever held in this city. Over 1,000 plates of ice cream and large quantities of cake and home-made candy and punch being sold throughout the time. The large lawn was beautifully illuminated with colored electric lights, Japanese lanterns, and decorated with bunting and red rambler roses. The tables were decorated with pink rambler roses, a gift from the gardens of Jacob Kettering. The Dutch Arms Band furnished music for the event. As a result a substantial sum was realized.

The following members of the church had charge of the various booths: Ice cream: Lewis J. Stites, Charles Holstein, Allan Van Winkle, John Richards and George Van Horn; cake table, Mrs. Joseph W. Gavett, Mrs. Benjamin Moore, Mrs. A. J. Stiglitz, Mrs. Lewis J. Stites, Mrs. Charles Herring, Mrs. Kate Schenck and Mrs. George Van Horn, fruit punch, Miss Elsie Vandenberg, Willard Bach and Ralph Conover; candy, Miss Ida Wheeler, Miss A. H. Kirby, Miss Adelaide Stiglitz and Miss Bertha Martin and Miss Letha Hoagland. Miss Arline Giddis was cashier during the evening and Mrs. J. O. McKelvey was cashier during the afternoon. The large corps of waitresses were in charge of Miss Dolly Bolsterli. The entire affair was capably managed by Theodore J. Martin, who was general chairman.

The man or woman who have not the habit of "trying again" very often fail as want advertisers, wholly for that reason.

KEEPS MR. WILSON IN TOUCH WITH EUROPE

Colonel House, Confidential Adviser of the President.

Colonel Edward M. House, who has recently returned from a secret mission abroad, is doubtless closer than a cabinet officer as a presidential adviser He is a very intimate, yet not an old friend of the president, who first met him about three years ago.

All that officials in Washington have admitted concerning Colonel House's visit to Europe has been that he was expected while there to look into the question of co-ordinating American relief work abroad.

Colonel House admitted that he had talked with leading government officials of Germany, France and England, © 1915, by American Press Association.

COLONEL EDWARD M. HOUSE.

but denied that his trip to Europe was in any way connected with a possible mission looking toward peace or that he was the personal emissary of President Wilson. "I did not talk peace, and that was not my mission abroad," Colonel House declared.

It is known that Colonel House has made frequent confidential reports to the president on the sentiment toward peace, following his visit to the capitals of the various nations. These reports have told particularly of the results of interviews with government officials in the different countries.

The president has relied on Colonel House more than upon any other one man for correct information concerning official and popular opinion in the belligerent nations. Through the colonel he has kept in very close touch with peace discussions, with the hope of urging his original offer of mediation at the proper time.

Colonel House was born in Houston, Tex., in 1858, and was graduated from Cornell college in 1881. For years he was active in Texas politics, although he always refused to run for any office himself. He is indeed a mystery in politics, for he wants nothing for himself. He has been mentioned as a possible successor to Mr. Bryan as secretary of state, but it is doubtful if he would accept the office.

scouts who are peacefully sleeping in an orchard just as if no such thing as war existed. There are, of course, plenty of sentries stationed about to give quick warning in case the enemy is scented. There is more of the old romance of war in adventures of this sort as well no doubt as a sense of relief from the close confinement of underground warfare.

PLANS ARE FRUSTRATED

acting as an outside guard and emissary, nineteen-year-old Hugh Kelley, of 135 Second street, Elizabeth, today occupies a cell in the same tier with Connors, unable to furnish the $1,000 bail under which he was held by the county authorities pending an investigation.

That the delivery was premeditated and designed not only to release Connors, but all of the other prisoners in his tier, is the belief of the county officials and a thorough probe has been ordered by Prosecutor Alfred A. Stein. Kelley was released from the county jail last Sunday, following the completion of a sentence levied on him by Police Court Justice Mahon, of Elizabeth. While an inmate of the institution he became unusually chummy with Connors, but nothing was thought of the acquaintanceship as prisoners of all classes make it a rule to "get in right" with the "Windy City" notable and when he bade Connors farewell at the prison door Sunday his name was forgotten, apparently, by all save Connors.

Acting Warden Johnson chanced to look out of one of the back windows of a witness room in the county court house late yesterday afternoon and his attention was attracted to a "string" made up of bottles, rags and other articles which formed a chain extending from the yard to a cell window. Investigation revealed hacksaws and other implements useful to a jail-breaker, wrapped in old linen, and also a bottle of whiskey. A note attached to the string was addressed to Connors informing him that his fellow-conspirator had done his share in carrying out an agreement that had evidently been arrived at. The note was signed "You-Know." The finger of suspicion was directed at Kelley and the county authorities are said to have admitted that their man has since made a confession.

This is not the first time that Connors has headed an attempt at jail delivery and for this reason a careful espionage has been kept over him during his confinement in Elizabeth. He was given one of the cells in the remotest part of the jail and despite the fact that he has the reputation of being one of the best behaved prisoners, the keepers have been cautioned against giving him any unusual liberties.

MANY CHANGES MADE IN STATE DEPARTMENT

The laws providing for a combining of State departments in a way that would promote economy and greater efficiency went into effect yesterday, when a large number of changes were made. As a result, former Mayor Newton B. Smalley, of North Plainfield, who has been serving on the Riparian Commission, together with several others, go out of office, that board being combined with one known as Commerce and Navigation. William L. Saunders, of North Plainfield, is a member of the new commission, having been transferred from the New Jersey Harbor Commission.

Henry C. White, also of North Plainfield, is a member of the Conservation and Development Commission. There are many other changes, but none in which Plainfielders are directly concerned. The selection of the new State Board of Health has been deferred until July 13. Dr. R. B. Fitz Randolph has been chosen as the acting director. A committee will submit a general reorganization plan for the new State Board of Taxes and Assessments.

RUNYON TO COMPETE AT NEW BRUNSWICK; ALSO RALPH GREEN AND "BILL" DANIELS

Ralph Runyon, the local athlete, who is considered as good a pole vaulter as any in the country, will compete in the New Brunswick meet on Independence Day. It was thought at first that illness would prevent his entrance in this athletic carnival as it did in the Cambridge trials of last Saturday. However, Ralph states that he is in fine fettle and is going to try his level best to "bring home the bacon."

There are some good men entered in the pole vault, one in particular being Curtis of the N. Y. A. C. Runyon says he must beat this fellow if he wishes to leave his chance of getting a free trip to the Panama-Pacific Exposition unimpaired. In the recent list of N. Y. A. C. entrants, the name of Curtis does not appear, but those of W. Stark and Frank Gargan do. Gargan is the senior metropolitan champion in the pole vault. Other pole vaulters entered are Eugene Jennings, of the Millrose A. A., and S. K. Caldwell, the former Cornell crack. Runyon has also entered the high jump, but this branch of sport is a side issue with him.

Craig Blair, P. H. S. '14, and now a Penn State boy, will not compete on Monday, although carded to do so. He has obtained a position for the summer with a concern near Asbury Park. Ralph Greene, P. H. S. '15, a very fast track man, is entered in the meet, his principal entrance being in the 100-yard dash. That Greene should register a first place is the opinion of his many followers. Bill Daniels may possibly compete, too. He is the lad who put the P. H. S. 1915 track team on the map.

Scattered Sport Gleanings

For the first time in the last couple of years we have a real juicy baseball morsel in store for us over the week end. When the Hope Chapel and T. A. B. City Leaguers meet at Avon Park tomorrow afternoon the feathers will fly and it's one safe bet that this encounter will go a long way toward reviving the interest between these two factions which waxed so warm when the twentieth century blew in upon us when baseball was at its zenith around this burg. Plenty of the old time rivalry is said to be lurking around just at present and it would not be a great surprise to see it come to the surface tomorrow afternoon.

From the number of swimming enthusiasts we see wandering out in the direction of the High School every night we take it that their is something brewing along the aquatic line. Possibility we're going to have a City Swimming League and if such is the case it would be welcomed with open arms by followers of the water pastime in this burg. Anyone giving the stars the once-over at the High School tank will be able to glean ample proof of the fact that we're right up with the big guns in the water racing art.

'Smatter with the Y. M. C. A. in the baseball field this year? It looks rather strange to see an apparently healthy City Baseball League in operation without the Association boys entered. Heretofore the youths sporting the Y. M. C. A. woolens have been lively contenders for whatver city honors there are floating around and we can't just seem to get used to having them under cover.

Celebrating the Fourth of July on the fifth day of the month appears to have added zest to the annual program of sports for that occasion. Plenty of good baseball with some excellent side issues along the sport line are in store for those who intend to idle around the Queen City over the week end. Variety is the keynote and indications point to two full afternoons, tomorrow and Monday.

Looks to us as though that Royal A. C. aggregation was coming in to claim its share of the limelight once more. The ebony colored ballists were favorites with local fandom a couple of years ago and their entrance completes a campaign for a revival of interest in the national sport around here. Some good teams are being singled out as opponents by Manager Kline and with the aid of the proper support he intends to make a go of it again.

It is gratifying to note the interest being taken in the formation of a roster for the Parker Field juvenile ball leagues this season and we're pretty safe in declaring that there's going to be something doing on the Randolph road lot in the near future.

INTEREST KEEN IN RACE FOR GOLF COMMITTEE CUP

The competition for the cup offered by the Golf Committee of the Plainfield Country Club to the member who registers the greatest number of points during the season will be continued tomorrow.

L. G. Carman now leads with 12½ points, a comfortable advantage over his nearest competitor, C. E. Lipscomb, who has 7½ points. D. O. Rogers and Morris J. Dumont are tied for third position, each having 7 points.

RANDOLPH VS. SCANLON.

Doc Scanlan, the former Brooklyn star, who has been added to the pitching staff of the Degnon Grays, will oppose Cliff Randolph, of Plainfield, star twirler of the Atlantic League, this Sunday, at Degnon Field, three blocks east of the Jackson avenue station of the new Steinway Tunnel, Long Island City, when the Degnon Grays and the Perth Amboy nines clash. Billy Pfau's Jerseyites have played great ball so far this season, and will have to travel at top speed if they expect to annex Sunday's laurels. Bob Adler, Heinie Batch, Al Klett and Billy Gilbert will play with the Grays.

KRAMER STILL KING.

Newark, July 2.—When Frank Kramer defeated Alf Goullet, of Australia, in a match bicycle race at the Newark Velodrome last night he disposed of a contestant who approached his class as a match race rider. The Yankee won in straight heats, and in the first he equaled the world's record for an eighth of a mile.

Kramer won the two-mile open race. Goullet was second, McNamara third, and Marcel Dupuy, of France, fourth. In this finish Kramer lowered the furlong record a fifth of a second.

PRESIDENT'S CUP PLAY.

The competition for the President's cup will be resumed at the Park Golf Club, tomorrow.

ANOTHER WATER RECORD.

Indianapolis, Ind., July 2.—C. Browne, of the Hamilton Club, Chicago, broke the Central Association A. A. U. record for the one-mile swim yesterday afternoon at Broad Ripple Pool. He swam the distance in 25:59 2-5, providing the feature performance of the final program of the 1915 tournament. The old record was 27:14 2-5, made by J. J. Handy at Chicago in 1909.

LOCALS HAD NIGHT OFF.

Rahway, July 2.—Rain prevented the outdoor tennis scheduled for Wednesday night in the night tournament of the Ilderan Outing Club. Last night Copeland and Campbell defeated Brown and Meyers, 6-3, 4-6, 6-2. E. Randall and B. Throckmorton defeated Nelson and Whitney, 6-3, 6-8, 6-4.

SHAWKEY WANTS RAISE.

Kane, Pa., July 2.—Shawkey, the pitcher released by the Athletics to the New York Americans, instead of reporting to the Yankees, has come to his home near here. He says he will not report unless his salary is increased. He is considering a Federal League offer.

HANNON MAY PERFORM.

It is rumored that Eddie Hannon, the Bound Brook lad, will play first base for the T. A. B. S. tomorrow. He is eligible but Manager Moynihan could not be located to either confirm or deny the rumor.

To-morrow marks the third of the series of weekly tilts to be ndulged in by the local City Leaguers. It suffices to say that the results of each game are bound to contain some sweet surprises. Of course, the main ring of the big three will be the activities of the Hope Chapel and T. A. B. players, at Avon Park. These two eams are tied for the league's leadership, and either one has got to fall. Who will be dethroned? Dick Schoff will oppose Tone Benny, the ex-P. H. S. slabman and star of the last N. P. H. S.-P. H. S. series. Taken all in all, this encounter is going to be one swell attraction. The Saurer team plays Netherwood at the Emerson Avenue Field, and the West Enders must win this battle if they wish to adorn the win column. However, the boys from the "Orient" are playing good ball, and an exciting tilt is bound to be presented. The "winless" First Baptist aggregation claim that they are going to get rid of this nickname tomorrow at the expense of the Clinton Avenue team, and on the latter's field at that. "Benny" Rosenson says "It can't be done."

SPORT BRIEFS

SIGNS LIFE CONTRACT.

Philadelphia, July 2.—Erskine Mayer, who was married Wednesday night, spent the first day of his honeymoon taking the scalp of the Boston Braves for Philadelphia, 2 to 1, as a trophy for his bride, who was seated in the grandstand. Mayer had a battle with Ragan, and three times got out of trouble with the bases filled. Cravath brought the battle to a close by hitting a home run into the bleachers in the ninth.

WELSH-WHITE BOUT.

Freddy Welsh, the lightweight champion, will be pitted against Charley White, the hard-hitting boy from Chicago, in a ten-round boxing bout at the Brighton Beach track tomorrow night.

GAMES WANTED.

Lou Feiring, of 406 Central avenue, is manager of the Emerald A. C. and would like to hear from any team whose members average in age from 10 to 12 years.

MEREDITH'S FATHER TAUGHT HIM TO RUN; HE TAUGHT HIM WELL.

It is not generally known that Ted Meredith owes a great deal of his athletic ability to his father, J. E. Meredith, who has recently given up his position as coach at the Williamson school, near Philadelphia.

The elder Meredith has a rating as one of the best coaches in the Pennsylvania district. To the direction which he gave young Meredith's early athletic endeavors, can be attributed much of the success which has come to the youngster, who when still a small boy had an Olympic championship to his credit.

Although Ted was competitor in school athletics at an early age, he did not do so until he had his growth.

Many a school boy athlete hurts his future through putting a strain on his powers of endurance, and Meredith senior knew it.

MONTCLAIR GAME IS OFF; ANOTHER HAS BEEN BOOKED

A communication from "Midge" Kline received this morning says that the proposed game between the Royals and the Montclair Y. M. C. A., scheduled for Monday, is off and one with the All Stars substituted.

A row between the Montclair manager and his men is said to be the cause of the change.

BROTHERHOOD OF AMERICAN YEOMAN PLAN A PICNIC

A joint meeting of Queen City Homestead, Brotherhood of American Yeoman, and Watchung Homestead, Bound Brook, was held at the latter place, last night. Arrangements for the picnic and dance on July 5 at Wayside Park were completed. The features of the afternoon will be dancing, sports, games and a double-header in baseball between the St. Joseph nine, of North Plainfield, and Plainfield A. A., and Queen City Homestead versus Watchung Homestead, Bound Brook.

Several competitive contests have been arranged and the entries already point to some close scoring. Attractive and useful prizes have been donated for the winners in the different events. A large delegation from Raritan Homestead, Perth Amboy, will be on hand and a good time is assured all who attend.

SUNDAY ATTRACTION.

The local T. A. B. S. will play the St. Vincent team, of New York, at Avon Park, on Sunday at 3:30 p. m.

BENNY KAUFF "JUMPS" AGAIN; M'GRAW CAN'T USE HIM; TENER MAY CALL ANOTHER MEETING

John J. McGraw, (top right), President Tener and Benny Kauff.

Benny Kauff has jumped the Brooklyn Feds again. This time, however, the report will not create the excitement that followed the announcement not long ago that Benny was through with the Feds and was to be a member of the New York Giants. That mixup caused a great battle between the Feds and organized baseball, to be narrowly averted by the New York National League Club, which at first claimed it had signed Kauff legally, finally backing down.

Benny's latest escapade merely marks the foolish doings of a grand little ballplayer, who is doing everything he possibly can to put himself entirely outside the limits of either Federal League or organized baseball. Benny claims that the Brooklyn Federal League Club has not treated him according to agreement on a salary proposition. He also claims that the New York National League Club, under an agreement which it made with him, is legally bound to pay him a salary even though the National Commission has declared that Kauff cannot play with any team in organized baseball, under the regulations of the National agreement.

Kauff's latest jump came about when he found his bi-monthly salary check was short $500. Seeking the reason for the deduction, he was informed that the money was considered as the initial yearly payment on the $1,500 advanced to Kauff by the Indianapolis club when he signed a contract last season, which was for three years at an annual salary of $4,000. These payments were to be made by Kauff on July 1 each year, until the debt is liquidated.

Kauff promply informed the officials that any contract he may have had with the Indianapolis club became void when he signed a contract with the Tip-Tops at the training camp at Brown's Wells last spring. The Brookfeds' contract calls for $6,000 per season for three years. He considers the $1,500 received from Indianapolis nothing more than a bonus for signing the contract with the Brooklyn club.

When told yesterday at Ebbets Field that Benny Kauff intended to report to the Giants today Manager John J. McGraw, of the New York team, did not appear to be much excited.

"I do not see what I can do with Kauff," McGraw said. "When we tried to play him before the case was decided against us, and there has been no change in the situation since then. Kauff is a great ball player, and undoubtedly would strengthen the Giants if he could be used. But I cannot see where he will help us under the conditions which prevent us from playing him."

NEITHER PUT OUT NOR AN ASSIST FOR FIRST SACKER.

Kelher, first baseman of the Worcester team, had the distinction of playing through a recent New England league game with Fitchburg without a putout, assist or error.

Fitchburg won the game 5 to 4 and made it seven straight.

This is a record for fielding inactivity in organized baseball. Jiggs Donohue, first baseman of the White Sox, did not have a putout against New York in 1906, but he had one assist. Artie Hofman of the Cubs, in 1910, had no putout against Pittsburgh, but he dropped an assist from Tinker.

GEORGE TOWNE AFTER MATCH

Great Australian Anxious to Tackle the Best In America.

Two famous Australian sporting celebrities, George Towne, the oarsman, and Harold Baker, the swimmer, have arrived in Toronto. Towne has met practically all the best professional sculllers of recent years. Baker is a brother of Snowy Baker, the antipodean promoter of boxing and other sports.

Harold Baker holds the Australian swimming records from 100 to 500 yards. He has met the best European professionals. The men will visit the Canadian and American centers in quest of matches, as the war has stopped all contests in Australia. Towne was to row against Eddie Durnan of Toronto, who is the Canadian and American sculling champion.

Durnan is negotiating for a race with Frank Hagney, an antipodean sculler now in New York.

not only doing it well, but he is hitting very timely and hard in all games, and he has not missed one to date.

Players of the Wagner type are few in baseball. For though he has played long enough to warant his losing interest in his work, he is still aggressive and full of life and likes to win as well as he ever did.

Great as Larry Lajoie has been, he was never in the same class with Wagner, for the very good reason that he was never as versatile a player as the Flying Dutchman, who not only can hit and field, but run bases as well as any one.

What is more, there is a great difference in the spirit of the two veterans. There has always been something phlegmatic or even listless about Lajoie. He was an artist because he was a more graceful player than Wagner, but so far as effectiveness of play and help to the team is concerned there was never any comparison.

METHODIST EXCURSION FIRST OF THE SEASON

The first excursion to leave Plainfield this year for Asbury Park will be that of the First, Grace, Monroe Avenue and Dunellen Methodist churches, including Evona and Wilson Memorial chapels. They will leave by special trains on Thursday, July 8. These trains are scheduled to leave Dunellen at 8:04 a. m., Clinton Avenue, 8.06 a. m.; Grant Avenue, 8:09 a. m.; North Avenue, 8:12 a. m., and Netherwood, 8:15 a. m. On the return trip the trains will leave the beach at 7:10 and 7.15 p. m.

FINALLY GET TRAIN LOAD OF SUPPLIES TO MEXICO CITY

Washington, July 2.—Consul Shanklin and Charles O'Conner today succeeded in notifying the State Department they had finally gone into Mexico City. They left Pachuca two days ago. Consul Silliman at Vera Cruz notified the State Department today that a special train with twelve carloads of corn had left Vera Cruz for Pachuca yesterday. The Secretary of War of the Carranza government and the railroad officials at Vera Cruz gave special attention to the transportation of this shipmen,t giving it right of way over even military consignments.

KING'S DAUGHTERS MAKE AN APPEAL FOR AID

The regular meeting of the trustees of the City Unon of Kings' Daughters was held yesterday morning at 10 o'clock at the Day Nursery. Interesting reports were read and prospects for the work during the summer discussed. During the month of June 631 children have been cared for at the nursery. Clinics were held three times a week, Monday, Wednesday and Friday, with Dr. S. L. Titsworth and Dr. W. L. Pratt in charge.

The object of these clinics is for the mothers to bring their children to the nursery, where they are examined and weighed and given a formula. Each child is weighed three times a week to note the progress made. Any donations of green vegetables and money will be appreciated at the Nursery

WOMEN'S GUILD RECEIVE ENCOURAGING REPORTS

The final meeting of the Women's Guild of the Church of the Heavenly Rest was held yesterday afternoon in the parish house of the church. Mrs. William P. Grannatt, president of the guild, presided during the sesson, which was given over to the dscussion of routine matters and plans for next year. Encouraging reports from the various committees were read and heartily received. The committee in charge of the recent festival given on the lawn of the church reported that proceeds amounted to $100 to be added to the church fund.

Rev. Cortlandt H. Mallery, rector of the church, complimented the women on the splendid year's work just completed, and thanked them for their help in the many enterprizes in the church. Following the session refreshments were served. The guild will meet the first Thursday in October to resume their winter meetings.

MRS. SQUIER'S FUNERAL.

The funeral of Mrs. Amanda Grace Squier, wife of Frederick F. Squier, who died Tuesday, was held from her late home, 36 Grandview avenue, North Plainfield, this morning. The service was in charge of Rev. Dr. C. M. Anderson, pastor of the First M. E. church. The body was taken to Staten Island for interment.

ONE KILLED, THREE INJURED.

New York, July 2.—Mrs. Sarah Kaplan, of 68 Henry street, Brooklyn, was killed, and five men and three women injured when two speeding automobiles collided at Bedford avenue and Hayward street, Williamsburg, today.

I. H. Boehm and daughter, Mrs. David Husik, of Philadelphia, were visitors in this city yesterday.

SCHOOL READERS.

The Ones That Swayed the Boys of a Generation Ago.

STIRRING "PIECES TO SPEAK."

Favorite Selections of the Days of Yore Find No Favor In the Newer Books—Lament of an Old Timer and a Bookstore Chat.

Forty school weeks mean forty Friday afternoons. Forty Friday afternoons mean to the pupils in some schools near New York forty hated piece speaking occasions.

"What," asked the boy of Smith Apperson, pater, "shall I speak next time?"

"Why not recite Richard III. to his troops at Bosworth field?' Apperson answered confidently. "There's a piece with lots of slam and go to it. Or there is 'Spartacus to the Gladiators.'"

"Who was he, Spartacus?"

"Don't you know who Spartacus was? Look in your Fifth reader. It tells all about him there."

"Not in my reader," insisted the boy.

"Not in"— Mr. Apperson looked stumped, but he pulled himself together. "How about 'Freedom Shrieked When Kosciusko Fell?'" he asked. "Got that in your reader?"

"No, sir."

"And 'My Name Is Norval on the Grampian Hills?'"

"The Grampians are in Scotland, I believe, but who was Norval and why the limitation to his name?" the boy asked.

"Hum! And that 'Midnight In His Guarded Tent' when 'the Turk Lay Dreaming of the Hour.' Got that in your reader?"

"No, sir."

"What kind of reader have you got?" Smith Apperson demanded. "Once more. Does the 'Deep and Dark Blue Ocean' roll on through any of the pages of that expurgated edition they've palmed off on you for a reader?"

"Well, there is something about the ocean."

"Good; we've saved the ocean. How about 'I Give My Hand With My Heart In It?'"

"Pshaw! Everybody knows that piece."

"Yes, yes; then there is something besides waste paper in that reader. Does it by any chance cry to you from its pages to 'Strike for Your Altars and Your Fires?'"

"No, sir."

"My mistake," Smith Apperson exclaimed. "I asked you about that piece before. It's a great one too. I used to get it off regularly twice a term, and when I didn't do it some other boy did. Never a piece day came round but some one struck out for his altars and his fires. I'll get you a copy of the kind of reader I used to have."

Mr. Apperson went the next day into a downtown book store, known to him as a place where, if they did not have a book, they would get it for you if it was to be had.

"I want a copy of McGuffey's old Fifth reader," said he.

"So do I," replied the owner of the store, who knew Apperson well. "I'll buy a gross of them at a good price. Scarcely a week goes by that I do not have a call for that book or for some other old school book."

"How"— asked Mr. Apperson, "how do you account for it?"

"Well, it's this way," said the proprietor. "A father asks his boy something about what he himself had studied at school, thinking, probably, to test him. The boy fails to give the correct answer or says he never 'took' it in his grade. The father looks into the boy's book or books and finds, as perhaps in your case, that the stories in which he delighted are not included in the reader editions of today. Then he comes here to get a school book that is what he calls a real school book.

"For instance, only a few days ago a man came in for an old geography. He said the book his boy studied was absolutely of no account, historically at least.

"'What do you mean, history in a geography?'" I asked.

"'Why,' he replied, 'I asked my boy about the isthmus of Darien, and he had never heard of such a place; didn't know there had ever been anything of the sort. Of course he could and did tell me all about the isthmus of Panama, but Darien wasn't in his geography. Now, I want that boy to know there was an isthmus of Darien, and I don't want him to have to take his father's word for it. Give me an old geography, one of about thirty-five years ago.'

"I couldn't fill the order. Old school books are rare. Everybody wants them some to renew memories of their youth by reading over the old pieces, others because they want to show to their children what they had to go through when they themselves went to school.

"Webster's Speller, Sander's Reader and McGuffey's Reader are the particular books which seem to stay in the memories of the old boy and the old girl. But I can't sell them because I haven't got them."

"Then I reckon I'll have to give young Harry Smith Apperson my best information and belief, as lawyers say, about how 'Freedom shrieked when Kosciusko fell,' and so forth."

"Precisely, as you say."—New York Post.

Ponies! Ponies! Ponies!
Nothing But Ponies!

We are glad that our idea of awarding a Pony, Cart and Harness by popular vote was so well thought of by other people that there is now a second Pony Contest running along the same lines.

It makes the management of this theatre feel good to know that they are originators and not imitators.

The Pony that this theatre is interested in giving away comes from the famous Dunlap Pony Farms at Greenfield, Ohio, the largest Pony Farm in the world.

We are sure that the three ponies that are to be given away do not come from the Dunlap Farm.

The Pony proposition is a great deal like the picture proposition.

We show Paramount Pictures FIRST.

The other theatres show them 60 days later.

SAYS BRYAN WILL SUPPORT WISON FOR RE-ELECTION

Washington, July 2.—President Wilson will be renominated by acclamation in 1916, declared Senator Kern today when he passed through here enroute to his Virginia home. "The President will have no more ardent supporter for the nomination than William J. Bryan," he continued, "and no one whose support he will need more."

Senator Kern said that in his opinion nothing could prevent the President sweeping the country by an overwhelming majority in the election.

HALF THE NATION MAY BAN LIQUOR

Four More States Added to Prohibition the Past Year.

SOON EFFECTIVE IN FLORIDA

New Law In That State Prohibits Sale of Alcoholic Beverages Except In Sealed Packages of Less Than One-half Pint Each, Nor Can Liquor Be Drunk Where Sold.

During the last legislative year four states have been added to the fifteen states of the Union already that have prohibited the sale of alcoholic liquors, and in three other states and the territory of Alaska the way has been cleared for prohibition if the people so decide at the polls.

This will make one-half the country "dry," according to estimates after a careful canvass of the legislative activities of the various states. The canvass shows that prohibition was the principal subject considered in most of the states and that more time was given to it than to any other question by the lawmakers.

The legislatures of two states enacted statutory prohibition to become effective this year, and eight voted to submit the question of state wide prohibition to a referendum of the people. Of the latter, two established statutory prohibition, to become effective in the meantime. Four states where prohibition is already effective passed additional restrictive laws, and two of the five states where under constitutional amendment prohibition is to go into effect next year enacted necessary statutes for its enforcement. In six of the so called "wet" states statewide proposals met defeat.

The two states where direct prohibition laws were passed are Florida and Alabama. These whose legislatures voted to submit the question to the people are Idaho, Iowa, Montana, South Carolina, South Dakota, Utah, Vermont and the territory of Alaska. In Iowa the legislative resolution must be passed by the next succeeding legislature before the people can vote on it, but the state returned to statutory prohibition meanwhile through the repeal of the so called Mulct law. Idaho was also made "dry" meanwhile through statutory enactment. In Utah the bill was vetoed by the governor after the legislature adjourned. In South Carolina the vote will be taken at the election this year, in Montana, South Dakota, Vermont and Alaska in 1916, and Idaho in 1917.

Advertisements Barred.

The new Florida law goes into effect Oct. 1 and prohibits the sale of alcoholic beverages except in sealed packages of less than one-half pint each, nor can liquor be drunk on the premises where sold.

The Alabama law was passed over the veto of Governor Henderson. It becomes operative July 1. There was also passed over the governor's veto an act forbidding the publication of liquor advertisements in newspapers and periodicals, on billboards or in saloons.

In adopting statutory prohibition pending the constitutional amendment vote, Idaho enacted a process conceded to be more drastic than any ever attempted in the United States. It makes even ownership of liquor a misdemeanor and on second offense a felony.

The general assembly of South Carolina enacted a statute which makes effective in the state the provisions of the Webb Kenyon federal act against the shipment of liquor from "wet" to "dry" territory, South Carolina having now local option.

The state wide prohibition measure which the governor of Utah vetoed after the adjournment of the legislature was passed by large majorities in both houses. The legislature, however, placed on the statute books a law modeled after the Webb-Kenyon law and imposing heavy penalties for the shipment of liquor from "wet" to "dry" territory in the state.

Ban on Keg Parties.

The four prohibition states which decided to strengthen their present laws were Kansas, North Carolina, Tennessee and West Virginia. The last mentioned has perhaps the unique in prohibition legislation, one providing that the municipality where liquor is sold is liable for damages for injury to persons or property resulting from intoxication. The other is aimed at "keg parties" and imposes similar liability upon the owner of property where liquor is sold or given away.

North Carolina passed an "anti-jug" act which prohibits the shipment to and receipt by any one person of more than one quart of spirituous liquors and five gallons of malt beverage every fifteen days.

Tennessee passed an "ouster law" modeled after a Kansas statute, which provides for the removal from office of state, county or city officials who fail to enforce the laws of the state. The legislature also enacted measures for bidding social and fraternal clubs to dispense liquor or maintain lockers.

West Virginia enacted amendments to the local prohibition law forbidding a person to have liquor in a public place even for his own use. Nor hereafter can any one in West Virginia give a drink to another except in his own home.

Because it has had some use, and is, therefore, "second-hand," may not greatly impair its usefulness to you. So watch the "For Sale" ads.

MOLECULES AND HEAT.

Why Hot Water Dissolves Most Substances Quicker Than Cold.

Most housewives know that sugar will dissolve far more quickly in hot water than in cold, but very few know that salt will dissolve in cold water just as quickly as when the water is boiling. In this salt is somewhat of an exception, for most substances dissolve much more easily when water is hot.

The reason for this was a mystery in the middle ages, and it is only since the modern knowledge of molecules that it could be explained.

Heat is nothing more nor less than an increase in the speed with which the molecules are revolving. This is easily seen in molasses. When very cold it will hardly flow at all, when warmed it will pour slowly, but when boiling hot it will pour in a thin sirup almost as liquid as milk. In the same way boiling water is more liquid than cold water.

As dissolving a piece of sugar means that the sugar enters into the tiny spaces between the molecules of the water, the more quickly they are moving the easier it is for the sugar to get it. For, it must be remembered, you can fill a glass to a certain level, and after that put in two, three or even four lumps of sugar and the glass will be no fuller than before.

The reason for this is shown by merely thinking of the process on a large scale. Suppose a bowl were filled full of marbles. You could pour a lot of bird shot into it without making the marbles rise any higher in the bowl. The shot would be filling in all the little cracks between the marbles, and if you stirred the marbles slowly the shot would little by little find its place. That is like the sugar in cold water.

But if the marbles were being whirled around rapidly the shot would rapidly fill every place and the bowl would be full of shot. Yet the marbles would not be any higher in the bowl. Then, after all that you could pour water into the bowl and it would get into the small spaces between the round shot, and still the marbles would not be any higher in the bowl.

It is in this way that substances which have been dissolved find their way into the liquids into which they have been dissolved.—New York American.

A Luxurious Poorhouse.

Morden college, Blackheath, is the most luxuriously equipped almshouse in existence. Admission is strictly limited to merchants who have fallen on evil times. Mere clerks are not eligible, candidates being required to prove that they have been in a large way of business for themselves. Each member of the college draws a yearly allowance of £110 and on admission receives £25 worth of furniture for his two rooms, unless he prefers to bring his own. There are well trained men servants, and to every three members one maid servant is allotted. Members must attend a certain number of chapels and be in by 11 o'clock at night if they come in at all, but there is no other restriction on their liberty, and they can go away for weeks at a time if they choose.—London Chronicle.

Naming a City.

From the Cleveland Plain Dealer we learn that the modern spelling of the name of the city is due to the error of a type manufacturer who sent to the Cleveland Herald, in 1831, a new set of type which was too "fat," as printers say. In other words, too wide to allow the heading of the paper to be spelled in the old and correct way. As the correction of the mistake was a matter of about ten weeks, so slow were the transportation facilities of those days, the printer suggested that the first "a" be left out of the name. It was done, and thus the town received a new name.

"Flowery" Names.

Many of the Chinese names are of a "flowery" character. The Chinese minister at Washington for many years was Wu Ting Fang, a name which signifies "fragrant plum." The name of the minister to England at the same time was Lo Feng Lu, meaning "a rich harvest," while the name of the contemporary minister to France, Yu Keng, signified "much gold." The regular name for a little Chinese girl baby is "My thousand ounces of gold."

PHONOGRAPH CASE TO BE TRIED HERE

New Providence Board of Education Brings Case to District Court, This City.

The New Providence Township Board of Education, Wednesday night, authorized the president, Robert G. Rogers, to engage DeMeza & Crane, lawyers of Plainfield, to start proceedings in a replevin suit to recover a phonograph taken from the Diamond Hill School, June 18, by Simon P. Debbie, a former president of the Board.

The meeting resulted from the failure of an arbitration scheme to settle the ownership of the machine, which is in doubt. It was purchased by persons of the Diamond Hill section for the use of the school, but with the permanent closing of that building the people attempted to give the machine to Miss Camilla MacDonald, the teacher. Before this could be done Principal William Woodruff appeared on the scene and warned them that it belonged to the Board of Education.

Mr. Debbie, however, insisted that the Board should prove its ownership. He took the machine and records to his home and has them now. He was invited to arbitrate the matter before O. W. Henderson, justice of the peace at New Providence, but declined. The case will be tried in the District Court, this city, and may be a jury trial.

The second Board meeting was lively, one of the members, Thomas Oeschsner, leaving in a flurry after putting up a warm argument. He was the only member standing by Mr. Debbie.

APPROVE PLANS FOR GROVE ST. BRIDGE

Arthur E. Smith, of This City, Awarded Contract for $7,373.

Elizabeth, July 2.—The Board of Freeholders yesterday adopted the report of the committee on the Grove street bridge, Plainfield, authorizing the construction of a concrete arch structure at a cost of $7,373, half the cost to be borne by Somerset county. Arthur E. Smith, of Plainfield, was awarded the contract.

The Board also adopted the report of a special committee which recommended that hereafter only the synopsis of the Board's minutes be published. This step was taken because county publishers asked a higher rate for the minutes than has been paid in the past. It was stated in the report that most of the counties follow the synopsis plan. Papers wishing to discontinue publication of the minutes, because of the rates paid, were authorized to do so by the Board.

Father Thomas Moran asked the Board through Probation Officer Major Charles W. Irwin to send wayward Catholic boys to his institution, the Catholic Protectory, at Arlington, the cost to be $10 per month. The matter was referred to the jail committee.

Isaac Seeley, county sealer, reported that the weights and measures laws were being lived up to, and that there were fewer violations than in any other part of the State.

The sum of $7,000 was authorized for the cost of the census. A resolution to build a culvert in Cooper street, Fanwood township, at the request of the Mosquito Commission, was carried.

PROCTOR'S THEATRE

Those who love travel pictures will be given a rare treat at Proctor's Theatre tonight, when the three-part drama photoplay, "When the Mountains Call," is to be presented. This picture is, indeed, unque because of its scenic effects, and will be especially interesting to travelers and students and other young people. Another episode of the "Romance of Elaine" is also scheduled for this evening, giving two parts of moving pictures of the mystery type. The feature for tomorrow afternoon and evening is "The Silent Command," a four-part photoplay, the leading parts of which are played by Robert Leonard and Miss Ella Hall, two local favorites of the screen. "The Goddess," the photo serial beautiful, is also on tomorrow's program. Those who have seen the previous installments of this play have pronounced it one of the greatest of its kind, and is one worthy of following from week to week. As usual, travel pictures will be shown both afternoon and picture is, indeed, unique because of night. The program for Independence Day, to be observed Monday, is well balanced and one of strength, full announcements of which will be maed in these columns tomorrow.

Until September 11 the Daily Press will go to press on Saturdays at 1 o'clock.

HERRING FISHERS NOW FISH MINES

Hundreds of British Trawlers Are Sweeping Seas.

WORK IN DEADLIEST PERIL.

Two Little Vessels Drag Cable Between Them Just as if It Were Fishing Net, While Sailors In Life Belts and Inflated Collars Bravely Face Death Should Infernal Machine Be Struck.

Fishing boats from Hull, Yarmouth and the whole east coast of England are being used as mine sweepers in the Dardanelles, as well as in the North sea, along the various coasts of the "war zone" and in other places where the Germans have strewn the seas with the deadly mines.

It has been frequently reported in England that during the days just before the war the Konigin Louise, an innocent looking merchant vessel flying a German flag, which later was sunk at her task, was placing hundreds of mines in the North sea, and when the war began the fishing industry practically came to an end for the time being.

There is a story that one boat took a chance and went out and came back with $10,000 worth of fish. This was practically the end of the fishing for fish. Following this came the call of the British admiralty, and then began the fishing for mines.

The Scottish ports have lost more than $8,750,000 since the war began. In the case of Yarmouth, which is similar to that of all the other ports, only three cargoes of herrings were sent abroad as against 244 for the same period the year before, when that port exported 829,525 barrels.

The killing of the fishing industry left 100,000 of the best sailors in the world with nothing to do, and when the government called them they were only too ready. They volunteered by thousands, and hundreds of trawlers took to the sea.

Very Similar to Fishing.

The method of trawling for mines is very similar to that of fishing. The boats travel in pairs with a long cable between them. This drags along on the bottom or near the bottom, and the skippers with their practiced hands can tell by the feel when a mine has been caught. They then continue to go forward until the mine mooring breaks and it comes to the top.

The mines used by the Germans both in the North sea and at the Dardanelles are charged with a combination of some of the most powerful explosives known. It is safe to say that the explosion of one charge of 300 pounds against the side of a Dreadnought means the speedy end of the ship, as has been demonstrated at the Dardanelles.

When the head of the mine shows above the water the trawlers slow down. The next task is to get rid of it, and usually the fishermen open fire with their rifles and explode it. Often, however, they whistle for help, and the guardian destroyer, that usually watches over them, responds, and a shot or two from her quick firers put the mine where it will never fulfill its mission of destruction.

At the Dardanelles the trawlers have been operating under fire that made even the battleships uncomfortable. The fishermen, who have become fatalists from their long association with the sea, carry out their dangerous work with the utmost stoicism.

Work Ahead of Warships.

The great vessels of the allied navies, vessels like the famous Queen Elizabeth, hover about behind them, dropping shells where they will do the most harm, but waiting until the humble fishermen have cleared the way so that they may go in with comparative safety and do their work. But they must wait until the work is done properly and the channel is swept clean.

The men of the trawlers wear life belts and inflated rubber collars when at work, but there is small chance for them if their boat strikes a mine. The explosion is so terrific that only a few splinters of what was once a stanch little vessel remain, and the men are usually blown to atoms.

One of the reasons that the steam trawlers are best adapted to this mine sweeping work is because they draw so little water. The mines are anchored so that they are about fifteen feet below the surface, and the fishing boats seldom draw more than six or seven.

The mine is placed so that it will explode against the vitals of the battleships, cruisers or merchantmen that are its prey. If they were a less distance below the surface their explosion might prove less deadly and their victims might be salvaged and escape.

The British government pays the mine sweepers well, and their families are provided for in case they die in the performance of their duty. The captains of the little vessels are officers of the royal naval reserve, and they serve under their own "admirals" just as they did in time of peace.

The "admirals" are selected by the skippers and are men who are best qualified to lead in the pursuit of the fish, and now they lead in the search for mines, and their men follow with the same zeal and devotion to duty as they did when a good catch meant extra money at the end of the trip.

Recourse to the classified advertising columns constitutes your best resource when some little emergency greets you.

A Pome of the Ball Grounds

Every afternoon before
They begin the playing
Doth the megaphoner roar
The announcements, saying:
"Gentle-mun, thu batt-u-reez"—
"Fresh cut sandwich—ham or cheese!"

Spaced at intervals throughout,
'Twixt fast ball and bender,
Sounds the everlasting shout
Of the earnest vender.
Drowns the elevated cars;
"Peanuts, cigarettes, cigars!"

Oh, to use a naughty word
Frowned on by the censor!
One man out and man on third—
Nothing could be tenser!
Then this avalanche of noise:
"Who else wants a cold drink, boys?"
Sharp the spell such moments wield—
Filled with fascination.
Batter flies to center field;
Taut the situation;
Rattles in one's very ear:
"Blank's old fashioned taffy here!"

Now a pincher comes to bat;
Pounds upon the platter;
Umpire, taking off his hat,
Tells the name of batter.
This, however, drowns his speech:
"Ice cream cones! They're ten cents each!"

Magnates of the realm of clout,
Also Harry Steven',
Throw those noisy venders out,
Or I shall get even.
If you don't, oh, moneyed class,
I'll not take another pass!

UNITED STATES COULD RAISE BIG ARMY IN YEAR.

Toronto (Canada) Newspaper Points to Latent Strength of This Nation.

It is not safe to infer that because the United States has a small military organization it would be unable to put forces in the field, says the Toronto Mail and Express.

The civil war found both north and south unorganized in a military way. Up to October, 1863, when voluntary enlistments practically ceased in the north, 1,352,000 men went into the ranks. The south got 750,000 volunteers.

Then the conscription acts came into force, and the south obtained 1,100,000 men and the north a total of 1,500,000 from the various states by levy. The grand total obtained by President Lincoln was 2,898,000 including re-enlistments and 2,250,000 without. On both sides there were 2,000,000 recruits who volunteered.

The Spanish war, though a minor campaign, affords another instance of how quickly the United States could on necessity organize military forces.

If Canada within six weeks of war could organize and equip 32,000 men for the front and within seven months have nearly 100,000 more or less ready what could the United States, with its immense resources of men, material and money, not do in equal time? By the end of the year the United States could if it wished have an army of 1,000,000 men.

SUN SPOTS CAUSING WAR.

Abbe Moreaux Thinks Solar Convulsions Key Up Our Nerves.

Sun spots acting upon the nervous system develop belligerent instincts and are responsible for war, according to the theory of Abbe Moreaux of the Bourges observatory. The war of 1870, he points out, followed a period when solar activity, begun in 1867, had reached its maximum, and the war of 1914 was also preceded by electric convulsions in recent years.

"Every thirty-five years," he recalls, "an ardent fever breaks out in the depths of the sun's atmosphere. The heat, carried to its extreme, evaporates our oceans, resulting in redoubled falls of rain and floods in every direction. Climates seem to be revolutionized for a time, all of which is the periodic effect of solar action revealed to us in the form of sun spots."

Abbe Moreaux says he has often noticed that many persons, children particularly, are more irritable and quarrelsome during certain phases of excessive solar activity. This action of the sun upon the nervous system also brings about physical effects, such as excessive manifestations of gout and rheumatism.

He considers it natural that the exasperation of the forces in action upon the sun should cause a nervous tension likely to result in wars.

SOUTHERN BOY DIES IN WAR.

Lieutenant Clark Was the Son of Chattanooga Rector

The Rev. Dr. Loaring Clark, rector of St. Paul's Protestant Episcopal church of Chattanooga, Tenn., and Mrs. Clark, received a telegram from army officials at Ottawa, Canada, announcing the death of their son, Lieutenant Charles Loaring Clark, from wounds received in Flanders, where he was serving with the Third Battalion Queen's Own Rifles from Canada.

Young Clark, who until the beginning of the European war had lived in this country since he was nine years old, was educated at Sewanee Military academy and at the University of the South. He would have graduated at Sewanee this year. While at college he won medals for oratory. He left Chattanooga last August to enlist with the Canadian forces.

Stole His Soldier Fleas.

Spurning silver and other valuables, burglars stole from the home of Herbert Randall, a Hartford artist, two fleas dressed in red uniforms to represent soldiers—the only fleas in the house and part of his collection of curios.

Rent one of your rooms and reduce your own rent materially. It's a simple and sensible plan—and it works.

BED DAVENPORT

The davenport, once looked upon as a luxury, is now considered an economical necessity in every home. Economical because it does the two-fold duty of a couch and bed and costs much less than the two. During the day it is a handsome parlor davenport, at night a full-size sanitary, comfortable bed. The operation is so simple and easy any one can readily manage it. LOOK IN THE STRAINER

THE next time you have your tank filled—look in the strainer. Standard Motor Gasoline shows no trace of sediment. Inferior fuels often leave a heavy residue of dirt and foreign matter.

Standard Motor Gasoline is a straight-distilled refinery product, not a "blend" or a "mixture." It is absolutely homogeneous, every drop like every other drop. It is uniformly quick-starting, whether you are running on the top of your tank or near the bottom.

Standard Motor Gasoline costs no more by the gallon—less by the mile. It is the same "Standard Gas" that careful motorists have always insisted upon.

Ask for it by name—Standard Motor Gasoline. Ask too, for Polarine, the Standard Oil for All Motors, obtainable wherever you see the "Standard Service Station" sign.

GEORGE ADAMS WEDS MISS GRACE WEAR

Former Well Known Plainfielder Takes Newark Girl for His Bride.

As a culmination of their romance begun a number of years ago and carried on by correspondence, George E. Adams, formerly of 215 Park avenue, but now of Marshalltown, Iowa, and Miss Grace Wear, daughter of Mrs. Louise Wear, of Newark, were married at the latter place, Wednesday night. The ceremony took place at the home of the bride's mother and only the immediate relatives of the two families were present. Miss Wear was attended by Miss Alice Alpaugh, of High Bridge, and Leroy Adams, brother of the groom, was best man. The marriage was performed by the Rev. Harold C. Harmon, pastor of the West Presbyterian church, Newark.

The couple will stay locally for a short time, after which they will go to Marshalltown, Iowa, stopping en route at Buffalo, Gary, Ind., and Chicago, for short visits with friends. Prior to his leaving for the West three years ago, Mr. Adams was identified in the bicycle racing game and in 1910 gained much notoriety by making a bicycle trip to San Francisco with Sherman Haberle, of this city. At present Mr. Adams has a responsible position with a contracting builder in Marshalltown. Mr. Adams is the son of Alexander Adams, of Netherwood avenue, this city, and a brother of Cortland Adams, of White Plains; Mrs. H. L. Viebrock and Mrs. Joseph F. Berg, of this city. He is a cousin of Horace G. Adams, city clerk of the District Court.

MEN'S CLASS HOLDS ANNUAL CAMP FIRE

Listen to Stirring Talks While Grouped About Blazing Logs on Mountain Side.

The Men's Bible Conference Class of the First Baptist church, enjoyed its annual camp-fire last evening at Interhaven Park, near the end of the Somerset street trolley line. There was a good attendance, and the spirit of sociability and good fellowship which prevailed was echoed in the short talks of the members of the conference who spoke extemporaneously on topics bearing upon church and Sunday-school work. The Rev. Dr. Philip B. Strong, pastor of the First Baptist church; Arthur M. Harris, superintendent of the Sunday-school; George H. Batchelor, teacher of the conference; J. Henry Crane, Dr. J. H. Buchanan and James E. Church were among those who spoke.

President John G. MacLaughlin, of the class, presided, and introduced the speakers. In all the addresses the coming evangelistic campaign held a prominent place and the men were urged to have a big part in in this fall. Dr. Strong suggested that the name of the organization be changed. He said that organizations which do things, especially religious ones, very frequently accomplish what they set about because of an attractive name which they bear. He admitted that he had been thinking of the advisability of urging a change of name for the First Baptist class for some time, and was moved to suggest it last night. He explained that it was often the rule to call a class of that kind about some strong personality, and he proposed the name of the teacher, George H. Batchelor. He proposed calling it the "Batchelor Class."

As the gathering last night was not for the purpose of transacting any business, no action was taken upon this proposition, but it met with hearty support. Mr. Batchelor himself was the only person to dissent, and it is likely that the change will be made at an early date.

Mr. Harris offered a prayer for the men in the European armies who suffer from hardship and the danger of imminent death and prayed that this country he spared from engaging in the conflict. He offered thanks that the President of the United States is a man who loves peace and is opposed to plunging this country into strife either with our sister republic to the south of us or the nations across the water. He urged the men to individual effort in the campaign for souls which will begin in a few months. The other speakers followed along similar lines.

The men gathered at the Park late yesterday afternoon, and enjoyed the first part of the program, the supper, immensely. When the eatables had disappeared, a huge camp-fire was built, and grouped about the blaze, the men engaged in a discussion of matters pertinent to the welfare of the conference. Music and songs were interspersed, and when the logs had burned out the camp-fire broke up. Japanese lanterns, hung about, gave an air of festivity to the scene.

AN ORDINANCE

AN ORDINANCE REGULATING AND PROHIBITING THE DISCHARGE OF FIRE-ARMS AND FIREWORKS.

Section 1. No person or corporation shall within the limits of the Borough of North Plainfield fire or discharge any cannon, toy cannon gun, revolver, or toy pistol, or other appliance for discharging metal or paper caps, such as are used in toy pistols, or fire-arms of any description whether the same be loaded with blank or full charge; provided that this section shall not apply to persons engaged in military exercises or to members of the Police Department while on duty, or to the use of a revolver, pistol or other fire-arm in defense of life or property.

Section 2. No person or corporation shall fire or discharge any firecracker, torpedo, or fireworks of any character, or any other thing containing or composed of powder or other explosive or combustible material, or set in motion any balloon containing a lighted torch or burning material of any kind, upon any street, lane, highway or public place of the Borough of North Plainfield.

Section 3. No person or corporation shall within the limits of the Borough of North Plainfield fire or discharge any firecracker, torpedo or fireworks, or set in motion any balloon containing a lighted torch or burning material of any kind, except that firecrackers made of soft paper loosely wrapped containing no other explosive but black powder and not over two and one-half inches in length and torpedoes not over three-quarters of an inch in diameter and fireworks other than skyrockets having sticks attached, or any balloon containing a lighted torch or burning material of any kind, may be set off and discharged upon private property on the Fourth day of July of any year, unless the Fourth day of July falls on Sunday, and in such event then on the Fifth day of July between the hours of six o'clock in the morning and twelve o'clock midnight, but at no other time, provided, however, that at any time the Mayor may upon written application made at least twenty-four hours before the time which said event is to occur, give permission for the display and discharge of fireworks except skyrockets having sticks attached or any balloon containing a lighted torch, or burning material of any kind, at a time and place to be specified and under the direction of a person or persons to be named in the written permit issued by the Mayor.

Section 4. Any person or corporation violating any of the provisions of section one, two and three of this ordinance shall on conviction be punished by a fine not exceeding Twenty Dollars for each offence.

Section 5. All ordinances and parts of ordinances, resolutions and parts of resolutions, inconsistent herewith are hereby repealed.

Approved June 4, 1915.

CHAPTER XIX.

The Quiet Afternoon.

PERHAPS middle aged people might discern nature's real intentions in the matter of pain if they would examine a boy's punishments and sorrows, for he prolongs neither beyond their actual duration. With a boy, trouble must be of homeric dimensions to last overnight. To him, every next day is really a new day. Thus, Penrod woke, next morning, with neither the unspared rod, nor Mr. Kinosling in his mind. Tar, itself, so far as his consideration of it went, might have been an undiscovered substance. His mood was cheerful and mercantile; some process having worked mysteriously within him, during the night, to the result that his first waking thought was of profits connected with the sale of old iron—or perhaps a ragman had passed the house, just before he woke.

By 10 o'clock he had formed a partnership with the indeed amiable Sam, and the firm of Schofield & Williams plunged headlong into commerce. Heavy dealings in rags, paper, old iron and lead gave the firm a balance of 22 cents on the evening of the third day, but a venture in glassware, following, proved disappointing on account of the skepticism of all the druggists in that part of town, even after seven laborious hours had been spent in cleansing a wheelbarrow load of old medicine bottles with hydrant water and ashes. Likewise the partners were disheartened by their failure to dispose of a crop of "greens," although they had uprooted specimens of that decorative and unappreciated flower, the dandelion, with such persistence and energy that the Schofields' and Williams' lawns looked curiously haggard for the rest of that summer.

The fit passed, business languished, became extinct. The dog days had set in.

One August afternoon was so hot that even boys sought indoor shade. In the dimness of the vacant carriage house of the stable lounged Masters Penrod Schofield, Samuel Williams, Maurice Levy, Georgie Bassett and Herman. They sat still and talked. It is a hot day, in rare truth, when boys devote themselves principally to conversation, and this day was that hot.

Their elders should beware such days. Peril hovers near when the fierceness of weather forces inaction and boys in groups are quiet. The more closely volcanoes, western rivers, nitroglycerin and boys are pent, the deadlier is their action at the point of outbreak. Thus, parents and guardians should look for outrages of the most singular violence and of the most peculiar nature during the confining weather of February and August.

The thing which befell upon this broiling afternoon began to brew and stew peacefully enough. All was innocence and languor; no one could have foretold the eruption.

They were upon their great theme: "When I get to be a man!" Being human, though boys, they considered their present estate too commonplace to be dwelt upon. So, when the old men gather, they say: "When I was a boy." It really is the land of nowadays that we never discover.

"When I'm a man," said Sam Williams, "I'm goin' to hire me a couple of colored waifers to swing me in a hammock and keep pourin' ice water on me all day out o' those waterin' cans they sprinkle flowers from. I'll hire you for one of 'em, Herman."

"No; you ain' goin' to," said Herman promptly. "You ain' no flowuh. But nev' min' nat, anyway. Ain' nobody goin' hiah me whens I'm a man. Goin' be my own boss. I'm go' be a rai'road man!"

"You mean like a superintendent, or sumpthing like that, and sell tickets?" asked Penrod.

"Sup'in-nv' min' nat! Sell ticket? No suh! Go' be a po'tuh! My uncle a po'tuh right now. Solid gole buttons—oh, oh!"

"Generals get a lot more buttons than porters," said Penrod. "Generals"—

"Po'tuhs make the bes' livin'," Herman interrupted. "My uncle spen' mo' money 'n any white man n'is town."

"Well, I rather be a general," said Penrod, "or a senator, or sumpthing like that."

"Senators live in Warshington," Maurice Levy contributed the information. "I been there. Warshington ain't so much. Niag'ra falls is a hundred times as good as Warshington. So's 'Tlantic City. I was there too. I been everywhere there is. I"—

"Well, anyway," said Sam Williams, raising his voice in order to obtain the floor, "anyway, I'm goin' to lay in a hammock all day and have ice water sprinkled on top o' me, and I'm goin' to lay there all night, too, and the next day. I'm goin' to lay there a couple o' years maybe."

"I bet you don't!" exclaimed Maurice. "What'd you do in winter?"

"What?"

"What you goin' to do when it's winter, out in a hammock with water sprinkled on top o' you all day? I bet you"—

"I'd stay right there," Sam declared, with strong conviction, blinking as he looked out through the open doors at the dazzling lawn and trees, trembling in the heat. "They couldn't sprinkle too much for me!"

"It'd make icicles all over you, and"—

"I wish it would," said Sam. "I'd eat 'em up."

"And it'd snow on you"—

"Yay! I'd swaller it as fast as it'd come down. I wish I had a barrel o' snow right now. I wish this whole barn was full of it. I wish they wasn't anything in the whole world except just good ole snow."

Penrod and Herman rose and went out to the hydrant, where they drank long and ardently. Sam was still talking about snow when they returned.

"No, I wouldn't just roll in it. I'd stick it all round inside my clo'es and fill my hat. No, I'd freeze a big pile of it all hard, and I'd roll her out flat and then I'd carry her down to some ole tailor's and have him make me a suit out of her, and"—

"Can't you keep still about your ole snow?" demanded Penrod petulantly. "Makes me so thirsty I can't keep still, and I've drunk so much now I bet I bust. That ole hydrant water's mighty near hot, anyway."

"I'm goin' to have a big store when I grow up," volunteered Maurice.

"Candy store?" asked Penrod.

"No, sir. I'll have candy in it, but not to eat, so much. It's goin' to be a deportment store—ladies' clothes, gentlemen's clothes, neckties, china goods, leather goods, nice lines in woolings and lace goods"—

"Yay! I wouldn't give a five for a cent marble for your whole store," said Sam. "Would you, Penrod?"

"Not for ten of 'em, not for a million of 'em. I'm goin' to have"—

"Wait!" clamored Maurice. "You'd be foolish, because they'd be a toy deportment in my store where they'd be a hundred marbles. So how much would you think your five for a cent marble counts for? And when I'm keepin' my store I'm goin' to get married."

"Yay!" shrieked Sam derisively. "Married! Listen!" Penrod and Herman joined in the howl of contempt.

"Certunly I'll get married," asserted Maurice stoutly. "I'll get married to Marjorie Jones. She likes me awful good, and I'm her beau."

"What makes you think so?" inquired Penrod in a cryptic voice.

"Because she's my beau, too," came the prompt answer. "I'm her beau because she's my beau. I guess that's plenty reason. I'll get married to her as soon as I get my store running nice."

Penrod looked upon him darkly, but for the moment held his peace.

"Married!" jeered Sam Williams. "Married to Marjorie Jones! You're the only boy I ever heard say he was goin' to get married. I wouldn't get married for—why, I wouldn't for—for"— Unable to think of any inducement the mere mention of which would not be ridiculously incommensurate, he proceeded: "I wouldn't do it. What you want to get married for? What do married people do except just come home tired and worry around and kind of scold? You better not do it, M'rice. You'll be mighty sorry."

"Everybody gets married," stated Maurice, holding his ground. "They gotta."

"I'll bet I don't," Sam returned hotly. "They better catch me before they tell me I have to. Anyway, I bet nobody has to get married unless they want to."

"They do, too," insisted Maurice. "They gotta."

"Who told you?"

"Look at what my own papa told me!" cried Maurice, heated with argument. "Didn't he tell me your own papa had to marry your mamma or else he'd never'd got to handle a cent of her money? Certunly people gotta marry. Everybody. You don't know anybody over twenty years old that isn't married—except maybe teachers."

"Look at policemen!" shouted Sam triumphantly. "You don't s'pose anybody can make policemen get married, I reckon, do you?"

"Well, policemen maybe," Maurice was forced to admit. "Policemen and teachers don't, but everybody else gotta."

"Well, I'll be a policeman," said Sam. "Then I guess they won't come around tellin' me I have to get married. What you goin' to be, Penrod?"

"Chief police," said the laconic Penrod.

"What you?" Sam inquired of quiet Georgie Bassett.

"I am going to be," said Georgie consciously, "a minister."

This announcement created a sensation so profound that it was followed by silence. Herman was the first to speak.

"You mean preachuh?" he asked incredulously. "You go' preach?"

"Yes," answered Georgie, looking like St. Cecilia at the organ.

Herman was impressed. "You know all 'at preachuh talk?"

"I'm going to learn it," said Georgie simply.

"How loud kin you holler?" asked Herman doubtfully.

"He can't holler at all," Penrod interposed with scorn. "He hollers like a girl. He's the porest hollerer in town!"

Herman shook his head. Evidently he thought Georgie's chance of being ordained very slender. Nevertheless a final question put to the candidate by the colored expert seemed to admit one ray of hope.

"How good kin you climb' a pole?"

"He can't climb one at all," Penrod answered for Georgie. "Over at Sam's turning pole you ought to see him try to"—

"Preachers don't have to climb poles," Georgie said with dignity.

"Good ones do," declared Herman. "Bes' one ev' I hear, he clim up an' down same as a circus man. One n'em big 'vivals outen whens we livin' on a fahm, preachuh clim big pole right in a middle o' the church, what was to hol' roof up. He clim way high up, an' holler: 'Goin' to heavum, goin' to heavum, goin' to heavum now. Hallelujah, praise my Lawd!' "

Herman possessed that extraordinary facility for vivid acting which is the great native gift of his race, and he enchained his listeners. They sat fascinated and spellbound.

"Herman, tell that again!" said Penrod, breathlessly.

Herman, nothing loath, accepted the encore and repeated the Miltonic episode, expanding it somewhat, and dwelling with a fine art upon those portions of the narrative which he perceived to be most exciting to his audience.

The effect was immense and instant. Penrod sprang to his feet.

"Georgie Bassett couldn't do that to save his life," he declared. "I'm goin' to be a preacher! I'd be all right for one, wouldn't I, Herman?"

"So am I!" Sam Williams echoed loudly. "I guess I can do it if you can. I'd be bette'n Penrod, wouldn't I, Herman?"

"I am, too!" Maurice shouted. "I got a stronger voice than anybody here, and I'd like to know what"—

The three clamored together indistinguishably, each asserting his qualifications for the ministry according to Herman's theory, which had been accepted by these sudden converts without question.

"Listen to me!" Maurice bellowed, proving his claim to at least the voice by drowning the others. "Maybe I can't climb a pole so good, but who can holler louder'n this? Listen to me-e-e!"

"Shut up!" cried Penrod, irritated. "Go to heaven; go to ——!"

"Oo-o-oh!" exclaimed Georgie Bassett, profoundly shocked.

Sam and Maurice, awed by Penrod's daring, ceased from turmoil, staring wide eyed.

"You cursed and swore!" said Georgie.

"I did not!" cried Penrod hotly. "That isn't swearing."

"You said, 'Go to a big H!'" said Georgie.

"I did not! I said, 'Go to heaven,' before I said a big H. That isn't swearing, is it, Herman? It's almost what the preacher said. Ain't it, Herman? It ain't swearing now any more—not if you put 'go to heaven' with it. Is it, Herman? You can say it all you want to, long as you say 'go to heaven' first. Can't you, Herman? Anybody can say it if the preacher says it. Can't they, Herman? I guess I know when I ain't swearing. Don't I, Herman?"

Judge Herman ruled for the defendant, and Penrod was considered to have carried his point. With fine consistency the conclave established that it was proper for the general public to "say it" provided "go to heaven" should in all cases precede it. This prefix was pronounced a perfect disinfectant, removing all odor of impiety or insult, and, with the exception of Georgie Bassett (who maintained that the minister's words were "going" and "gone," not "go"), all the boys proceeded to exercise their new privilege so lavishly that they tired of it.

"He's too sissy to be a preacher!" cried Maurice.

But there was no diminution of evangelical ardor. Again were heard the clamors of dispute as to which was the best qualified for the ministry, each of the claimants appealing passionately to Herman, who, pleased, but confused, appeared to be incapable of arriving at a decision.

During a pause Georgie Bassett asserted his prior rights. "Who said it first, I'd like to know?" he demanded. "I was going to be a minister from long back of today, I guess. And I guess I said I was going to be a minister right today before any of you said anything at all. Didn't I, Herman? You heard me. Didn't you, Herman? That's the very thing started you talking about it. Wasn't it, Herman?"

"You' right," said Herman. "You the firs' one to say it."

Penrod, Sam and Maurice immediately lost faith in Herman. They turned from him and fell hotly upon Georgie.

"What if you did say it first?" Penrod shouted. "You couldn't be a minister if you were a hundred years old!"

"I bet his mother wouldn't let him be one," said Sam. "She never lets him do anything."

"She would too," retorted Georgie. "Ever since I was little she"—

"He's too sissy to be a preacher!" cried Maurice. "Listen at his squeaky voice!"

"I'm going to be a better minister," shouted Georgie, "than all three of you put together. I could do it with my left hand!"

Of Interest to Women and the Home

Those Little Nimrods Certainly Looked Like Business.

Daddy's Bedtime Story—

The Mighty Nimrods in the Quiet Woods.

"ONCE four Nimrods went to hunt in the quiet woods," daddy told Jack and Evelyn. "They were not very big Nimrods. The tallest of them wouldn't reach much above my waist, but they were just as brave as four lions.

"You know, my dears, Nimrod was a mighty hunter. He went forth to slay, and he slew. These four little Nimrods—but I will tell you the story.

"They started in on a glad summer afternoon by being cowboys, but they grew tired of that, so they decided to be mighty hunters.

"Two of the Nimrods were dressed in khaki soldier suits, and one wore an Indian suit, and the other Nimrod just wore a shirt waist and knee pants and a savage look. He carried a wooden sword. One of the other Nimrods carried a toy gun which was broken, but he thought it might do. The third Nimrod had a bow and arrow, and the fourth just had a stout stick.

"Goodness, but those four little Nimrods certainly looked like business as they hurried down to the quiet woods. But nothing seemed to take them seriously somehow. The big, round, jolly faced sun looked down at them and smiled, and the mild summer breeze laughed at them, and the green leaves of the trees in the quiet woods danced with delight as they saw them.

"They came into the woods, and they saw a red squirrel, and the squirrel looked so pretty that they remembered their papas had said it was wrong to kill squirrels, so they determined to surround that beady eyed little creature and capture him and take him home and put him in a cage.

"So they started very carefully to surround the squirrel. But somehow by the time they thought they had him surrounded he wasn't there.

"Then they had to hunt something else. So they went prowling along through the quiet woods till they came to the funniest little creature.

"When it saw them it tucked its nose up under itself some way and rolled all up into a funny ball, and they were afraid to touch it because it was all covered with stiff and prickly looking spines. They tried to make it show itself by poking at it with sticks, but he wouldn't move, so they lost interest and went away.

"Then they heard a great noise in the woods, and they thought it was a bear, and they turned and ran out of the woods for home and cried and told their mammas that a bear had chased them, and they didn't know the bear was just an old cow which had strayed from her pasture into the quiet woods. I think that old cow must have smiled to see them run."

SMART RIDING COAT.

No. 8957.

The call of the green woods can be answered in no better way than by wandering through the winding woodland lanes in out-of-the-way places on horseback. One must be equipped, however, and the long lined, smart riding coat will be indispensable. Ladies' Home Journal Pattern No. 8951 above is a Ladies' and Misses' semi-fitted riding coat. It is perforated for two lengths, and can be worn over riding breeches or skirt. The pattern cus in sizes 32 to 46 inches bust measure, requiring in size 36, 5¼ yards 42-inch, without up and down, or 4½ yards 54-inch material, with up an down.

USES FOR SODA.

When tins are hard to wash or when food has been burned on them put the dish on the stove, fill with cold water, add a teaspoonful of soda, bring the water to a boil, and the dish will wash easily.

Cold rainwater and soda will remove machine grease from washable fabrics.

For headache or sour stomach take a half teaspoonful of soda in a little water.

For dyspepsia a quarter of a teaspoonful of soda in a tumbler of water, drunk three or four times a day, gives relief.

Cover burns with a paste of soda and cover with a damp cloth.

To keep gruel or milk sweet put in it a pinch of soda.

Weak soda water is excellent in cases of prickly heat or fever.

To restore the flaish to furniture or woodwork wash it thoroughly with a solution of warm water and a little soda. Rinse well and wipe dry.

Lard that has become rancid may be sweetened by reboiling and adding a little soda.

AMERICAN UNIFORM.

What Milady Would Wear Were She to Take Up Arms.

If the American woman is suddenly called upon to take up arms in defense of her native land she will be prepared in so far as an attractive uniform is concerned. Blue, of course, is the prevailing color in feminine uniforms. The material is gabardine of the spring weight, which readily lends itself to plaiting schemes. The plaits are found chiefly in the skirts, always very full and nearly always of ankle length, for the high topped shoe goes with the military uniform walking costume, and that shoe is so trim that to conceal any part of it would be a pity. One of the plainest of these models has a skirt so severely cut that, while it fits without a wrinkle over the hips, it falls in loose pleats below them. They do not drop inward about the ankles, however, although there is no apparent scheme for making them stand out.

Uses of Cheesecloth.

Cheesecloth has always been considered one of the housewife's first aids. Nearly every one uses it for cleaning purposes, and when one begins to devise uses for it they will be found a legion. It makes nice dishcloths, and two yards will make three oblong shaped cloths, which should be whipped around the edge and quilted from corner to corner. A large piece of it about a yard square makes a serviceable duster. The edges should be hemmed or turned in on the machine. If it is doubled or quartered, quilted and dipped in coal oil or placed in a tin lard can or box containing oil it will render as good service as any cloth you could buy. A piece placed over the pipe and under the radiator will prevent the dust of the room from passing to the cellar and dust from the cellar coming up. Several ruffles of cheesecloth attached to the handle of a wornout dish mop make a good duster. A piece of the cloth should always be kept in the sewing machine for cleaning it, as it leaves no lint and absorbs oil and grease. It is also fine for cleaning the stove. A fresh or clean piece can be well used for cleaning the electric bulbs and globes about the house. Some women prefer cheesecloth towels for cleaning silver, glassware and fine china.

Glimpses of Married Life

BY MRS. EVA LEONARD.

"You know I told you I was determined to stop that Ellson woman's persecutions," Olive looked thoughtfully at the fire.

"Have you worked out your plan?" Nell laid her work on her lap and prepared to listen.

"Just about," said Olive after a pause.

"Am I to help?" The tone showed interest, but no eagerness for the fray.

"Well, no, unless I have to hoist the signal of distress after I have played my last card and failed. I telephoned to the house where she is staying."

"The place we saw her enter after the theater party the other night?" Nell leaned forward with her elbows on her knees and her chin in her hands.

"That very place," replied Olive; "she is still there."

"How did you get them? You did not know the name."

"Oh, that's easy. I called up 'Information,' said I must get a party rooming at that street and number and did not know the name. I got it all right."

"Well?" said Nell encouragingly as Olive stopped.

"I am going over there and ask to see her."

"She won't be at home if she knows who is inquiring for her," volunteered Nell.

"I have thought of that and I mean to send in Fred Joplin's card."

"Mr. Joplin's card? I am mystified, dear."

"Well, you know she watched for him when he was here the other night, and they went away together. I've figured it out that she probably told him where she was staying. You see she is trying to further his plan to marry me, and so make sure I will not marry Dr. Ellson.

"Oh," said Nell, "that does sound reasonable."

"She will come to the parlor and I will have a chance to say my say."

"What are you going to tell her?" asked Nell.

"I shall tell her I saw her intercept Mr. Joplin the other night, for one thing; that I know of three poison letters she has written about my affairs, and that you made your maid confess she was acting as her spy."

"She probably knows that through the girl herself," interrupted Nell.

"Whether she does or not, I shall tell her, so she will have no uncertainty as to the way the thing is looked at by the doctor. I shall add that if I am bothered any more I shall complain to him, and he will take steps to stop the trouble."

"Do you want me to go with you?" asked Nell uneasily.

"No; I merely want you to know where I am. They have a phone and if there is any trouble I will sound the S. O. S."

"I doubt if it does any good, Olive."

"Of course, it will do good. She'll either stop being a public nuisance or be shut up. Besides I'll show her I'm not afraid of her, which would be something in my favor."

"I'd receive poison pen letters to the crack of doom before I'd face her. If the evidence would lock her up, give it to the authorities and save yourself trouble."

"That, remember, would drag the doctor in, which I want to avoid, and what's more, I shall enjoy it."

Household Hints..

CANNING AND PRESERVING

Rhubarb Marmalade—Peel rhubarb, cut it into small square pieces not larger than dice; when cut put into a vessel and cover with sugar in the following proportions: One and one-half pounds sugar to two pounds rhubarb; to every pound of rhubarb must be added the rind of a lemon cut fine. Let rhubarb, sugar and lemon peel stand all night; in the morning strain off liquid, boil three-quarters hour, then put in rhubarb and boil from twenty minutes to one-half hour, according to consistency it attains; the longer it is boiled the thicker it becomes.

Rhubarb Canned With Sugar—Wash rhubarb that is tender, but do not peel it, as the pink skin makes the canned fruit a lovely color. Cut into inch pieces and measure. For every three quarts of sliced rhubarb allow three cups sugar and one cup water. Dissolve sugar, add water and simmer gently fifteen minutes. Have ready sterilized jars with new rubbers and airtight tops; fill to overflowing with the boiling fruit and screw as tightly as possible. After several hours, when cool, the top can be screwed tighter. A few raisins can be added when put on to cook.

Rhubarb and Orange Marmalade—Cut into inch pieces two pounds tender rhubarb. Peel thin one-half dozen oranges and cut yellow rind into shreds. Put orange pulp, shredded peel and rhubarb into granite kettle with one and one-half pounds granulated sugar; place over a gentle fire. Cook, stirring often, until the consistency required, then turn into jars. Leave uncovered until cool, then it may be covered with paraffin.

LAUNDRY SUGGESTIONS.

A handy apron for washday is made of ticking made medium with a piece sewed on the bottom turned up on the right, stitched at the sides and at intervals along the bottom. This makes a handy receptacle for clothespins and is handier than a bag or basket.

A more convenient way than to carry a basket when hanging out the clothes is to put it into a small wagon and haul it. It also saves the wear on the bottom of the basket caused from dragging it on the ground.

To clean a clothesline that is soiled make into a coil and scrub well on the board, then boil in suds and rinse it as one does clothes, scrubbing it each time on the board. Stretch it as you would an ordinary line outdoors to dry. If it needs cleansing in freezing weather, hang it by the stove, still coiled.

Clothes that are not well rinsed scorch much easier when ironed.

If one is obliged to use hard water for rinsing use a little soft water to mix the bluing in, even if a little suds has to be used.

It is much easier to iron clothes if well shaken out when put on the line.

Overalls, socks and quilts look much cleaner if hung out to drip in the shade—not where the sun shines directly on them.

The male department of the domestic institution should do a good part of the family washing if there is no hired washerwoman, and it should always be done on the premises, for the health and happiness of all.

Good, soft water, plenty of soap carefully dissolved, convenient and sufficient heat, three metal tubs, a good wringer, commodious boiler all at hand and two to two and one-half hours will suffice to put all the soiled linen of the average home into an immaculate condition so far as cleanness and whiteness can make it so.

Sort the linen. Put all fine and delicate fabrics in one tub; the next coarser, such as bath towels, hand towels, cotton underwear in another; dish towels in another.

Dissolve a cake of soap in boiling water.

Wring from the boil and put through the indigo rinse.

Wash flannels in warm suds strong enough to lather, and rinse in warm water. Dry them in warm place. They will not shrink, and always be soft.

Fill the boiler and when water is hot pour it over the linen in each tub until all is covered with hot suds. Allow to stand at least two hours (over night is better). A funnel vacuum washer will do good if applied to the soak. Very little rubbing will suffice and that only on soiled spots. Put through the boil, beginning with the finer white

LIFE ON A SUBMARINE.

There Are No Comforts, and Sleep Is Almost Impossible.

Speaking of life on a submarine, one of Uncle Sam's naval officers stationed on one of these under sea terrors says: "Every minute the men are in the subma[illegible] the risk of pneumoni[illegible]ods. The entire inside [illegible] sweats like a pitcher [illegible] ice water on a hot day. Before we are on it three hours our clothes are soaked, and they stay that way. We have absolutely no heat, which means that the boat is the temperature of the outside air. Sometimes we nearly freeze. The doctors say that the men on a submarine never sleep; they merely become unconscious for brief intervals. The air, the odors from the machinery, the constant vibration and the intense strain under which you labor make sleep an impossibility.

"In a storm, when we have to seal up, the air gets worse than anything you can imagine. There are eighteen men and two officers in one of our boats, and at any moment any one of the twenty may cause the death of all the rest. There is no room for mistakes. The space in which the men live is fifty feet long and about ten feet wide. I can stand upright if I pick my place, but most of the time my shoulders are bent. There are no bunks; we all spread our mattresses on an iron deck. The dining room consists of four electric hot plates. Nothing in the nature of a spark is allowed below decks, but we can heat up coffee on the hot plates and occasionally fry things. We can't smoke, and the vibration of the engines makes it impossible to read or even play cards, so when we are not working there's nothing for us to do but sit on the floor and look at each other."—Pittsburgh Dispatch.

The Human Brain.

Our brains are seventy year clocks. The angel of life winds them up once for all, then closes the case and gives the key into the hand of the angel of the resurrection. Tick-tack, tick-tack, go the wheels of thought. Our will cannot stop them. They cannot stop themselves. Sleep cannot still them. Madness only makes them go faster. Death alone can break into the case, and, seizing the ever swinging pendulum which we call the heart, silence at last the clicking of the terrible escapement we have carried so long beneath our wrinkled foreheads.—Holmes.

Matter of Precedence.

A discussion once arose in the University of Cambridge whether doctors at law or doctors in medicine should hold precedence. The chancellor asked whether the thief or the hangman preceded at an execution. Being told that the thief usually took the lead, "Well, then," said the chancellor, "let the doctors in law have the precedence and let doctors in medicine be next in rank."—London Standard.

Best notes on keeping up the garden in Saturday's Daily Press.

You need not keep "on your hands," to your present disadvantage, any real estate that is "good enough to advertise."

Keep posted on building news. See Saturday's Press.

If "To Let" advertisements did not, in the great majority of cases, bring results, there would be no such advertisements printed. They would become obsolete.

The efficient workman—and his colleague, the efficient work-woman—are needed "in the ranks" of the workers today just as surely as in times of world-peace.

DETERMINED classified advertisers always win; and, simetimes, even the timid, try-it-once people win, too.

You'll know what the old adage-makers meant by urging that "time is money" if you delay advertising for a tenant.

APPEAL DENIED BY STATE BOARD

Assessments on Borough Properties Are Confirmed, Council is Informed.

TRANSFER PROPERTIES

Engineer on Sewer Work Reports Progress—Borough Streets to Be Oiled—Fire Alarm Tapper to Be Installed.

Only routine business, and that of a common-place nature, was transacted at last night's Common Council meeting in North Plainfield. Considerable money was ordered paid out in salaries, some for a period of six months and some for the month of June, and several matters having to do with the new sewer system were taken up.

A petition signed by numerous property-owners on Watchung avenue asked that that avenue be given a coat of oil, declaring that sprinkling does not lay the dust. The street committee took the matter under advisement and will report at a meeting to be held July 23. S. C. Kellogg petitioned the Council to lay a sewer in Chatham street, which petition was referred to the committee on sewers.

In the matter of the Washington Park Realty Company's assessment of $47,000, from which an appeal was taken, the State Board for the Equalization of Taxes filed a report confirming the assessment. The same procedure was taken in regard to the assessment of the Tappen estate, $38,000.

In an opinion filed, Lindabury, Depew & Faulks, of Newark, counsel in the sewer matter, approved the proposition under consideration whereby the Washington Park Realty Company, William L. Smalley and Timothy F. Harrington, agreed to transfer property rights in return for a sewer right of way, and advised the borough to consummate the transaction.

The engineer made a report on the sewer work to the effect that the work is progressing satisfactorily. The committee on streets reported an expenditure of $822.05 for the month of June, most of which was expended on the storm sewer on Watchung avenue. It was voted to lay a sewer in Summit avenue between Somerset street and Watchung avenue, and to advertise for bids to be received July 23, at which tim a special meeting of the Council will be held to pass upon them.

The fire and water committee reported an expenditure of $527.85 during the month of June. Council voted to install a fire alarm tapper in the home of William T. Barrett, 206 Grandview avenue, at a cost to exceed five dollars, as Mr. Barrett has been doing fire duty lately, and to purchase six rubber coats, half a dozen pairs of rubber boots and 500 feet of hose to test 400 pounds water pressure and to cost not over eighty-five cents a foot. Council also voted to request the Plainfield-Union Water Company to install a hydrant on Regent street about 300 feet east of Watchung avenue.

For the sewer committee, Councilman U. G. Tingley announced bills aggregating $3,595.35 for the month and only about $2,000 in hand. Upon his motion Council voted to discount a note for $2,000. It was announced by Mayo r Clark that the State Trust Company has agreed to make the rate of discount hereafter five per cent. instead of six to the borough. Overseerof-the-Poor Fred Becker was granted an advance of $250 for his fund. It was stated that the poor fund was holding out well.

SUSPICIOUS CHARACTER IS SENT TO SOMERVILLE

Lester J. L. Bartholomew, the Easton man who was arrested Thursday on Somerset street, charged with carrying concealed weapons and being a suspicious character, was committed to the county jail for twenty-seven days this morning by Recorder Hand. In the meantime the authorities at Easton can be heard from, and if it develops that the story told by the man is true, he may not be compelled to serve the whole sentence.

COMPLAINT DISMISSED.

Louis V. Harris, whose automobile struck a small boy at West Fifth street and Liberty street on June 11, was arraigned in the city police court this morning to hear Judge DeMeza's decision in the case which was tried last week. Harris was exonerated from all blame by the court and the complaint was accordingly dismissed.

BRONZE MEDAL FOR LOCAL SCOUT

National Court of Honor Rewards Harvey Kiederling, of Troop 11.

SAVED A GIRLS' LIFE

Sadie Pangborn Was in Great Danger When Boy With Quick Presence of Mind Made Heroic Rescue.

Official announcement was received by Commissioner Allen E. Beals from National Boy Scout Headquarters yesterday, that the National Court of Honor had voted to award a bronze hero medal to Scout Harvey Kiederling, of Troop 11, of which Raymond D. Manley is scoutmaster, for saving the life of Sadie Pangborn, daughter of Mrs. James Pangborn, of the West End, at considerable risk to his own life on Robbins' Circus day. The child was saved from being crushed to death under unmanageable horses. The medal arrived this morning and with it a letter of commendation to Scout Kiederling, complimenting him upon the splendid example of bravery he showed and of the application of the scout teaching he has received since he became a member of the organization.

Presentation of this medal will be made on Monday evening, when all the scout troops of the city assemble in the rear of the First Presbyterian church on East Front street prior to participating in the flag procession to Parker Field, where the Independence Day fireworks display will take place. Assemblyman William N. Runyon, president of the local Scout Council, has been invited to make the presentation speech at 7 o'clock. William D. Murray, of this city, a member of the National Scout Council, has been asked to participate in the ceremonies.

The award of this medal to a Plainfield boy scout is a signal honor. Very few life saving medals have been awarded by the National Headquarters, as it must be shown by affidavit of eye witnesses that the scout in whose behalf the application for this reward is made, effected the rescue at actual menace to his own life, not merely bodily harm.

PUBLIC SERVICE BOILER SOLD TO JUNK DEALER

Considerable interest was shown yesterday afternoon and this morning in the efforts put forth by employes of the Hand Storage and Express Company to transport one of the big boilers from the dismantled Public Service plant on Madison avenue, near West Second street, to the freight station. The boiler weighed from fifteen to twenty-five tons, according to various estimates, and the moving of it was a formidable undertaking.

It was gotten on a pair of heavy trucks, and with four strong horses hitched in front and two more pulling by means of a block and fall tackle from the rear, the load was moved in the Public Service yard on West Second street, yesterday afternoon, several feet towards the street. But when it was stopped, the leading team was on the flagging and the horses could get no foothold. This morning the leaders were hitched eight feet ahead of the end of the pole by means of a chain and the big load was started and moved without any serious effort. At the freight station the boiler was placed aboard a flat car by means of a derrick. The boiler was the last to be moved from the plant, and like the others, was consigned to a junk dealer.

PERSEVERANCE INSTALLATION.

An installation of officers of Perseverance Lodge, No. 74, K. of P., took place last night. A smoker followed the business session. The officers installed were as follows: Master of work, William J. Trembath; chancellor commander, George Neilson; vice-chancellor commander, Clarence Rittenhouse; prelate, Bertram Trotter; master-at-arms, Peter Lund; inside guard, George Goble, and outside guard, Peter Stram.

N. P. H. S. REUNION.

The class of 1915, N. P. H. S., seld a social reunion at the home of Mrs. C. Frank French, last evening, when the routine business of the class was disposed of. There is a sufficient sum in the treasury to warrant giving the class of 1916 a dance next year. During the evening solos were sung, and at a late hour refreshments were served. The class colors, green and gold, adorned the walls of the French home, during the course of the evening's festivities.

Monday being a legal holiday there will be no issue of the Plainfield Daily Press and the office will be closed.

Sports Will Predominate and All Stores Will Be Closed at Least Half a Day.

FIREWORKS AT NIGHT

Parker Field Demonstration the Feature of the Annual Observance—Golf and Tennis at Local Clubs—Other Side Events.

Members of the Business Men's Association will close their stores all day Monday, in commemoration of Independence Day, but some local storekeepers have announced that they will keep their shops open at least part of a day in order to give those people who want to purchase perishable goods an opportunity to do so. The long interval between today and Tuesday makes this necessary, but it is thought that only grocers and butchers will do it. The banks will be closed all day and but one delivery will be made from the postoffice. Holiday hours will prevail at the Public Library.

The sporting calendar is an unusualy full one and contains excellent numbers in all-around athletics. Baseball is the predominant feature, but tennis, golf and track athletics will be on the program in all parts of the city. Holiday events will be staged at the Plainfield Country Club, the Park Golf Club and the Park Club on Washington avenue.

In the evening at Parker Field the municipal fireworks display will fittingly conclude the activities of the holiday. An excellent program has been arranged and will include a band concert. Fireworks will also be set off at the Park Club and at various other headquarters of organizations in and about Plainfield.

EUCHRE IN ELKS' CLUB WAS A MONSTER SUCCESS

Under the auspices of the wives of members, a euchre party was held in the clubhouse of the local lodge of Elks in Watchung avenue, yesterday afternoon, nearly three hundred women taking part in the card games and the informal program of entertainment. The event was held to raise money for the purchase of a banner for the local lodge to float at the Atlantic City convention in September and the affair was a great success from every point of view.

Bridge and "500" were indulged in during the afternoon and at each table handsome prizes were awarded to the successful players. Refreshments were served. The interior of the clubhouse was elaborately decorated for the occasion, Charles Stanley furnishing the flowers for the occasion. Laggren & Greene had charge of the decorating.

COURT IMPOSES FINE OF $25 ON W. A. BARSE

Elizabeth, July 3.—A fine of $25 was imposed on William A. Barse, of Plainfield, when arraigned in the Court of Quarter Sessions yesterday afternoon, charged with false pretense in connection with passing a worthless check for $15 on a Plainfield physician. His counsel, John P. Owens, said he had made restitution, and that at the time the offense was committed Barse was badly in need of money. Judge Connolly said he would be lenient in view of the fact that it was Barse's first offense.

Sentence on Donald Wallace, of Plainfield, was postponed two weeks to permit his counsel, William R. Wilson, to get back petitions which are being signed in his behalf.

GAMES WANTED.

The West Sides, a Perth Amboy traveling club, averaging in age from 15 to 16 years, wants games with Plainfield teams of like calibre. All games must be played here and a suitable guarantee must be posted. Address communications to Frederick George Daub, manager, of 91 Buckingham avenue, Perth Amboy.

WILL HOLD EUCHRE.

The house committee of the Columbus Club, at a meeting last night, decided to conduct a euchre, followed by a shirtwaist dance, in the auditorium July 16. David B. Doyle has been appointed chairman of the committee and he will name his assistants in the near future.

"SCOOP" WILL RACE.

Entered in the Branch Brook Park annual canoe regatta, to be held Monday morning, is "Bill" Schooley, a former Plainfielder, who will compete in the one-quarter mile doubles, one-quarter mile fours and the hurry-scurry.

FRANCIS G. HALL TO WED MISS COLLENS

Ceremony Will Take Place at the Home of Bride-elect's Parents This Afternoon.

A pretty home wedding will take place this afternoon at 4 o'clock at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Morris Collens, of 1320 Watchung avenue, when Miss Mary Terry Collens, daughter of the late Rev. Charles Terry Collens and Mrs. Mary Abby Wood Collens, becomes the bride of Francis Granger Hall, of Dansville, New York. The ceremony will be performed by Rev. Henry Mesier, rector of St. Stephen's church, Netherwood, and will be witnessed by the immediate relatives of the bride and groom.

Miss Collens will be attended by three nieces, Margaret Collens, of Boston, as maid-of-honor; Catherine Collens, of this city, and Emily Robb Collens, of Cleveland, O., as bridesmaids. The former will be attired in a pink and white dress and will carry a pink basket of marguerites. The latter will wear a dress of white muslin and carry green baskets of flowers. The bride will wear an attractive gown of white tulle over satin trimmed with duchess lace, a family heirloom. She will wear a tulle veil. John R. Hall, a brother of the groom, will act as best man.

Following the ceremony a reception will be held at the home on Watchung avenue following which the couple will leave on an extended wedding trip after which they will reside in Cape May, where the groom holds a responsible position with the Bethlehem Steel Company.

SCOUTS ARE PLANNING AN OVERNIGHT OUTING

Troops Will Hike to Tenting Ground and Sleep in Genuine Army Style.

Troops No. 15 and No. 19 will meet at the Netherwood Reformed church this afternoon and start out for an over-night hike, under the leadership of Scoutmaster Ostrom. Everything has been arranged and the boys will establish a camp on Terrill road, on the Coriell property, about a quarter of a mile south of East Seventh street.

Raising of the tents and getting ready for the evening meal will be the program for the afternoon.

At supper and after, too, William de La R. Anderson will be a guest of the troops. He will tell some interesting things about the Indians who ance inhabited this part of the county and also what the boys are doing up in his section of the country.

The object of this outing is to interest many fellows in the Terrill road district in the scout movement and already many have shown much enthusiasm and have helped immensely. A troop will probably be started up in that section very soon in connection with Troop No. 15, of the Netherwood Reformed church.

Troop No. 9 is Dr. Anderson's troop and they will give demonstrations of work in first aid, signalling and wireless telegraph. Other interesting things will also be in order.

HARRY CARR DIES AT BONNIE BURN SANITORIUM

Harry Carr, of 35 Pearl street, died at the Bonnie Burn Sanitorium early this morning from tuberculosis. The remains were brought to his late home, from which place the funeral services will be held Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock, with interment in Hillside.

Mr. Carr was thirty-six years of age. He was an iron moulder by trade, and moved to North Plainfield from Flemington, where he was born, about five years ago. When his health began to fail he secured employment on the trolley and did other open-air work.

Surviving him are a widow and three children, Marcella, aged seventeen years, and Harry A. and Albert A. He also leaves a mother, Mrs. Carrie Brown, and a sister, Mrs. Ella Biggs, both of whom live on North avenue, this city.

Miss Gladys Marsh, of 11 Maple avenue, North Plainfield, left yesterday for Cumberland, Md., for the summer. She will visit in Pittsburgh, Pa., and in Front Royal, Virginia, before her return to Plainfield.

Monday being a legal holiday there will be no issue of the Plainfield Daily Press and the office will be closed.

MANY CONTESTING FOR PONY OUTFIT

Many Names Being Enrolled in Effort to Secure Coveted Prizes.

INCREASING INTEREST

An Avalanche of Votes Are Being Received Daily—List of Merchants Who Are Giving Cash Sales Voting Tickets.

The contest for the three Shetland ponies offered by the leading merchants of Plainfield promises to be a great success. Every mail brings the names of children to be added to the list of contestants. The merchants and manufacturers' selling and advertising contest already has awakened a whole lot of interest, for to own one of these fine Shetland ponies is commendable ambition in every boy and girl.

Early Tuesday morning the young people began besieging the office in search of further information, and the names of contestants began to arrive. The list is being added to daily. Every boy or girl who desires to make a try for one of those little pet ponies should get busy right away and leave their name at the headquarters, Room 17, Stillman Building, next to Proctor's Theatre.

Between childhood and ponyhood there is a natural affinity. There seems to be a tie that binds, and the Shetland permits a surprising freedom, so much so, in fact that there is scarcely anything an enterprising boy will not attempt with a Shetland pony. The Shetland seems to assume that he is created for the boy and the girl, and it is noticeable that he will permit a great degree of freedom from the young.

Parents are beginning to realize not only the pleasure afforded by the Shetland, but the actual usefulness derived from him. He can be handled quickly by the women or children. He can be driven anywhere, in any kind of vehicle, at any pace and for any distance. He can take the boys and girls for a gallop, and it will wait sublime patience while you gossip to your heart's content and never grow restless or ill-natured.

The Shetland pony is to the child what the horse is to the adult. There is an acknowledgement of strength and of the magnetism of physicial presence. A strong mental appreciation of worth, and this fact exalts the boy or girl. The state of mind has much to do with physical development, and nothing so completely fills the life of a boy or girl as does the ownership of a Shetland pony. Something he can feed; something upon which he can bestow his pride; something he can ride and drive. To the boy or girl the Shetland pony is a continual source of pleasure.

All you have to do to win one of these beautiful Shetland ponies is to use and have your friends use the products entered by different manufacturers and patronize the merchants entered.

Below you will note the list of merchants who give the cash sales voting tickets with each ten-cent purchase: Proctor's Theatre; Leo Zeisel, 222 West Front street; Alprin & Miller, grocers, 330 Plainfield avenue; Olson & Givens, grocers, 222 East Front street; W. M. Walsh, druggist, 211 North avenue; Harry Werner, clothing, 214 West Front street; W. W. Warnock, baker, 237 West Front street; Carl Silbert, jeweler, 257 West Front street; F. M. Wagner, 121 North avenue; Consumers Coal Company, 225 Madison avenue; L. B. VanCamp, furniture, Front and Somerset streets; A. Baum, cleaner and dyer, 143 East Fifth street; S. Sharkey, grocer, Richmond street.

The attention of contestants is called to the fact that Kornfield bread wrappers are valuable and can be exchanged for votes. Tops of Colonial cake boxes count for votes. Save them. Save wrappers from the Butterfly Condensed Milk, each label counts for 100 votes.

S. E. HULL'S FUNERAL.

Funeral services for Samuel E. Hull were held yesterday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Harry O. Bogert, 1437 Bradford avenue, in charge of the Rev. C. S. Gillespie, of the Grace Methodist Episcopal church. The pall bearers were Harry O. Bogert, George Crowell and two grandsons of the deceased, Clarence and George Benson. Interment was made in Hillside.

TOLMINA TAKEN BY THE ITALIANS

First Struggle Between Large Forces Results in Loss for Austria.

GAINS ALONG VISTULA

Teutonic Armies Only 35 Miles From Ivangrod—German Admiralty Justifies Sinking of Armenian and Dena Cruiser Was Sunk in Baltic.

Geneva, July 3.—After a bombardment of weeks the Austrians have evacuated Tolmina on the Isonzo River, and it has been occupied by Italians, according to information received here today.

Rome, July 3.—Italian correspondents at the front today report that the Austrian offensive on the Plava-Gradisca line has been completely broken. "For the first time since the Italians began their campaign of invasion," says one correspondent, "large forces have been engaged. The Austrians have been driven back everywhere with severe casualties, losing strong positions at Plava, and at Sagrado." Another correspondent reports the capture of Austrian positions and numerous prisoners on the Gorizia-Plava road.

Austrian Headquarters, Galicia, July 6 (via Viena, Berlin and Amsterdam.—Rapid strides by the Austro-German forces along the Vistula have brought them to a point only thirty-five miles from Ivangrod. The Russian defense appears to be growing steadily weaker.

Berlin, July 3.—The German Admiralty issued two statements today, one justifying the destruction of the steamship Armenian, and the other denying the Russian claims that a German cruiser of the Magdebug type had been sunk in the Baltic near Minau, on the Courland coast.

Petrograd, July 3.—The Admiralty today gave out the following statement: "A Russian submarine in the Black Sea torpedoed and sank a steamship of 2,500 tons and set fire and sank a sailer of 1,500 tons, and a small steamer."

Constantinople, July 3.—The Turkish War Office gave out the following statement today:

"Renewed attacks by the British during the past three days near Avi Burnu and Sedul Bahr were beaten off with heavy losses. The British were driven back into their old positions."

BORO COUPLE OBSERVE THEIR WEDDING DAY

Mr. and Mrs. Aaron Little Jimmerson, of Maple avenue, North Plainfield, celebrated the sixtieth anniversary of their wedding on July 1. They received the congratulations of a number of relatives and friends, who called during the afternoon and evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Jimmerson have spent nearly the whole of their lives in this city, residing at present with their daughter, Mrs. George W. Marsh.

C. M. DALEY'S FUNERAL.

The funeral of Clarence M. Daley, whose death occurred in Newark, Thursday, July 1, was held in that city this morning. Burial was made in this city in the family plot. Mr. Daley was 38 years old and was the son of the late Charles Daley and Mary J. Titus (nee Daley).

ANOTHER BOAT TORPEDOED.

London, July 3.—The Belgian steamship Doduoqnat was torpedoed and sank today by a German submarine. The crew was rescued.

THE TEMPERATURE.

The temperature report from The State Trust Company today is as follows: 9 a. m., 74 degrees; 11 a. m., 78 degrees; 12:30 p. m., 84 degrees.

CHRISTIAN FIELD.

Special services will be held in Temple Baptist church all day tomorrow. Beginning with Bible school for which a special program has been prepared, and church service at the usual time, subject, "America, a child of Providence." In the evening there will be a story and song service entitled, "Where Love is There God is Also." The story is written by Ernest Tolstoi. The time of evening service will be 7:30.

The monthly meeting of the Women's League of St. Joseph's church will be held Monday night, July 12, instead of July 6 as previously announced. Following the business session a social will follow.

CRANK FIRES TWO SHOTS AT MORGAN

Both Hit Financier But Doctors Say Wounds Are Not Serious.

ASSAILANT IS CAUGHT

Mr. Morgan Was at Glen Cove Home When Fired On—Wounds in Leg and Side—Man is Immediately Arrested and Taken to Mineola Jail.

Glen Cove, L. I., July 3—J. Pierpont Morgan, head of the great banking house in New York city, was shot at 9 o'clock this morning at his home here, by an unknown crank. Two shots were fired at the financier, both of which took effect, one in the side and the other in the leg. The wounds are not serious, according to Mr. Morgan's physicians.

The crank who shot Mr. Morgan was soon captured and was taken by the local police to the county jail at Mineola. He refused to make his identity known.

The assailant of Mr. Morgan had the appearance of a German Jew. He arrived at Glen Cove on a train from New York and engaged an automobile in which he was driven to East Island, Mr. Morgan's home when the butler answered the ring at the door the assailant presented two revolvers and forced his way into the breakfast room, where Mr. Morgan was seated with his family at table. Delivering a wild harangue he fired three shots, two taking effect, one in the right leg and the other in the fleshy part of the left hip. Mr. Morgan sank to the floor and servants grabbed the man.

He was soon taken to the local police station, where it was said he talked like a lunatic. Among his remarks were that he represented 10,000,000 Americans, that the war must cease and that Mr. Morgan was lending too much money to Great Britain. A physician said that the prisoner undoubtedly was insane.

Mr. Morgan was first attended by Dr. W. H. Zabriskie, of Glen Cove. Dr. J. W. Markoe, of New York, was reached quickly and hurried to Glen Cove in an automobile.

FOUR GREEKS IN SCUFFLE AND ALL ARE ARRESTED

Four Greeks, who do business at 139 West Front street, got into a fracas at 8 o'clock this morning which led to a scuffle on the sidewalk and the ultimate arrest of the combatants by Patrolman Cornelius McCarthy. Arraigned in court they gave their names as Nick Faturos and William Randolph, owners of a fruit stand, and Jacob and John Gianoplis, owners of a bootblack establishment.

According to testimony given in court, Faturos was the instigator of the argument and Judge DeMeza suspended a fine of $20 over his head. The other three were given suspended sentences.

"VATERLANDSHILFE."

The local branch of the "Vaterlandshilfe" will hold a picnic on Monday, July 5, near Rock avenue and West Fourth street. Flags will be placed from the end of West Fourth street on, in order to facilitate reaching the grounds. The affair will be a regular "Sommerfest." The Hungarian members will give an exhibit of Hungarian music and dances. Well-known speakers will deliver addresses in both German and Hungarian. Refreshments will be served all afternoon, beginning at 1 o'clock. The monthly meeting for July will be omitted.

REMEMBERED WEDDING DAY.

The forty-third wedding anniversary of Mayor and Mrs. Robert Clark, Jr., of North Plainfield, was observed yesterday and as a pleasant reminder of the occasion the borough councilmen and Borough Clerk Charles M. Dolliver provided a handsome bouquet of rosebuds which was placed on the Mayor's desk at the Common Council meeting last night. All the members of the Council and the borough officials, who were present, congratulated the Mayor on his many years of married life.

CARRIED NO PASSENGERS.

Washington, July 3.—The steamship Armenian carried no passengers and all Americans on board were regularly signed members of the crew. Official notification to this effect reached the State Department today. The manager of the Leland Line informed American Consul Washington at Liverpool, who in turn notified the Ambassador.

ANNOUNCE ENGAGEMENT.

Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Williams, of Hillside avenue, announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Allson Williams, to Harry W. Havard, Jr., of Richmond, Va. Mr. Havard was graduated from Princeton University in the class of 1913.

VON MINDEN BOOMED FOR STATE SENATOR

His Republican Friends Are Anxious Concerning His Candidacy This Year.

Judge Rene P. von Minden, corporation counsel for the borough of Dunellen, and one time Assemblyman from Middlesex county, is being boomed by many of his Republican friends of the borough and Piscataway township for the office of State Senator from this county.

The present Senator, Dr. William E. Ramsey, is from Perth Amboy, also the home town of Assemblyman Arthur A. Quinn, both of whom are Democrats. Many of the voters of the county object to having two representatives in the State Legislature from one municipality, and for this reason are seeking to give Judge von Mindon's boom an early start, as the Piscataway township and Dunellen sections of the county are without a representative in either house.

Judge von Minden is a justice of the peace in New Market, corporation counsel for Dunellen, and State councilor of the Jr. O. U. A. M. He practices law with an office at Plainfield, and has a wide circle of friends in both Middlesex and Union counties.

Miss Minnie Conover has returned from Basking Ridge where she has been visiting friends.

Julius Breyera nd family have been spending a few days at Atlantic City.

LeRoy Scandell, of North avenue, has left for Brooklyn where he has accepted a position.

D. W. H. Moody is at present in Virginia, where he will remain for the balance of the summer.

Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Smalley have been entertaining as a guest Mrs. Homer Haight, of Rutherford.

Mr. and Mrs. Percy Abbott left for Asbury Park this week, where they will spend the next three months.

Mrs. G. W. Mackay, of the borough, is confined to Muhlenberg Hospital, Plainfield, where she underwent an operation early in the week.

Mrs. Mary Mottley, of Raritan, spent a portion of the week as a guest of Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Weiner.

Mr. and Mrs. Alvah Gray and Mr. and Mrs. William E. Terry have left for Hunterdon county, where they have leased a farm for the summer.

Miss Emily Appert, sister of Emanuel Appert, of the borough, but whose home is in Switzerland, is spending a few days here visiting friends and relatives.

Miss Lida Hoffman, of Annandale, has been in tse borough for a few days visiting her cousin, Mrs. William Wyckoff.

Mrs. Fred Blank and daughter, of Corona, have returned home after visiting Mrs. Henry Kirchner, Sr.

Mrs. Charles C. Vail is spending a month at her old home Utica, N. Y.

CONTRACTS.

Contractor Hawkyard has received two contracts for concrete sidewalks on Columbia street, one for 300 feet from Frederic Harrington, and the other from the Dunellen Home and Investment Company.

BUILDING TWO HOUSES.

Alberne H. Burdick is at present erecting two dwellings, one for Walter R. Fowler, on Washington avenue, near Culhane place, and one for himself for investment purposes on Washington avenue and Walnut street. Walter G. Clawson has the mason contract for the latter house.

The Fowler dwelling is to be an elaborate affair, of hollow tile construction, and will be one of the largest dwellings on this thoroughfare. The Burdick house will be hollow tile construction for the first story, and sninglied for the second.

SELLS PROPERTY.

Charles Wrage, a local contractor, this week sold to Samuel H. Schvartz, a house and lot on Second street, between Washington and Jackson avenues. The dwelling was erected this spring for investment purposes.

FLAGS TOMORROW.

Those in charge of the Independence Day celebration committee, as well as Mayor Latham, have expressed the desire that the national rolors be shown tomorrow as well as Monday from dwellings and places of business. The Borough Hall is to be decorated, an appropriation of $5 having been made by the Common Council.

HOURS OF THE CELEBRATION.

The hours for the various parts of the celebration of Monday have been announced as follows: Morning, Dhnellen Park, 10:30 o'clock, sports, athletic events and baseball game, Maurer Oval, 1:30 o'clock; fireworks, Maurer Oval, 8 o'clock. The morning exercises will be closed promptly at 12 o'clock, noon.

COMING EVENTS.

TOMORROW.

Union anti-saloon service at the Presbyterian church, 7:30 p. m.

MONDAY.

Independence Day celebration.

Rockview Council, D. of L., install officers.

TUESDAY.

Board of Education meets.

July meeting of the Borough Council.

William G. Holton Council, Jr. O. U. A. M., install officers.

Rev. Dr. T. J. Richardson, of Ohio, has been announced as the speaker at the union anti-saloon service at the First Presbyterian church tomorrow evening at 7:30 The service is one of 100 such gatherings to be held in various parts of the State under the auspices of the New Jersey Anti-Saloon League. The congregations of the Methodist, Baptist and Presbyterian churches will unite in this service.

'Plains & Fanwood.

Owing to Monday being observed as a holiday, the monthly meeting of the Bucket and Engine Company will be held in the firehouse on July 12, the second instead of the first Monday in the month.

The Rev. J. Madison Hare will be in charge of the services at the Baptist church tomorrow, after an absence of two weeks while he was away on his vacation. Incidently it will mark the completion of Mr. Hare's second year as pastor of the local church. Bible school will be at 9:30, with classes for all ages, while at the 10:45 services the pastor will preach on "Patriots Who Made Independence Day Possible," as a fitting subject in observance of the Fourth of July. The weather permitting, the Young People's service will be held on the lawns surrounding the church in the evening at 6:30, with Willard Marston in charge.

Tomorrow will see the completion of the convention of the Young People's Assembly, which has been held at Peddie Institute, Hightstown, during the past week. Mrs. Edward Johnston and Miss Mae Weller have been at the convention the whole week as delegates from the Young People's Society of the Baptist church, and Edward Hetfield and Howard Melick left this morning to attend the closing session.

Superintendent Sisserson will be in charge of the meetings of the Adult Bible Class and Sunday-school at the Willow Grove chapel tomorrow. Songs of a patriotic nature will be rendered by the members of the Sunday-school in observance of the Fourth of July.

The Westfield Golf Club will be the mecca for many local residents who are members of that organization on Monday. In the morning there will be the medal play handicap with cups for the best net and gross scores. In the afternoon there will be a women's putting contest with first and second awards. Outside of individual matches there will be nothing of especial interest in tennis. Great preparation are being made for the beginning of night tennis, which will commence on July 12. Three local men, S. W. McAnneny, Octavus Knight and William Gardinar, are on the committee arranging for the tournament in which nearly every local member is entered.

There will be a baseball game between the borough benedicts and single men to be played on Monday morning on the Park avenue diamond, and if all those who have promised to put in an appearance show up it will be some game. Everyone will be given a chance as it is doubtful if some of the old-timers could last nine innings if they wanted to.

Mr. and Mrs. Paul Ritter and son, of Perth Amboy, are visiting the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Ritter, of South avenue.

Miss Marjorie Allen, of Westfield, has been spending several days with her uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. R. G. Meggy, of North avenue.

After spending two weeks in Muhlenberg Hospital, following an operation for appendicitis, John Meggy returned to his home on North avenue, yesterday.

Following the annual custom, a gang of gardeners has been busy for several days putting the grounds surrounding the local C. R. R. of N. J station in shape for the Fourth of July. Local residents have a clear claim to the honor of having the best grounds around the station of any place on the system. One resident was so proud of them that one year when he thought the valuation had been made too high he protested before the County Tax Board for fear the railroad would cease to keep the grounds in shape and secured a one-third reduction.

The Rev. Oscar Stuart Michael will occupy the pulpit of the Episcopal church at the 11 o'clock service tomorrow. Holy Communion will also be celebrated. The re-arranging of the classes in the Sunday-school is completed and will be in the new order tomorrow.

The Rev. J. Madison Hare, pastor of the Baptist church, will be one of the principal speakers at a huge "safe and sane" Fourth of July celebration at Hackensack on Monday.

A pick-up team of 'Plains boys will journey to Berkeley Heights on Monday, to try and take the measure of an aggregation at that place. They have been successful on two previous occasions.

Miss Ethel Strong, of Martine avenue, is visiting relatives in New Brunswick.

George Jaspersen, of Martine avenue, is spending the week-end and holiday with friends in Brooklyn.

Announcement has been received here of the marriage of Miss Emily J. Duviers, of Jersey City, to George Kuehn, of the 'Plains, the ceremony being performed in the Murray Hill Episcopal church on Wednesday afternoon, in the presence of the relatives of the couple. Following a short wedding trip the couple will return to the 'Plains to reside.

Three new ordinances regulating the salaries of the overseer of the poor, the assessor and recorder went into effect in the borough on Thursday.

The monthly session of the local branch of the National Association Opposed to Woman Suffrage has been postponed from Monday, owing to the holiday.

A mass meeting under the auspices of the Anti-Saloon League of America will be held at the Baptist church tomorrow afternoon at 3:30. It has been arranged through the efforts o the Rev. Raymond E. Marshal, pastor of the Methodist church.

The services at the Methodist church will be as usual tomorrow, with the exception of Sunday-school, which will be at 2:15, in order that the children may attend the Anti-Saloon mass meeting. The Rev. Raymond E. Marshal, who has arranged the meeting, has secured a promise from the directors of the State convention, now being held at Atlanti City, to have a prominent State worker present as the principal speaker, but as yet Mr. Marshal does not know who it will be.

At last night's meeting of Twilight Council, Jr. O. U. A. M., held in the lodge rooms in Excelsior Hall, the officers for the ensuing year were installed as follows: Councilor, Albert MacCauley; vice councilor, Henry C Meyer, Jr.; conductor, Robert Anson warden, Walter Van Riper; inside sentinel, Samuel MacCauley; outside sentinel, John Lindsey; recording secretary, John E. Rev. P. C. Bascom will preach in the Methodist church tomorrow morning in the absence of Rev. D. C. Dorchester, who will occupy his father's pulpit in St. Mark's M. E. church, Brooklyn.

Watchung.

Special patriotic services will be held in the Mary E. Wilson Memorial Union church, both morning and evening, tomorrow. Mr. Ramsey will preach in the morning on "The Weakness of America in the Present Crisis," and in the evening his subject will be "Things Our Nation Must Keep Sacred. There will be special music at both services. Before the morning sermon, the regular children's sermon will be given. The number of children in attendance has been very gratifying, but it is hoped that there will be a gradual increase in their number.

Mrs. Henry Bruger and family, of Elizabeth, are now occupying their bungalow on the Watchung Mountains for the summer.

Miss Theresa E. Schmidt has gone to Lake Sunapee, N. H., where she will spend the summer months.

The monthly meeting of the Watchung Chemical Company will be held Tuesday evening at fire headquarters.

George Gillie, of New York city, is spending the week-end with Mr. and Mrs. Howard Vail.

Dr. Ramsey, a professor in the University of Missouri, has been visiting his brother, Rev. Mebane Ramsey.

Mrs. Jack O'Connor and daughter, of New York city, are visiting Mrs. O'Connor's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Hippolyte Texier.

An All-Gas Kitchen Is An Ideal Kitchen

Ideal for summer because it permits of work being done without heating the whole house.

Ideal for all the year because it is a time saver, a labor saver and a money saver.

You must cook food and you must heat water. Why not do both the best and easiest way, which is The Gas Way?

You can afford to. You can not afford not to. Let us tell you how easily and how cheaply it can be done.

TRUE PATRIOTISM.

Let s have a safe and sane Fourth. Enuf' blood was shed by the "Boys of 76" without adding to the sacrifice universally.

It is the height of folly to invite danger thinking that the boldness and fearlessness displays one's patriotism.

Instead of the noise and powder, spend an hour with your American History—and when you comprehend the marvelous strides our Republic has made in these one hundred and thirty-nine years—when you picture the great characters that gave us Independence Day — you will be better men and women, better boys and girls. You will more fully sense that true respect and patriotism which comes from one's inner self.

EASILY DECIDED.

This Question Should Be Answered Easily By Plainfield People.

Which is wiser—to have confidence in the opinions of your fellow-citizens, of people you know, or depend on statements made by utter strangers residing in far-away places? Read the following:

C. L. Treat, painter and paperhanger, 411 East Third street, Plainfield, says: "I suffered for a long time from kidney trouble and for years couldn't get relief. My back ached constantly and I had pain across my kidneys. My kidneys were in bad shape and I was all run down, in fact, was almost a physical wreck. Hearing of Doan's Kidney Pills, I got a supply at Randolph's Drug Store and my experience was so satisfactory that I cannot make my endorsement too strong. I simply wouldn't be without Doan's Kidney Pills on hand.

A Galley o' Fun!

MEANNESS.

It was only with the utmost difficulty that Noah was able to control himself, as the two mosquitoes of the Ark waxed red and corpulent on the back of his hand, gorging themselves to repletion.

"If it wasn't for the grudge I have against my posterity," he rasped through his clenched teeth, "I'd smash your infernal carcasses!"

The Height of Imagination.

MODERN DEFINITIONS: A WEDDING.

A wedding is a joyfully-sad event planned by a little girl at the beginning of the doll age. The arrangements are fully worked out as the years pass, and by the time the man appears everything is practically ready.

Several important reasons cause a wedding. Of these the groom is the least important. He is present merely to make the event legal.

The most important reason is the bride. Next in order is the maid of honor, then the bridemaids. The best man and ushers are simply the groom's accessories. The minister is the executioner—in disguise.

The bride has not slept for a week—yet she is cool and calm. This is because she has rehearsed her part for years. The groom is in a state bordering on nervous collapse. He has speculated for many hours as to whether he will pull through or die. As the ceremony proceeds he is quite sure that he will die. The day after the wedding the bride and groom think that they are in heaven—but it is really Yonkers. The maid of honor and the bridemaids are all at home looking very sad and pensive. Most of the men are at the club—recovering with the aid of whisky and soda. The minister is in his study. He has just sent his fee to the coal man.

Clerk—How shall I mark these new dress-goods?

Old Tapeyard—Just figure out fifty per cent. profit and add seven odd cents, so the women will think it's a bargain.

THEY ALL LOOK ALIKE.

As the little man walked absentmindedly along the sidewalk he suddenly stopped in front of a book store. It recalled to him the meaning of that piece of string on his finger and with a brightened face he entered.

"Just a minute," he said to the clerk. "My wife wanted me to get a book for her—a certain novel she's heard a good deal about. I must find the memorandum she gave me. She wrote the name on a slip of paper and I put it in my pocket."

After considerable fumbling, he produced a small bit of paper, and laying it on the counter, took out his spectacles and adjusted them on his nose.

"Here is the name—Cobb's Cornatine. Yes, that's it."

"I—I'm afraid I don't know the book, sir," said the clerk apologetically, "but I'll look through the list of new ones." And he ran his eye over the list on the wall. "No, I'm sorry to say I can't find it here. You are sure of the name?"

"Yes, it's right here on this piece of paper."

"Well, I'm afraid we haven't got it, then."

"But—but I don't dare to go home to my wife without it. I promised to get it for her."

A POSSIBLE EFFECT.

"What do you think of this movement against Sunday golf?"

"I think it ought to drive every liberty-loving citizen to the links whether he cares for the game or not."

THE CHOICE.

"Look 'ere, Jimmy, wot's it gonter be? Me or cigarettes?"

NOT THE SAME LADY.

Medium — Somebody who passed over is asking for "John!"

Widower—That can't be Annie [illegible]

Rent one of your rooms and reduce your own rent materially. It's a simple and sensible plan—and it works.

COUNSEL AND CLIENT.

A Lawyer's Right to Defend a Prisoner He Knows to Be Guilty.

Ought an advocate to defend a prisoner whom he believes to be guilty? Mr. Justice Darling in a case in which a solicitor was the plaintiff made some observations on this familiar problem which ought not to go unrecorded. He protested, says the London Globe, against the notion that a lawyer, whether barrister or solicitor, was under an obligation to cease to conduct a case which he realizes to be bad.

"If an advocate in the course of a trial for murder comes to recognize that his client is guilty is he," asked the learned judge, "to say to the court, 'Hang my client?'" Judges have seldom asked about the ethics of advocacy in open court. It was, however, in a considered judgment in the court of exchequer that Baron Bramwell made his famous contribution to the discussion.

"A man's rights," said the baron, "are to be determined by the court, not by his advocate or counsel. It is for want of remembering this that foolish people object to lawyers that they will advocate a case against their own opinions. A client is entitled to say to his counsel: 'I want your advocacy, not your judgment. I prefer that of the court.'" Mr. Justice Darling, in the jargon of the courts, concurs.

Laymen have usually been readier than lawyers to discuss the ethics of advocacy. "What do you think of supporting a cause you know to be bad?" Everybody knows Dr. Johnson's reply when Boswell asked him this question. "Sir, you do not know it to be good or bad till the judge determines it."

Less generally known is Sydney Smith's contribution to the discussion. "Justice is found experimentally to be most effectually promoted by the opposite efforts of practiced and ingenious men presenting to the selection of an impartial judge the best arguments for the establishment or explanation of truth. It becomes, then, under such an arrangement the decided duty of an advocate to use all the arguments in his power to defend the cause he has adopted and to leave the effects of those arguments to the judgment of others." This was said in an assize sermon the famous wit preached at York in 1824.

DARING BELLE BOYD.

Brilliant and Romantic Career of the Famous War Spy.

Stonewall Jackson's valley campaign was one of the great deeds of history. Not since Napoleon's time have men been so dazzled as they were by that great exploit of his. Yet Stonewall might have gone down the valley in defeat had it not been for a little college girl named Belle Boyd.

The Union general, Shields, was quartered at Miss Boyd's house. He held a council of war there. Miss Boyd bored a hole in the floor of her chamber, which was over Shields' room, and lay there with her ear to it throughout the night. The next morning Stonewall Jackson was in full possession of the plans for a great battle and was able to defeat the Union army.

She kept up her valiant work for the Confederates until the Union officers began to suspect her, and Jackson ordered her to move from her Shenandoah home to Winchester. She had been arrested by the federals and had flirted her way to liberty, for she was a pretty girl despite the libelous photographs of her. In Winchester Jackson conferred upon her a commission as captain in the Confederate army. By this time the whole north had become aware of the services she was rendering the Confederacy, and every officer and private was on the alert to get her. Yet she escaped until 1864, when she was caught on a blockade runner. Her captor lost his heart to her, deserted the navy and married her, and the Prince of Wales, afterward Edward VII., attended the wedding.—New York Times.

Encouragement.

He was very bashful, but she liked him and was willing to encourage him, and she saw her opportunity when he said:

"That's a beautiful dog you have there, Miss Ethel. Is he affectionate?"

"Is he?" she answered archly. "Here, Bruno! Here, good dog! Come and show Charlie Smith how to kiss me."—Exchange.

Not as She Thought.

Fond Mother—Our Johnny is a great favorite with his teacher. Sympathetic Friend—Is that so? Fond Mother—Yes, indeed. Why, only the other day she told Johnny if there were another boy like him in the class she would feel entitled to demand an increase in salary.—Richmond Times-Dispatch.

Explained.

"This isn't my suit," said Hawkins to the pawnbroker. "This is a half dozen sizes smaller than mine."

"You are mistaken," replied the pawnbroker. "This is your suit, but it has been in soak so long that it has shrunk."

A Dark Hour Friend.

Jimson—Oh, yes; I knew old Simson. He was a good sort. He did a very kind action once for me when the clouds were dark and threatening and the world looked so black. Pimson—What did he do? Jimson—He lent me an umbrella.—Boston Globe.

Safety First at Sea.

In nautical parlance the phrase "The three L's" means "lead, latitude and lookout," these being the chief three things to be considered in keeping a ship from running aground.

BELL BELIEVES MEN WILL THINK BY WIRE.

Inventor of Telephone Looks to Vibrations For Amazing Discovery.

Dr. Alexander Graham Bell, inventor of the telephone, believes that some day men may be able to think by wire.

"Men now can do nearly everything else by electricity," said Dr. Bell, "and I can imagine them with coils of wire about their heads coming together for communication of thought by induction.

"I have been struck by the fact that nearly all of the recent steps have had to do with vibrations. To illustrate, suppose you have the power to make an iron rod vibrate with any desired frequency in a dark room.

"At first, when vibrating slowly, its movement will be indicated by only one sense, that of touch. Soon, as the vibrations increase, a low sound will emanate, and it will appeal to two senses. At about 32,000 vibrations to the second the sound will be loud and shrill, but at 40,000 vibrations it will be silent and its movements will be indicated by no ordinary human sense.

"At 100,000 up to about 1,500,000 vibrations per second we have no sense that can appreciate any effect. After that stage its movement is indicated first by the sense of temperature and then when the rod becomes red hot by the sense of sight. At 3,000,000 it sheds violet light.

"Now, the thought has occurred to me that there must be a great deal to be learned about the effect of those vibrations in the great gap where the ordinary human senses are unable to hear, see or feel the movement. The power to send wireless messages by ether vibrations lies in that gap, but the gap is so great that it seems there must be more."

WAR NOW IS SEVEN HELLS.

British Tommies Tell Nurse They Have Horror of Poisonous Gas.

An American woman who is serving with the American ambulance with the British army in France writes home:

"The gas warfare is having a dreadful effect on the nerves of the men. So little can be done in defense. No courage, no splendid enthusiasm, can stand against it.

"I came down from the north of England with a compartment full of soldiers who had been invalided home wounded in the winter. They were all most sorrowfully returning to their regiments. It seemed so unlike what we wish to think of fighters that I tried to find the reason.

"It was soon given, for every one talks in these troubled times. Some of the boys unblushingly said, 'War was hell, anyway, before the use of gas; now it is seven hells.' None of them was so particularly afraid of being killed, but the effects of gas had gripped their imagination."

FRANCE MAY QUIT COLONY.

St. Pierre, Miquelon and Langley May Become Part of Newfoundland.

The possibility that the Miquelon archipelago, the last North American possession of France, may be annexed to Newfoundland at the close of the war is receiving serious consideration in that colony.

The little islands of St. Pierre, Miquelon and Langley, a short distance off the south coast of Newfoundland, have formed for two centuries the advance base for the French codfishery on the Grand banks.

In recent years the prosperity of the tiny colony has steadily diminished and all possibility of industrial progress for some time to come was destroyed when the French government in February last summoned all the ablebodied men in the islands to the colors.

The town of St. Pierre, where most of the colonists live, is now inhabited only by aged men, women and children.

ALL IMMIGRANTS WELCOMED.

On Account of War United States Turns None Back Now.

A new immigration policy of the United States has been brought about as a result of the European war, United States Commissioner of Immigration Anthony Caminetti announced at San Francisco.

"President Wilson," Mr. Caminetti said, "does not desire to send one single immigrant back to his country where any danger might come to him. The immigration policy of the government even goes further. On account of the Lusitania incident the government will not send any immigrants back to England or France."

Wireless on Railroad Trains.

Following the accident on the Scottish border in which 158 lives were lost in the collision of three trains, the British at once began experiments with a wireless signaling apparatus. This innovation, it is contended, will make railway collisions all but impossible.

The Splendid Stocks of

The SIMPSON-CRAWFORD STORE

Will Be Placed on Sale at an Average of HALF PRICE!

This remarkable merchandise transaction, the most important chronicled in years, marks the end of a retail dry goods business which has been honorably known to New York for the better part of two generations.

The fine Scotch firm of Simpson, Crawford & Simpson, founded fifty years ago, won for itself a proud name among the merchants of this city through years of upright dealing and good merchandise, fairly sold.

The friendly old store, on the site of which the present splendid building of the Simpson Crawford Corporation, the successors, now stands (occupying the whole block front along Sixth Avenue, from 19th to 20th Street), counted its loyal patrons by the thousands.

But retail conditions having changed, it was deemed best to give the business up. Until the very closing of its doors—only lately decided upon—Simpson Crawford stocks had been kept fully up to the requirements of fashion and home comfort. The store, which has done as high as $6,750,000 worth of business in a single year, added over $4,000,000 worth of new goods during the year just passed.

GIMBELS Bought The Entire Stock, Over $680,000 at Retail

This whole splendid stock (except for certain lots sent to one or two stores in other cities) will be sold in our New York, Philadelphia and Milwaukee stores—

At an Average of HALF PRICE

—so very, very much below the true value of the goods were we able to buy them. Of course, some of the lines were broken in assortments. Where we found this to be the case we strengthened them with goods from other sources. The result is

A Three-fold Massing of Desirable Goods Under-priced:

(1) The splendid Simpson-Crawford stocks themselves.

(2) Many fine lots of goods, purchased at relatively great savings, from manufacturers, importers and wholesalers eager to co-operate.

(3) Exceptional clearance lots from our own nearly $6,000,000 stocks.

Hence, rather more than A MILLION IN MERCHANDISE will go on sale in New York and Philadelphia on Tuesday morning at the most sensationally low prices we have offered for goods of like quality.

Every GIMBEL Stock Has Some Of The Simpson-Crawford Goods---Over 60 Distinct Departments

Included is Men's, Women's and Children's Apparel of every sort; China, Silverware, Furniture, Floor Coverings, Linens, and all other Housefurnishings; Toilet Goods; Leather Goods, Books, Pianos,—in fact, every stock usually represented in a great store.

In The Subway Store Will Be Found The Lower-Priced Goods of Every Stock

SPECIAL NOTICE:

Two sorts of price-tickets will distinguish the goods in the Simpson-Crawford Sale.

(1) "Gimbel Price—Simpson-Crawford Price" indicates goods that came from the Simpson-Crawford Stock.

(2) "Sale Price—Value" indicates goods from other sources, as explained above.

Every Precaution Has Been Taken to Assure Quick and Helpful Service for the More-than-Holiday Attendance Expected at the Sale

A cordial welcome to old Simpson-Crawford customers, to whom we also extend a hearty invitation to make Gimbels their store home in future. They will find familiar faces among the old Simpson-Crawford employees, of whom several hundred have joined our force.

THE FOURTH OF JULY.

There are all kinds of times for all kinds of things, and the Fourth of July is the time for patriotic reflection and demonstration. Our fathers dreamed of this, and Samuel Adams predicted it. We are, however, trying in our day to be demonstrative with sanity and prudent explosives. It would not be wise to prohibit all fireworks and noise; the youngster gets inspiration from both, and if we older people were to be real honest with ourselves we would admit that we do also.

But behind all outward expression there is the real thing to be kept before us, namely, the purpose of the celebration of this anniversary. What does Fourth of July mean to you? What do you try to make it mean to your children? It is liberty day! Not the general thought of liberty, but the thought of OUR liberty —or our kind of liberty would state it better. It required a peculiar moral and physical courage for our fathers to sign and issue the Declaration of Independence. It is a great document. It meant death to its signers if its enunciation spelled failure to succeed. It was a literal pledging of "the lives, the fortunes and the sacred honor" of its sponsors. If they had failed their "sacred honor" would not have been lost, but their "lives and fortunes" would have been if they had been caught. It was liberty founded on righteousness, justice and equal opportunity, which they declared; they succeeded and they gave it to us. We have it in a degree unsurpassed, if not unequalled, by the people of any other nation.

Fire the cannon, ring the bell, blow the horn; revere the fathers! Make a joyful noise unto the Lord. The work of our fathers deserves our thanksgiving and praise for we are indeed a mighty people bedrocked on the eternal principles of a great declaration of freedom.

All hail the Fourth of July, our natal day of the blessings of free government!

JOHN FRANKLIN FORT.

It Pays to Secure a Tenant Who Pays.

The uncertain sort of tenant is easy to find. He is always answering the call of the window sign of "To Let." He is easy to please. Even a rather high rental does not frighten him away.

But the Stay-and-Pay tenant is not so easy to secure. He is surer of what he wants. He does not take the first house, or apartment, or store that he finds. He watches and answers "To Let" Ads.

And to secure him for your tenant is a good day's work —a good week's work.

THE FORUM

Editor. Plainfield Daily Press:

During the controversy about the disgraceful proceedings at the Watchung avenue lot on Monday night why don't the chief of police tell you that he was on the grounds and that he told the young hoodlums not to do anything that would make trouble for (him) the chief. A GROTESQUE BIRD

The Tufted Puffin Is the Joke of the Arctic Seas.

TO LOOK AT HIM IS TO LAUGH.

This Curious Creature Is Silent, Tranquil and Droll, With an Air of Profound Gravity and Spends His Winters Roaming Over the Ocean.

It is a curious fact that the far north and the far south each has a sea bird peculiar to itself, and in both cases these birds, although unlike one another in general appearance, are among the oddest looking members of the bird family that the world contains.

The characteristic bird of the antarctic regions is the penguin, whose strutting companies, gathered on an icy shore, look like assemblages of little men, in long tailed black coats and spotless white waistcoats, waiting to sit down at ceremonious dinner.

The characteristic bird of the arctic regions is the auk, a thick set, awkward creature, fond of fishing, like the penguin. The largest member of the family, the "great auk," or "gare fowl" has been driven into extinction within historic times. Another member, which the Audubon societies are trying to protect, is the queer looking, laughter exciting, and yet very grave and earnest native citizen of the north Pacific shores and islands, called the tufted puffin.

When the tufted puffin is looking his best (which is, of course, during the courting season) he wears a big red beak and a white mask, through which his green, red rimmed eyes gleam strangely, and shows a pair of bright vermilion legs and feet. From the top of his mask, on one side over the ear, curls a long golden white "feather horn." It seems that no description is able to convey the ludicrous impression which these birds make upon the beholder. Sailors seeing them for the first time break into guffaws of laughter. They call them "sea parrots" and on account of their drolly grave manners they have also been nicknamed "Quakers."

Says William Leon Dawson: "It is difficult to exaggerate the gravity of these tranquil birds, always absolutely silent, save that when caught and harassed, they may emit a low, hoarse moan. They spend much time standing demurely at the entrances of their burrows, their little plumes nodding like tassels on so many caps."

Like all the auks, the puffins are especially remarkable for the great size of their beaks and the changes which their heads undergo at the breeding season. Some of the horny plates of the big beak fall away at the end of the season, the white mask on the face, together with its nodding plumes, disappears, the red eyelids fade and the whole head becomes blackish.

Naturalists are a little puzzled to account for the size and stoutness of the puffin's beak. If the bird were fond of clams its beak might be of use as a shell breaker, but it seems not to be employed in that way. Neither is it used to dig the tunnels or burrows that the bird forms for its nest in the hard soil of sea fronting cliffs. These are excavated to a depth of three or four feet, and apparently the only tools used are the sharp nailed claws.

In some places it is estimated that several thousand burrows exist on a single acre of sloping shore. The rabbits and puffins engage in a lively competition for the possession of burrows on the Farallones islands, but the big, pyramid pointed beak gives easy victory in these contests. Mr. Dawson says a frightened rabbit will sometimes plunge hastily into a burrow without stopping to consider to whom it belongs, and when he comes out again, with more haste than ever, he is a subject for laughter.

The natives of the north Pacific islands depend largely upon puffins for both food and clothing. The Aleutian "parkas," or feather coats, are made of the skins of puffins, with the feather side turned inward. Forty-five or fifty skins sewed firmly together make a garment which is said to be nearly impervious to cold. The birds are often caught in flight by means of nets at the end of poles handled like butterfly nets. Unlike birds that are more skillful and agile on the wing, the puffins fly straight ahead and are unable to dodge quickly.

Strange as the statement may appear the puffins, like the auks generally, spend the winter at sea. At that season they are to be seen on land only when driven ashore by some resistless tempest, which strews the beaches with their battered forms, many dead and many hopelessly lamed. With the advance of spring and summer they approach the shores where they are accustomed to breed, and then the remarkable changes of their colors, form and plumage that have been already described begin to take place.—Garrett P. Serviss in Spokane Spokesman-Review.

Beggars of Costa Rica.

One day a week the beggars of Costa Rica are privileged characters—that is, on Tuesday they are allowed to beg from shop to shop. It is the custom for business houses to prepare for the weekly visit of the mendicants and to hand over to them small coins or articles of little value. In some instances where merchandise is given away the beggars peddle it about the poorer quarters and so earn a few cents apiece.

MAKING MUSIC BOXES.

Great Skill and Meager Pay For the Experts of Geneva.

One big industry of Geneva, Switzerland, is the manufacture of music boxes. Thousands of men, women and children are employed in the factories, one of which was visited by a young American, who thus writes about the visit:

An attendant invited him to take a seat. He did so., and strains of delightful music came from the chair. He hung his hat on a rack and put his traveling staff in the stand. Music came from both rack and stand. He wrote his name in the visitors' register, and on dipping his pen in the ink the music burst forth from the inkstand.

The manager of the factory explained the process of making music boxes, a business which requires patience and nicety.

The different parts are made by men who are experts in those parts, and they do nothing else year in and year out.

The music is marked on the cylinder by a man who has served several years of apprenticeship. Another man inserts in the marked places pegs which have been filed to a uniform length. The comb or set of teeth which strikes the pegs and makes the sound is arranged by a man who does nothing else. The cylinder is then revolved to see that every peg produces a proper tone.

The most delicate work of all is the revising of each peg. It is done by a workman who has a good ear for music. He sees that each peg is in its proper place and bent at the correct angle.

When the instrument is in its case an expert examines it to see that the time is perfect and good.

The best workmen—those who mark the cylinder and adjust the pegs—earn $1.80 a day, after serving an apprenticeship of ten or twelve years. An ordinary workman earns $1 a day.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

POISONOUS SNAKES.

They Are Absolutely Proof Against Their Own or Other Venom.

Snake venom is a transparent fluid, yellowish in color and of about the consistency of human saliva. When dried it takes the form of flaky yellow crystals. In this shape or dissolved in alcohol or glycerin it will remain unaltered and will preserve its poisonous properties for an indefinite period. No satisfactory chemical analysis has ever been made of it, but it seems to be a very complex albuminous compound. A curious discovery recently made is that the blood of venomous serpents is itself poisonous, containing as it does the principles that are concentrated in the secretion of the venom glands.

Venomous snakes are themselves absolutely venom proof. Rattlesnakes dosed by injection with large quantities of their own or other venom have shown not the slightest ill effects. Another remarkable fact is that serpent venom is harmless to human beings or other animals if taken internally. The late Dr. S. Weir Mitchell found that one-fourth of a drop of rattlesnake poison would kill a pigeon if given by hypodermic injection, but a pigeon fed with six drops a day for three successive days suffered not at all in consequence.

Professor Mangill, a pioneer investigator in this line, had an assistant who boldly swallowed all the venom that could be extracted from four large vipers. No bad effects followed. The same negative result was noted by Professor Baird, at that time secretary of the Smithsonian institution, who ate the venom glands of a rattlesnake. As recently ascertained, serpent venom in such circumstances is harmless, because it cannot pass through the mucous membrane that lines the stomach, and it undergoes changes during digestion that allow it to enter the blood as an innocuous substance.—Every Week.

Trap For Quotation Experts.

If any one wants a catch question to spring on a gathering of self confessed literary sharps let him ask whence comes the quotation, "One touch of nature makes the whole world kin." This is one of the six best sellers in the world of quotations, yet not one person in a hundred knows where it comes from. It is comparatively easy to guess the author, but almost impossible to find a person who can name the work.

FREAK OF THE TIDE

Curous Phenomenon That Occurs In the River Trent.

FURIOUS RUSH OF THE AEGIR.

Like a Monster Tidal Wave the Water From the Sea Sweeps Up the Stream With an Angry Roar, Flinging Its Foam High Into the Air.

"Ware aegir! Ware aegir!"

The river Trent has been flowing out to the sea for hours, leaving long stretches of brown mud glittering in the light of the setting sun. It is a calm summer evening, and we sit waiting and listening on one of the old wharves of Gainsborough, Lincolnshire. The cry is taken up by every boatman, who shouts it again upstream—a strange, eerie warning.

Several small boats are now pushing off into midstream to avoid the mass of churning water which breaks on the foreshore. A group of children add to the tumult with a shrill cry of "Wild aegir! Wild aegir!" which they consider a much better rendering than "Ware aegir!"

By craning forward we can see it now, rounding a bend of the river by the shipyard. The first wave is big and smooth, stretching right across the river, with a swirl of angry water at each side; next follow five or six big rollers, which roar and foam along, leaving masses of broken water in their wake. These are called the "whelps."

Presently we shall see the force of these "whelps" when they reach those big, unwieldy, square nosed barges—which, by the way, are called "keels." There is one such swinging at anchor in midstream just opposite to us. For the last half hour the old keelman has been lolling about the deck smoking his clay and looking idly at the water.

Now he is alert all at once, and, knocking the ashes out of his pipe, he gives a turn at the windlass to tighten the anchor chain. After a glance along the deck to see that all is secure, he looks back up the river. He is calculating where the aegir will carry him to.

There is another barge higher up the river, and as yet nobody has stirred on board. The old man has noticed it, for he shouts, "Ware aegir, Stoney, my lad!" and a young fellow jumps up the hatch and runs to the tiller.

The distant swish has increased to a roar now, and a feeling of intense excitement grips us as we see a small boat rise up on the first wave and disappear for a moment in the hollow. Up again she rises, right into the froth of the "whelps." Another moment and she is through into calmer water.

See! The billow dashes like a monster tidal wave against a wharf and splashes high up into the air with a roar and smother of white foam. Now it has reached the "keel." With a groan and rattle of chain she rises to the wave and is carried along with it, but not very far, for the anchor holds fast and she swings slowly round.

The keel is broadside on now, and the creamy "whelps" dash right over her deck as she rolls in the trough of waves, but as quickly as it takes to tell she swings stern on to the current, which is now rushing upstream with tremendous force, and will continue to do so for two hours or more until high water, when the water lazily returns toward the sea.

The aegirs are not all as big as this one; some are a mere swell about a foot high. The best time to see them is in the spring and autumn, when the equinoctial tides are big on the coast. Just below Gainsborough the aegir is seen at its best, as it rushes along some of the longest reaches of the Trent.

This curious tidal phenomenon only occurs on one or two other rivers in Great Britain, the Severn being one of them, where it is known as the "bore." Those who have seen it, however, say that it does not equal the aegir in any way.—Wide World Magazine.

How Railroads Create Wealth.

Our marvelous crops would count for nothing if forced to lie in the fields where they grow, or driven to seek such markets only as the farmer's team could reach. The cotton crop, which brings to our shores annually nearly half a billion dollars of foreign gold, would be but a fruitless burden on southern winds if there were no railways to carry it to the seaboard. We take from our mines and forests and factories twenty billions of dollars each year, but without means of transportation these costly products would be worthless junk.—Robert Mather in Leslie's.

The French Horn.

The French horn, or cor de chasse, is regarded by some musicians as the sweetest and mellowest of all the wind instruments. In Beethoven's time it was little else than the old hunting horn, which for the convenience of the mounted hunter was arranged in spiral convolutions to be slipped over the head and carried resting on one shoulder and under the opposite arm. The Germans still call it the waldhorn—that is, "forest horn."

THE WOMAN'S COLUMN

New York—The American women, after months of constant giving and working to aid the refugees in the war zone, are now confronted with the problem of providing employment for the refugees. Hundreds of women, bereft of husbands and homes, are already beginning to embark for America, firm in the belief that employment awaits them. Many inquiries are coming concerning the wages of domestics, and their conditions of employment. Many women who have studied the servant problem, declare this immigration of housekeepers and cooks from abroad will serve as a solution of th servant problem. Snce 1900 the percentage of women in domestic service has dropped steadily from 39 per cent. to 32 per cent. American girls prefer the mills, factories and stores to the kitchen, and the regular hours of work, with a place to entertain their friends, to the irregular hours of housework and the seclusion of servants' quarters.

San Francisco—Senora Iturbe, the beautiful wife of General Iturbe, the Mexican commander, is disposing of her diamonds here to finance her work of mercy in her native country. An asylum at Culacan, with 400 orphans, is maintained by the pretty Mexican woman, and on her success in furnishing food to the hungry children depends their very lives. The generosity of Senora Iturbe was uncovered by govrnment agents, who rounded up her agent on the charge of smuggling the diamonds into this country. It is said that flour sells at $50 per hundred pounds at her Mexican home, and that an ordinary spool of thread costs a dollar.

New York—A non-sectarian Christian college for women in India opens its doors today, with the support of English and American philanthropic women. The college is located at Madras, India, and its first class consists of thirty native Indian girls. A large estate in the city of Madras has been secured, and Miss Eleanor McDougall, of London, is presdent of the college. She toured the United States a few months ago and enlisted hearty support. The new college is affiliated with the University of Madras. It is a residential school, and the students will live wth the women professors, who will compose the faculty, and surround their charges with a Christian atmosphere.

Washington—Miss Alice C. Evans, formerly of the University of Wisconsin, is conducting for the government important bacteriological tests in the Department of Agriculture. For the past two years she has been making special investigations in the Bureau of Animal Industry, as the basis of practical work for pure food. Just at present she is making bacteriological examinations of milk immediately after it leaves the cow, to establish whether harmful germs actually exist in the milk in its original form. She is also determining the ripening factors of American cheese, following the process from beginning to end, and experimenting with all stages of the milk from the cow to the cheese. Miss Evans was graduated from Cornell and from the University of Wisconsin, and first became associated with the government work in cheese tests at Madison, Wis.

San Francisco—Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney's piece of sculpture "The Fountain of El Dorado," occupies a position of honor at the Exposition, being located within the walls of a colonnade near the main gates. The carved reliefs that decorate the work deal with the legendary land beyond the frontiers of the Aztecs, which the early explorers believed was paved with gold and studded with jewels. Mrs. Whitney's composition symbolizes the legend—the search for the unattainable. It consists of a central group, the figures of two slaves closing the portals of El Dorado, beyond which the desires of life await. The whole work occupies about 60 feet of wall space.

London—Several different stories are told of the rupture in the membership of the "Lady Volunteer Workers," as the result of the incidents of the first meeting of the league two weeks ago. It is said that Princess Mary has withdrawn her support from the organization, and that the league has fallen flat, although some of the ardent members of the organization declare the rumpus has blown over and harmony reigns, with Princess Mary forgiving the member who dared to differ with her. According to stories that have arisen, Princess Mary left the first meeting in a huff because of the audacity of a Miss Davidson, a relative to the Arcnbishop of Canterbury. The Princess had disagreed with Miss Davidson's statement that the United States must choose between honor and dishonor.

An Appeal to Americans

BY

The Commission for Relief In Belgium

Sole Clearing House for all Belguim Relief

We, as Americans, are enlisted for the war to save seven million men, women and children. It is the greatest commissary undertaking in the history of the world, and in the lexicon of America there is no such word as fail.

We Need Food Supplies as Well as Cash

Railroads, express companies, postoffices, governors and state committees are aiding. Our Flotilla of Mercy, comprising thirty-five chartered ships, is constantly carrying food. But—Our Supplies Are Far too Short!

Are You Helping? If Not, Send in Your Name Now!

Make out your check or money order, or send cash either to your state committee co-operating with this Commission or to the New York Headquarters:

That Independence Day is going to usher in several important changes in the local City League standing, is the general opinion voiced by sportsmen in this city. Today's game between the Hopes and Tabs will have an important effect on the games carded for Monday. The Chapelites are carded to contend with Netherwood in the opening encounter at the Hopes' field Monday and the East Enders are gaining fast. Saurer will oppose Luthman's crew in the afternoon argument and as the Saurer aggregation has yet to win a game it is out to vindicate its poor showing by copping all of the week-end games in which it will participate. Should the Tabs win from Hopes in today's game, they, no doubt, will redouble their efforts to have a clean slate when the sun rises on Tuesday morning. If they do this stunt they are to be congratulated, because they will have vanquished two fierce foes in what promise to be exciting engagements.

First Baptist has yet to register a victory, but promises a surprise by having a .500 resting beside the name. First Baptist, in Tuesday's record of the fray. The Clinton Avenue team tackles the Netherwood troup in the morning and the Tab clan in the afternoon. The West End lads have the league's leading sticker in the person of Roy Apgar and one of the best all-round men in the league in the person of the ever-ready Benny Rosenson. The Netherwood team meets Hope and Clinton Avenue in its section of the big holiday bill and big doings are promised. For the benefit of those who may be in doubt where the games are to be staged, we print the names of the various teams' fields: Tabs, Avon Park; Hopes, Soccer Field on South Second street; Netherwoods, Emerson avenue; Baptists, West End avenue field.

SOMERVILLE HIGH SCHOOL GRAD SIGNED BY ROYALS

One of the many star baseball attractions carded for Monday, is the Royal-All Star encounter, which will take place at 3:30 on the city's best diamond, Parker Field.

"Midge" Kline, the Royal leader, has secured the services of Robeson, the Somerville High School catcher. This boy is the one who caused such terror to P. H. S. base stealers whenever Somerville and P. H. S. clashed.

The All Star team is one made up of P. H. S.-N. P. H. S.-Leal players and will have the best local scholastic pitcher, Voorhees, working on the mound. The line-ups of both teams follow:

ABSTAINERS WILL LINEUP AGAINST NEW YORK CLUB

Jim Monahan's Abstainers will clash with the St. Vincents, of New York, on the Avon Park grounds at 3:30 tomorrow. The Saints are reputed to be a very formidable combination, but the local boys think that they can duplicate their victory of last Sunday when they took the New York Cubs into camp.

Dick Lawton, the youthful heaver of the Tabs, will twirl for them in tomorrow's game and Art Kyle, the P. H. S. crack, will handle his shoots. Eddie Hannon or Scott will roam around first, while Geary will attend to second base. "Kid" Brennan is carded to look after the shortfield position with McCarty guarding the difficult bag. Frank Lawton, Russ Day, Jack Denny and his brother, "Tone," will fight it out for the garden jobs.

LOCAL ATHLETES IN BIG FESTIVAL

Runyon, Daniels, Green and McDonough Will Compete at New Brunswick.

WELL-KNOWN ENTRANT

Plainfielders Will Be Called Upon to Oppose the Cream of Eastern Talent—Many Will Witness the Events.

On Independence Day, New Brunswick will be the scene of a monster athletic meet, to be staged on Neilson Field under the auspices of the Mayor's committee of that city. Valuable prizes are to be awarded to the successful competitors and several local athletic stars are anxious to cop at least one of the trophies. Ralph Runyon, as stated in yesterday's Press, intends entering the running broad jump, the high jump and the pole vault. Ralph Greene, P. H. S. '15, and Bill Daniels, P. H. S. '17, are entered in the meet also, Daniels competing in the running broad jump and 440-yard run. Another local lad, Andrew L. McDonough, sporting the colors of Notre Dame College, will try for honors in the running broad jump, the 440-yard run and in the 1,000-yard run. The celebrated Granger brothers, of Dartmouth, are to be among McDonough's opponents in this event and he will have to contend with two great track stars, Myles McHugh and William C. Weber, of the Pastime A. C. and Elizabeth Y. M. C. A., respectively, in the 440-yard run. Bill Daniels will get a chance to try conclusions with Andy and the others in this event.

"OVER THE FENCE" CRAVATH.

May Set Up New Record For Home Runs This Year.

If Gavvy Cravath continues his four base whoppers at the rate he set the first six stanzas of the present season he will chalk up a home run record that will not be equaled for many years to come. Last year this particular peerless pill pounding Philadelphia outfielder made circuit smashes nineteen times, while up to a day or two ago he had eight to his record.

It is readily figured that if there is a continuation of this remarkable gait the ungraceful Gavvy will have pelted the pitchers for approximately thirty-five grand slams. But he has just about as much chance to accomplish this feat as a growling player has to make an officious umpire change his decision.

The fences and bleachers over the entire national circuit are not as short as they are in the City of Brotherly Love. However, we don't wish to belittle the achievement of Mr. Cravath. If he has fathomed the mystery of driving the old apple out of bounds in fair territory he deserves the credit of being a mighty walloper and is entitled to all glory that is attached to the distinction of being the champion home run getter.

PIEH INVITES HUMOR.

Name of Yankees' Pitcher Reminds Fans of Something Edible.

Cy Pieh was pitching for New York, and the Sox fans were having fun with his name.

"Mince is pitching!" yelled one joker.

"Lemon Pieh!" howled a bleacherite.

"He's our huckleberry!" shouted a third.

Pieh stopped to object to a decision on a ball.

"He cussed hard!" howled a punster.

"Awful crust he has, trying to beat the Sox."

"Don't mince matters!" screamed another.

"Three strikes!" howled the ump.

"Got his desserts!" yelled a New York fan, and the horror was over.

FACIAL PLASTER CASTS.

Having One of Them Made Is a Mighty Disagreeable Process.

Perhaps nothing can be imagined more disagreeable than the process of taking a plaster impression of the features.

The person whose face is to be "taken" is placed flat upon his back, his hair smoothed back with pomatum to prevent it covering any part of the face, and a conical piece of paper, a straw or a quill put in each nostril to breathe through. The eyes and mouth are then closed, and the entire face completely and carefully covered with salad oil.

The plaster, mixed to a proper consistency, is then poured over the features to the thickness of one-quarter or one-half inch.

In three or four minutes this plaster can be taken off as if it were a film, but they are very long minutes. The victim must not sneeze, smile, cough or otherwise move a muscle, or the whole process will have to be repeated.

When a cast of the entire head or of the whole human figure is required, either a cast of the face is added to a mass of clay which is to be modeled to the entire figure, or the whole figure is modeled from drawings prepared for the purpose. This is the work of the sculptor.

When the clay model is finished a mould is made from it. A thin ridge of clay is laid along the figure from the head to the base, and the front is first completed up to the ridge by filling up the depressions two or three inches deep.

The ridge of clay is now removed, the edges of the plaster are oiled, and the other half is done in a similar way. The two halves are then tied together with cords, and the plaster poured in.

In complicated figures, like the Laocoon, the statue is oiled and covered with gelatin, which is cut off in sections by means of a thin, sharp knife, each piece serving as a mold for its own part of the new statue.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Buyers Are Found by Advertising—Because They Are Opportunity-Hunters!

If you have something to sell—real estate, personal property of any sort—there's a buyer for it. You don't know who he is, or where he is. You'd be helpless in trying to locate him—but for the fact that he is trying to locate you!

For buyers are opportunity-seekers. And they have learned that the Plainfield Daily Press classified columns are 'the Happy Hunting Grounds' for opportunities. Thus, when your "ad" starts upon its quest it meets the man for whom it was written—also upon his quest. And that's how "results" follow classified advertising.

HOLIDAY BILL IS FULL OF GINGER

Plenty of All Around Competition to Be Served up on July 5.

BASEBALL THE LEADER

Tennis, Golf and Track Athletes Also Come in for Their Share of the Limelight—All Diamonds Busy.

Local sportsmen will be treated royally on Independence Day, golf, tennis and baseball being the most prominent sports carded for the day. The Plainfield Country Club will hold its second round in the contention for the golf championship and will hold the competition for the Plainfield open tennis championship (men's singles). The scheduled time for this event is 10 o'clock.

There are scores of ball games billed for Monday, those of the City League being about the most important. However, the Royal Giant-All Star encounter, which will be pulled off at Parker Field in the afternoon, ought to draw well.

To the junior contingent of local sportdom, the Queen City-Quaker double bill at Crescent Oval, means much as the two combinations are most evenly matched. "Kale" Velard, the Queen City twirler, may attempt to do the "Iron Man" stunt. However, "Babe" Gleason has promised to be on deck if the scheme fails.

The New Brunswick meet will, of course, attract not a few local lovers of track sports, as will the outing of the Plainfield and Bound Brook Homesteads, at Wayside Park, where Jones' Plainfield A. A. will try conclusions with the St. Joseph team, of North Plainfield. Eddie Hamilton and Eddie Conshay will be the opposing slabmen.

The Plainfield Juniors will journey to Somerville, where they will connect with the K. O. K. A. of that place. This will be a couple bill and bught to be very interesting. The Bound Brook Bees are scheduled to attack the Y. M. A. of that place, in a clashing two-ply killing. The championship of Bound Brook is said to be at stake. The morning tilt is to be enacted on Y. M. A. soil and the afternoon fracas will be staged out on Pierce Oval.

The Elizabeth Rustler A. C. will trot out to Annandale for a double-header with the home team.

SPORTING NOTES

Frank Gotch has come from retirement to wrestle Henry Ordeman, the Minneapolis grappler, today at Humboldt, Ia.

The White-Welsh battle at Brighton Beach today is the biggest battle of the summer. White has many backers, for he has been showing great form in Boston.

One of the greatest sprinting races ever pulled off is that between Harold Smith, of Michigan, and Ward, of Chicago, who meet at the Central A. A. U. track games today at Chicago.

'VETS' TO ENCAMP IN WASHINGTON

G. A. R. to Visit the Familiar Scenes of a Half Century Ago.

ANNIVERSARY REVIEW

The Thrilling Pageant, of National Interest, Will Be Reproduced During the Forty-ninth Annual Gathering of "Boys in Blue."

Washington, D. C., July 3.—Fifty years ago the victorious Union armies, fresh from the battlefields of the Civil War and the surrender of Appomatox, marched down Pennsylvania avenue in Washington.

It was a grand review of the war-scarred legions of Grant and Sherman, of Meade and Sheridan, and the other famous commanders whose "boys in blue" had preserved the Union. President Johnson and General Grant were in the reviewing stand as the veterans swung proudly past to the exulting music of their bands, while the battle flags that had flown on a hundred bloody fields waved over the triumphant host.

This thrilling pageant, of national interest, will be reproduced as far as possible during the forty-ninth annual encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic, which will be held in Washington, September 27-October 3 next, according to the announcement made here today.

It will be the fiftieth anniversary of the grand review. Thousands of the same veterans who marched in that review a half-century ago, uniformed in the Union blue, will again keep step to martial music down Pennsylvania avenue, and pass in parade before President Wilson and members of his cabinet. It will be the last time the veterans will ever again attend an encampment, as the aged men are fast passing away.

The Grand Army, which survived four years of campaigns and never surrendered, will soon have to lower its standards, defeated by Time, the only enemy able to vanquish the veterans. Because of the increasing death rate and the feebleness of the survivors of the great war, it is probable that the Grand Army will never again hold a great encampment after the Washington event. As this gathering is the last in which many of them will participate, and as the anniversary of the grand review is of such historic significance to them and the country, they will make great efforts to be in Washington in September. The encampment will, therefore, be the largest and most successful ever held by the organization.

Washington is making elaborate preparations to receive the veterans, and the nation's Capital will be en fete during the week that the famous soldiers are within her gates.

Government officials and the people of the Capital are a unit in extending invitations, through the press of the country, to the nation to visit Washington during G. A. R. week. Plans are being perfected to make the encampment and the grand review an event of national importance.

An elaborate program of entertainment for the veterans and citizens who visit the Capital at that time is being prepared. The War Department and the Navy Department are co-operating in the program.

The former has arranged for exhibition drills of U. S. troops, cavalry, artillery and infantry, at Fort Myer, which is a suburb of Washington. Some of the best soldiers in the army are stationed at Fort Myer, particularly the cavalry, which numbers among the enlisted men many of the greatest riders in the world. Crack batteries of light artillery are also stationed at Fort Myer. Aeroplane exhibitions are to be given by the Signal Corps. The Wright brothers demonstrated in public the first aeroplane at Fort Myer.

The Navy Department will have a fleet of torpedoboat destroyers, submarines, gunboats and a cruiser detached from the Atlantic fleet and sent up the Potomac River to Washington, where the ships will remain during the encampment. A big feature will be campfires, at which will be held reunions of the various corps of the Union armies.

Just below Washington, on the Potomac, is located Indian Head proving ground, where big guns for the navy or fortifications are tested before being placed on battleships or in our coast defenses. The veterans and visitors will have an opportunity to see the operations at Indian Head, as well as scores of other places of interest in or around Washington.

During encampment week opportunity will be afforded the veterans to revisit Bull Run, Antietam, Appomattox, and other celebrated battlefields.

U. S. ASTOR THEATRE

"Flying Twins," one of the most unique and at the same time interesting photoplays ever produced will be presented today as the topline feature of a splendid program at the U. S. Astor Theatre. The play presents a rare combination of rich humor and thrilling drama and is the type of production that makes the photodrama a product of high artistic attainment. It will afford a bully evening's entertainment. The usual quota of high grade comedies and dramas also will be shown at the popular picture house this afternoon and tonight.

Rose Coghlin, an actress who needs no introduction to Plainfield theatregoers of this city, plays the leading role in the motion picture adaptation of "The Sporting Duchess," from the famous play of the same name, to be presented Monday and Tuesday at the Astor Theatre. It is a Lubin production, released on the V. L. S. E. program and well merits the distinction. It is said to depict one of the most thrilling horse race scenes ever thrown upon a screen.

"The Sporting Duchess" is a tremendously powerful photoplay of intrigue and diplomacy and unfolds opportunities aplenty for some of the most clever tableaux ever shown on the screen. The incidnts around the race track and the stables are strikingly realistic, the climax being the horse race with a thousand and one thrills—a real horse race taken on one of the biggest tracks in the country.

PROCTOR'S THEATRE

Tonight, the patrons of Proctor's Theatre will witness one of the most unique four-part photo-plays yet to be shown at any local moving picture house, when "The Silent Command," a play of mystery, love and supreme dramatic effect will be put on the screen. With this, another episode of the serial motion picture, "The Goddess," in two parts, will also appear today. Travel pictures, which have a high educational value, will round out the program.

A bill of strength has been arranged for Monday, Independence Day, when the headliner as announced will be "Little Miss Brown," with Vivian Martin playing the leading role. Vivian Martin and comedy playlets guarantee a good photo-play, and no mistake will be made in seeing this picture either Monday afternoon or night. Other comedies and dramas will be shown to make the entertainment one of the most complete bills to be presented in this city over the holiday.

Tuesday's program is what one may term wonderful in its make-up, and it should be the means of atracting many. "The Diamond From the Sky," that serial production of mystery and love, will be seen in another installment, while the feature for this day will be the six-part motion picture, "The Avenging Conscience," or "Thou Shalt Not Kill." Without fear of contradiction, it may be said that this is the most mysterious, masterful and sensational motion drama ever devised. It portrays how a sinner is pursued by the horror of his crime, the plot having been suggested by Edgar Allen Poe's story, "The Telltale Heart."

RUNYON LIKELY TO BE CHOSEN SPEAKER

His Re-election, It is Said, Would Be Equivalent to That Honor.

As no county ticket will go before the voters next fall, excepting a group of Assembly candidates, the unusual quiet now prevailing in political circles seems destined to continue. Of course, some localities will have their squabbles and there are affairs of party management to be determined, but outside the Assembly election, there will be nothing to cause a fight between the various parties throughout the county.

Interests in the Assembly contest will be greatly increased not only in Union county, but all over the State by the fact that Assemblyman William N. Runyon's re-election would be almost equivalent to his becoming the speaker of the 1916 Assembly, provided the Republicans have a majority in that body. If Mr. Runyon should be re-elected and the Republicans fail to capture control of the next Assembly then it is conceded that the Plainfield man will be minority leader. He was the majority leader at the recent session.

That Assemblyman Arthur N. Pierson and Charles L. Morgan will be Mr. Runyon's colleagues on the ticket again is generally accepted. Of course, the three of them must first be nominated at the September primaries. There is more than a strong likelihood that they will be opposed by the anti-saloon interests. This was intimated by a representation of the New Jersey League a short time ago. The reason apparently is because of the position they took on the local option issue at election time. They voted for the bill in the House, however.

The Democratic nominations will likely be sought by a large field. That ex-Assemblyman William A. Leonard will be one of the candidates is generally understood. City Attorney Frank V. Dobbins, of Rahway, who was also a member of the 1913 Assembly, may be a candidate also, regardless of the possiblities of his opposing Lucius T. Russell for the county chairmanship.

Mr. Dobbins ran far ahead of his colleagues on the Assembly ticket in 1914. If he had been elected, he was slated to share the honors in the organization of the Democratic assemblymen with Thomas F. Martin, and thereby to be put in line for speaker of the 1916 Assembly. William F. Callahan and John J. Dooley were Mr. Dobbins' running mates on the ticket last fall. It is believed that they may enter the primaries again also.

The terms of nearly all the present members of the Board of Freeholders expire in December. However, they are elected by localities, rather than by the county-at-large. A coroner will be elected by the county, but like the choosing of assemblymen, this is an annual event.

CHAPTER XX.

Conclusion of the Quiet Afternoon.

THE three laughed bitingly in chorus. They jeered, derided, scoffed and raised an uproar which would have had its effect upon much stronger nerves than Georgie's. For a time he contained his rising choler and chanted monotonously over and over: "I could! I could too! I could! I could too!" But their tumult wore upon him, and he decided to avail himself of the recent decision whereby a big H was rendered innocuous and unprofane. Having used the expression once, he found it comforting and substituted it for "I could! I could too!"

But it relieved him only temporarily. His tormentors were unaffected by it and increased their howlings until at last Georgie lost his head altogether. Badgered beyond bearing, his eyes shining with a wild light, he broke through the besieging trio, hurling little Maurice from his path with a frantic hand.

"I'll show you!" he cried in this sudden frenzy. "You give me a chance, and I'll prove it right now!"

"That's talkin' business!" shouted Penrod. "Everybody keep still a minute—everybody!"

He took command of the situation at once, displaying a fine capacity for organization and system. It needed only a few minutes to set order in the place of confusion and to determine, with the full concurrence of all parties, the conditions under which Georgie Bassett was to defend his claim by undergoing what may be perhaps intelligibly defined as the Herman test. Georgie declared he could do it easily. He was in a state of great excitement and in no condition to think calmly or probably he would not have made the attempt at all. Certainly he was overconfident.

It was during the discussion of the details of this enterprise that Georgie's mother a short distance down the street received a few female callers, who came by appointment to drink a glass of iced tea with her and to meet the Rev. Mr. Kinosling. Mr. Kinosling was proving almost formidably interesting to the women and girls of his own and other flocks. What favor of his fellow clergymen a slight preciousness of manner and pronunciation cost him was more than balanced by the visible ecstasies of ladies. They blossomed at his touch.

He had just entered Mrs. Bassett's front door when the son of the house, followed by an intent and earnest company of four, opened the alley gate and came into the yard. The unconscious Mrs. Bassett was about to have her first experience of a fatal coincidence. It was her first, because she was the mother of a boy so well behaved that he had become a proverb of transcendency. Fatal coincidences were plentiful in the Schofield and Williams families and would have been familiar to Mrs. Bassett had Georgie been permitted greater intimacy with Penrod and Sam.

Mr. Kinosling sipped his iced tea and looked about him approvingly. Seven ladies leaned forward, for it was to be seen that he meant to speak.

"This cool room is a relief," he said, waving a graceful hand in a neatly limited gesture, which everybody's eyes followed, his own included. "It is a relief and a retreat. The windows open, the blinds closed—that is as it should be. It is a retreat, a fastness, a bastion against the heat's assault. For me a quiet room—a quiet room and a book, a volume in the hand, held lightly between the fingers—a volume of poems, lines metrical and cadenced, something by a sound Victorian. We have no later poets."

"Swinburne?" suggested Miss Beam, an eager spinster. "Swinburne, Mr. Kinosling? Ah, Swinburne!"

"Not Swinburne," said Mr. Kinosling chastely. "No."

That concluded all the remarks about Swinburne.

Miss Beam retired in confusion behind another lady, and somehow there became diffused an impression that Miss Beam was erotic.

"I do not observe your manly little son," Mr. Kinosling addressed his hostess.

"He's out playing in the yard," Mrs. Bassett returned. "I heard his voice just now, I think."

"Everywhere I hear wonderful reports of him," said Mr. Kinsoling. "I may say that I understand boys, and I feel that he is a rare, a fine, a pure, a lofty spirit. I say spirit, for spirit is the word I hear spoken of him."

A chorus of enthusiastic approbation affirmed the accuracy of this proclamation, and Mrs. Bassett flushed with pleasure. Georgie's spiritual perfection was demonstrated by instances of it related by the visitors. His piety was cited, and wonderful things he had said were quoted.

"Not all boys are pure, of fine spirit, of high mind," said Mr. Kinosling, and continued with true feeling: "You have a neighbor, dear Mrs. Bassett, whose household I indeed really feel it quite impossible to visit until such time when better, firmer, stronger handed, more determined discipline shall prevail. I find Mr. and Mrs. Schofield and their daughter charming, but"—

Three or four ladies said "Oh!" and spoke a name simultaneously. It was as if they had said, "Oh, the bubonic plague!"

"Oh! Penrod Schofield!"

"Georgie does not play with him," said Mrs. Bassett quickly—"that is, he avoids him as much as he can without hurting Penrod's feelings. Georgie is very sensitive to giving pain. I suppose a mother should not tell these things, and I know people who talk about their own children are dreadful bores, but it was only last Thursday night that Georgie looked up in my face so sweetly after he had said his prayers, and his little cheeks flushed as he said: "Mamma, I think it would be right for me to go more with Penrod. I think it would make him a better boy."

A sibilance went about the room. "Sweet! How sweet! The sweet little soul. Ah, sweet!"

"And that very afternoon," continued Mrs. Bassett, "he had come home in a dreadful state. Penrod had thrown tar all over him."

"Your son has a forgiving spirit," said Mr. Kinosling, with vehemence; "a too forgiving spirit perhaps." He set down his glass. "No more, I thank you. No more cake, I thank you. Was it not Cardinal Newman who said"—

He was interrupted by the sounds of an altercation just outside the closed blinds of the window nearest him.

"Let him pick his tree." It was the voice of Samuel Williams. "Didn't we come over here to give him one of his own trees? Give him a fair show, can't you?"

"The little lads!" Mr. Kinosling smiled. "They have their games, their outdoor sports, their pastimes. The young muscles are toughening. The sun will not harm them. They grow, they expand, they learn. They learn fair play, honor, courtesy, from one another as pebbles grow round in the brook. They learn more from themselves than from us. They take shape, form, outline. Let them."

"Mr. Kinosling!" Another spinster—undeterred by what had happened to Miss Beam—leaned far forward, her face shining and ardent. "Mr. Kinosling, there's a question I do wish to ask you."

"My dear Miss Cosslit," Mr. Kinosling responded, again waving his hand and watching it, "I am entirely at your disposal."

"Was Joan of Arc," she asked fervently, "inspired by spirits?"

He smiled indulgently. "Yes—and no," he said. "One must give both answers. One must give the answer, yes; one must give the answer, no."

"Oh, thank you!" said Miss Cosslit, blushing. "She's one of my great enthusiasms, you know."

"And I have a question, too," urged Mrs. Lora Rewbush after a moment's hasty concentration. "I've never been able to settle it for myself, but now"—

"Yes?" said Mr. Kinosling encouragingly.

"Is—ah—is—oh, yes—is Sanskrit a more difficult language than Spanish, Mr. Kinosling?"

"It depends upon the student," replied the oracle, smiling. "One must not look for linguists everywhere. In my own especial case—if one may cite oneself as an example—I found no great, no insurmountable difficulty in mastering, in conquering either."

"And may I ask one?" ventured Mrs. Bassett. "Do you think it is right to wear egrets?"

"There are marks of quality, of caste, of social distinction," Mr. Kinosling began, "which must be permitted, allowed, though perhaps regulated. Social distinction, one observes, almost invariably implies spiritual distinction as well. Distinction of circumstances is accompanied by mental distinction. Distinction is hereditary. It descends from father to son, and if there is one thing more true than 'like father, like son,' it is"—he bowed gallantly to Mrs. Bassett—"it is 'like mother, like son.' What these good ladies have said this afternoon of your"—

This was the fatal instant. There smote upon all ears the voice of Georgie, painfully shrill and penetrating, fraught with protest and protracted strain. His plain words consisted of the newly sanctioned and disinfected curse with a big H.

With an ejaculation of horror Mrs. Bassett sprang to the window and threw open the blinds.

Georgie's back was disclosed to the view of the tea party. He was endeavoring to ascend a maple tree about twelve feet from the window. Embracing the trunk with arms and legs, he had managed to squirm to a point just above the heads of Penrod and Herman, who stood close by, watching him earnestly, Penrod being obviously in charge of the performance. Across the yard were Sam Williams and Maurice Levy, acting as a jury on the question of voice power, and it was to a complaint of theirs that Georgie had just replied.

"That's right, Georgie," said Penrod encouragingly. "They can too hear you. Let her go!"

"Going to heaven!" shrieked Georgie, squirming up another inch. "Going to heaven, heaven, heaven!"

His mother's frenzied attempts to attract his attention failed utterly. Georgie was using the full power of his lungs, deafening his own ears to all other sounds. Mrs. Bassett called in vain, while the tea party stood petrified in a cluster about the window.

"Going to heaven!" Georgie bellowed. "Going to heaven! Going to heaven, my Lord! Going to heaven, heaven, heaven!"

He tried to climb higher, but began to slip downward, his exertions causing damage to his apparel. A button flew into the air, and his knickerbockers and his waistband severed relations.

"Devil's got my coattails, sinners! Old devil's got my coattails!" he announced appropriately. Then he began to slide. He relaxed his clasp of the tree and slid to the ground.

"Going to ——!" shrieked Georgie, reaching a high pitch of enthusiasm in this great climax.

With a loud scream Mrs. Bassett threw herself out of the window, alighting by some miracle upon her feet with ankles unsprained.

Mr. Kinosling, feeling that his presence as spiritual adviser was demanded in the yard, followed with greater dignity through the front door. At the corner of the house a small departing figure collided with him violently. It was Penrod, tactfully withdrawing from what promised to be a family scene of unusual painfulness.

Mr. Kinosling seized him by the shoulders and, giving way to emotion, shook him viciously.

"You horrible boy!" exclaimed Mr. Kinosling. "You ruffianly creature! Do you know what's going to happen to you when you grow up? Do you realize what you're going to be?"

With flashing eyes the indignant boy made known his unshaken purpose. He shouted the reply:

"A minister!"

This has a blouse in yoke effect, a standing collar which may be worn high or turned down, full-length or shorter sleeves and a three-piece circular skirt. With or without trimming sections which form pockets or are in tab effect. Sizes 16, 17, 18, size 17 requiring 4⅞ yards 36-inch material.

Patterns may be obtained at the store of A. E. Force & Company.

ANTI-SUFFRAGE

Conducted by New Jersey Association Opposed to Woman Suffrage.

ANTI-SUFFRAGE.

As an answer to the many reports that are being spread broadcast over the State regarding the so-called alliance between the anti-suffrage organization and the liquor interests, I am giving herewith some extracts from a letter written by Mrs. John R. Emory, wife of the Vice Chancellor of the State and president of the Morristown branch of the New Jersey Association Opposed to Woman Suffrage, to the Daily Record, of Morristown.

"We desire to state in this public way that there is absolutely no foundation for such statements, and we wish to state emphatically and specifically that the New Jersey Association Opposed to Woman Suffrage has never received any money from any liquor interests whatever, and that we have never, either through our State organization or in any of its branches received help from or given help to any liquor trust, association or individual interests of the same in our work against woman suffrage. Our funds are raised by subscription and are the result of faithful, honest, self-denial on the part of the 12,000 to 13,000 quiet, home-loving women of New Jersey, many of them self-supporting, who make up our organization. Our speakers are paid from such funds only, and our work is carried on from such funds only. Our members represent many types of women and are enrolled on all the charitable, church, philanthropic and civic organizations, and we bitterly resent this charge upon our honor, and think it a lamentable thing that it has become possible for such a charge to be made publicly against such a body of women as we represent."

From the Westerly, R. I., Sun: "If women suffragists ever take charge of our government, as some of them desire and confidently expect to do, the chances are that they will light-heartedly and with the best intentions undertake the impossible scarcely less often than every twenty-four hours. Certainly such a prospect is suggested when we consider the activities of the woman's peace party and the Anti-Enlistment League. * * * In failing to discriminate between defensive and offensive war, the women of the Anti-Enlistment League not only condemn their movement, but invite merited ridicule. It would appear that, after all, the most difficult problem confronting modern women, ambitious to play a large part in their country's and the world's affairs, is presented by the need of checking foolishness within their own ranks."

Amelia E. Barr, now eighty-five years of age, who has written sixty-six books, had fifteen children, and is still active in literary work, has this to say of the present feminine unrest: "Women are tired out—and tired out from doing nothing that is worth doing. They are rushing about and doing a lot of talking about their rights and wrongs; they leave their household work undone, and they evade maternity like the lazy, selfish, cowardly creatures they are."

Dr. Charles R. Nisbett, of the Central Presbyterian church, Kansas City, and one of the most widely known ministers in the Middle West, says: "The woman suffrage movement is like the intrigues of Miriam, the sister of Moses, who tried to oust the great Israelite and make Aaron the tribal spokesman. The Almighty never intended that women should take part in politics. She is emotional and has a one-sided nature. She is a natural partisan and sees only one side of a controversy at a time."

For suffragists to assert unblushingly the moral superiority of their sex as an argument for their cause is a severe strain upon our national sense of humor, and is one of the most telling anti-suffrage arguments that a neutral in the suffrage war has to contend with.

He Reached Down and Drew Out the Rest of Jack.

Daddy's Bedtime Story—

The Bunny Rabbit Whose Name Was Jack.

"I KNOW a funny story about a bunny rabbit whose name was Jack," said daddy. "That is, that was his name at first.

"The children's daddy brought Jack home to them in his coat pocket one day.

"The children saw Jack's ears sticking out of their daddy's pocket, and he reached down and drew out the rest of Jack right by the ears, and there in daddy's hand, swinging back and forth by the ears, was the cunningest, furriest, plumpest little white rabbit you ever saw. His little nose went twitchy-twitchy, and his pink eyes were very round, and he just swung back and forth in daddy's hand, and he didn't mind being held by the ears at all, for, you see, children, if I held you by the ears, how you would howl, but bunny rabbits are different.

"'What shall we name the rabbit?' asked the children's daddy. And Clara, who was the oldest, spoke up and said, 'Let's call him Jack.' And their daddy laughed and said that would be a good name for the rabbit, he thought.

"So Jack became a member of that household, and he was a real pet, I assure you. The children used to have a great deal of fun with him. They liked to hold him up by his pink ears, which were so transparent that the sunlight would shine right through them when one of the kiddies held him up, and he would blink and kick sleepily with his white legs.

"He liked to hop around on the lawn and in the garden when they didn't catch him at it and lug him right out of there by the ears, for he used to like to dig away the earth with his funny paws and eat the little green growing things, and as rabbits don't know a great deal it did no good at all to scold him and tell him to stay out of there.

"So the summer months rolled by, and the children continued to have fun with that rabbit. But somehow their daddy would always laugh when they called the rabbit by his name, and they couldn't imagine what amused him.

"But one day they found out when their daddy said to them, 'Children, I guess you'll have to change that rabbit's name.' And they couldn't imagine what he meant till he brought them to where Jack slept in the barn.

"And there was Jack with three of the cutest little baby rabbits you ever saw, for, you see, Jack was not a Mr. Rabbit at all; she was a Mrs. Rabbit.

"And then the children just capered with delight to see those little baby rabbits, and they changed Jack's name to Mrs. Jane."

Glimpses of Married Life

BY MRS. EVA LEONARD

"Is Mrs. Ellson in?" asked Olive of the maid who answered the summons.

"I'll see," replied the maid.

"Take this card, please." Olive slipped one into her hand.

The girl was evidently not accustomed to such formality and glanced at the pasteboard on which was inscribed "F. E. Joplin." She looked in surprise at the caller, then back again at the card before she turned and left Olive standing on the steps in front of the modest rooming house.

"Walk in here," said the girl when she returned, showing the way to the parlor.

Olive sat down in the dull, stuffy room. The air registered the menus of past dinners. She had not long to wait, however. Soon the knob turned softly and Mrs. Ellson stood before her in a handsome house gown. She did not look as old as on the night Olive had seen her at the restaurant. Perhaps the gown she wore gave the effect of youthfulness.

Olive rose and took a few steps toward her, for the woman did not speak, and was regarding her in stony silence.

"I sent Mr. Joplin's card in to you to insure an interview," began Olive. "I wanted to tell you that if your interference in my affairs does not cease I shall report the matter to Dr. Ellson and he will have you put where you belong."

"Indeed!" The woman's black eyes glittered and her nostrils quivered in suppressed rage.

"No sane woman would hide by the steps on a winter night to intercept guests as you did Mr. Joplin when he left our house the other evening.

"He had already shown me your note urging him to rescue me from the grave danger of marriage with your former husband."

"As I told him," began the woman in a smooth voice, "I could not bear to see you, a beautiful young girl, trapped into a marriage that could bring you only misery. My dear young lady, I know of what I speak. I set sail with high hopes only to become what you see, a broken thing, cast aside. No woman ever worshiped her husband more than I did."

Olive raised an impatient hand. "I came here to tell you that however absorbing your interest in my welfare is," the girl's lips curled scornfully, "you must cease to manifest it in annoying interference. You, who hired Mrs. Morton's maid to read my letters to inform you of my plans, that you might write your poisoned letters and send them broadcast; that you might follow me to restaurants and places of amusement. I tell you plainly it's got to stop. Your alimony is to be paid only on condition that you cease to trouble the doctor. I have but to tell him of your latest meddling to have him act."

"Do you mean he does not know?" queried the woman, bending forward eagerly.

"He knows nothing of your note to Mr. Joplin or of your shadowing my home, and he need not know, if this business stops, but my forbearance will end if there is any more of this work."

"Do you mean to try to make me believe that it was out of consideration for me that you forbore to tell him?" Mrs. Ellson's head was erect and her eyes blazed. Olive looked with a tinge of admiration at the defiant creature whose whole life was devoted to revenge.

"You have caused him trouble enough. I wished to spare him. I should think life would be more tolerable for you if you stopped making trouble."

"How dare you talk that way to me!" She stepped forward and looked fiercely into Olive's face.

"I wish to talk plainly enough to make you understand the facts, if that is possible, and so end trouble for both of us," and Olive walked past her out of the room.

Household Hints

TO CLEAN PANAMA HAT

Select a hot, sunny morning. Get a nail brush, any good white soap, ammonia, glycerin and hot water. White soap does not contain much alkali, ammonia bleaches, glycerin makes it supple and glossy when dry.

Use a deep basin so you can immerse the entire hat.

Make a suds with soap and water, rub hat gently inside and out. Dip hat in water once in a while. Examine if there are any spots left.

When clean, rinse in fresh water same temperature as before, allowing one tablespoon ammonia to each gallon of water. Rinse till all trace of soap is gone. Then make last rinse (two quarts water will do), allowing one tablespoon glycerin to each quart. Dip hat in this and pour some of the glycerin water over hat.

Fold a Turkish towel and lay hat on it in the sunshine. Pat it into shape with fingers and, when almost dry, turn it over so sun can reach every side. When dry it will be like new.

THE TABLE

Fricasseed Chicken—Clean, wash and cut up a pair of young chickens; lay in clear water for half hour. If they are old they will not brown so well. Put them in sauce pan with enough cold water to cover them well and set over fire to heat slowly. Meanwhile, cut half pound salt pork in strips and fry crisp. Take out pork, chop fine and put in pan with chickens. Fry in the fat left in frying pan one large onion (or two or three small ones) cut in slices. Let this brown well, then add to chicken with quarter teaspoon of allspice and cloves. Stew all together slowly for an hour or more, until meat is very tender (you can test this with a fork). Take out the fowl and put in hot dish, covering closely until gravy is ready. Add to gravy a great spoonful of walnut or other dark catsup and nearly three tablespoons browned flour, a little chopped parsley and a glass of fruit juice. Boil up once; strain through colander to remove the bits of pork and onion, return to the pot with the chicken; let it come to a final boil and serve, pouring the gravy over the pieces of fowl.

Frangipangi Tart—Mash fine eight macaroons. Pour over them enough hot or boiled milk to make a light batter. Add to this batter about six well-beaten eggs, sweeten to taste, and pour into a sauce pan. Set on stove and stir well until it thickens. Take off and add three ounces good butter and one tablespoon orange juice. Line a baking dish with a good paste, pour in the mixture and bake about one-half hour.

Apricot Gelatin—A wholesome and dainty dessert can be concocted from a combination of canned apricots and gelatin. For family of two or three the apricots are sufficient for dessert next day. Use two tablespoons gelatin to make a quart. Two cups boiling water are called for; instead, use 1¼ cups boiling water, three-fourths cup apricot juice, one lemon and a cup of sugar. As the jelly sets, dice apricots (or use in halves) into the mold. Whipped cream may be used on top.

Graham Cracker Cake—Cream one cup granulated sugar with butter the size of an egg. Add yolks of three eggs. Roll twenty-one large graham crackers, and add that, alternating with three-fourths cup milk, three-fourths cup cocoanut, two teaspoons baking powder and whites of the eggs stiffly beaten; then add one teaspoon vanilla and two tablespoons wine to preserve it. Bake in two layers in a medium oven about twenty minutes. Frosting: Cream two cups powdered sugar with butter size half an egg; add enough lemon juice to spread; sprinkle cocoanut over frosting.

A Letter from the Country

Anywhere Inn
Summertime

Dear Agnes—We're here, as you see, and we are going to like it very well, I think. There are some very nice children for the "kiddies" to play with, and as for that, Agnes, I know you'll be glad to hear that our youngsters look as attractive in their "ready-made" things from Hahne's Infant Wear Department as any of the children here, and most of them are very well dressed at that!

The food is very good, indeed, for us "grown-ups," but of course, impossible for the baby, and there's where my supply of IMPERIAL GRANUM comes in. While the milk seems to be very good I am not taking any chances during this hot weather, so I add IMPERIAL GRANUM to the milk for safety and for nourishment, and baby is thriving just as he did at home, with the added advantage of this wonderful air. As for Ellen and brother, they are splendid, and such appetities! I have to give them IMPERIAL GRANUM between meals to satisfy them, and it's just ideal for their summer cereal.

I've made one convert to IMPERIAL GRANUM since I have been here, a poor, sick little baby, crying all the time, mother distracted to find a food to agree with him. I just made up some GRANUM with water alone, and took it to her, with "The Care of Babies" the firm publishes. We tried it out for a day or so, and my dear, you could actually see the child get better. Then as he grew a little stronger we added milk to the IMPERIAL GRANUM, as I do for my baby, and the little thing is doing nicely now. The mother is so grateful, wants to do everything for me, but I tell her she owes all her thanks to IMPERIAL GRANUM!

No more time now, dear. Do write to me. With love from us all. LOUISE.

IMPERIAL GRANUM, the Unsweetened Food for Nursing Mothers and Babies, is sold in three sizes at Hahne's Infant Wear Department, second floor.

Ask for a free copy of "The Care of Babies," a book every mother should own. If unable to call, write to Hahne & Co.'s Infant Wear Department, and a copy will be sent to you, free of charge.

STRONG ARGUMENTS FOR SLATE ROOFING

Newton, Mass., Suffers Great Loss Through the Use of Shingles.

The recent agitation in this city to forbid roofing buildings of all classes and in whatever location they may happen to be with shingles has been aided by a destructive fire recently in Newton, Mass., which was directly traceable to shingle roofs. Several ice houses, all of which bore shingled roofs, were destroyed. Had the building where the fire originated had a roof covered with a non-combustible material the fire would not have occurred, declared investigators of the fire, reported in the Firemen's Standard.

Starting on the shingle roof of a large ice house of G. D. Miller's at Crystal Lake, Newton Centre, the fire spread until the roofs of fifteen adjoining buildings, most of them dwelling houses, were ablaze. Many slate roofs in the section were showered with sparks and embers which burned themselves out without doing any damage, however.

The ice houses contained 12,000 tons of ice, and the destruction of this, with the buildings, entailed a loss of nearly $50,000. The strong wind which blew directly towards the village carried the sparks a distance of three miles.

"When the breeze took the flaming embers from the fire and lodged them on dry shingles and in dusty eaves-troughs for a quarter of a mile to leeward of the conflagration, there were twelve gleaming arguments against inflammable roofs," said a commentator on the fire. "Had the wind blown a little more briskly or had auxiliary apparatus from adjoining towns not rushed in quickly the complete destruction of a dozen dwellings would have taught the city a sharp lesson. It is hard to understand how intelligent men, mindful of warnings close at hand, can wish to trim a few dollars from the cost of a house by jeopardizing the valuation of half a city."

The fire broke out about 10 o'clock one morning and spread over the dry, combustible roof with great rapidity. The alarm was sent in promptly, but when the first piece of apparatus arrived the fire had reached the whole structure and was burning fiercely. The walls of the ice houses were only partially destroyed.

Newton last fall adopted an ordinance prohibiting any but non-combustible covered roofs hereafter, and recently a public hearing was accorded the people by the City Council on petition of a number of builders and land owners. The Council was urged to change the ordinance so that certain sections of the city would be exempt from its provisions, but the request was refused and the ordinance still stands.

NEWS OF INTEREST IN THE PLAINFIELD BUILDING WORLD

Homes of Distinction
Selected by Walter J Keith Architect

SEMI-BUNGALOW. DESIGN No. D-1340

The above is a charming bungalow for a suburban home. It is of regular frame construction, with a veneer of brick to the sill line of the first story windows, and stucco on metal lath above. These two materials give a harmonious combination of color and texture.

Below is an arrangement of rooms suggested for this attractive elevation, a particularly noteworthy feature of which is the large living room extending across the entire front of the house. A large fireplace is built in at one end, and directly opposite the entrance door is an archway to the hall communicating with the bedrooms and bath. At the end of the hall is a sleeping porch or sun room provided with swing sash and screens.

The dining room is very pleasant, and is separated from the living room by a screen of post and panel construction. To the rear a door opens into the kitchen which is most conveniently arranged. Generous dressing room is provided, also an inside stairway to the basement. Under the kitchen and bath is a laundry with wood floor. Provision is made for a hot air heating and ventilating system.

Exclusive of heating, plumbing, electric work, and decorations this house is estimated to cost $2,500. Plans and specifications $25

All inquiries concerning "Homes of Individuality" will be cheerfully answered by simply addressing "Homes of Individuality Department," Plainfield Daily Press.

COPPER PRICES TAKE BIG JUMP

Sheet Metal is Almost Out of Reach of High Class Builders.

ADVANCE IN CEMENT

Reported That It Will Be Selling at 90 Cents in This Market by September 1—Steel Shows an Increase.

New York, July 3.—Despite the fact that electrolytic copper reached unheard of prices this week, American producers said that prices will probably go still higher. At 25½ cents for finished sheet copper this metal is almost out of reach of even the builder of high class buildings for flashing purposes and galvanized flashing is equally expensive. Some builders are substituting composition material in speculative buildings. Tin is stiff at $3.10 a box, on the New York Metal Exchange, so there is hardly any relief from this field.

Portland cement moved up on the first of the month. It will advance another ten cents before the first of August and by the first of September it will be selling in this market at ninety cents, mill, the price ruling before the price cutting war developed in January. The actual price for Portland cement in this district today is $1.42 a barrel, wholesale, at dock, N. Y. Rosendale is to remain at 90 cents.

Common brick in the New York market has regained its former level of $6 a thousand for Hudsons and Raritans. The market is stronger and there are said to be possibilities of a further advance of twenty-five cents a thousand after the holiday. There is plenty of brick available, but the best prices are being obtained only for the best grades, making the general market range from $5.75 to $6.25.

Quotations opening the second half of the year show a 12.5 per cent. average gain over prices prevailing at the first of the year and are about 2.3 per cent. higher than they were on July 1 last year. There are several commodities that are scheduled to go higher after the holiday, notable among them being structural steel, copper and brass sheeting, galvanized iron ware, common brick, Portland cement and some grades of hardwood lumber. If these changes occur the difference between the aggregate price of building materials this year and last July will be considerably greater than the gain per cent. made in the last six months.

The increase in quotation of structural steel will not be due to any unusual demand from builders any more than will the further increase in Portland cement prices reflect corresponding increase in construction. In the case of structural steel it will result from the heavy steel orders going into war material and machinery for making war supplies and in the department of Portland cement from great increases in the use of cement for road-making. There was a rumor that Rosendale or natural cement would advance from the 90 cent level ruling at the close of June.

Crushed rock is weaker. Trap in one and one half inch sizes is being quoted at eighty-five cents as against ninety and three-quarter inch sizes now brings ninety-five cents, five cents below prices ruling a month ago. There is no change in blue stone.

Gypsum is still in a demoralized market as far as prices are concerned. Eastern common lime is higher, one brand being quoted on a range of from $1.15 to $1.37½ and hydrated in wholesale markets rules at $8.50 to $9.50 a ton. Linseed oil is cheaper.

It is very unusual for building material prices to move up when construction is not decidedly above normal, but the fact that builders are having to pay more for their materials rests almost entirely upon the great number of cheaply constructed factory buildings being erected, east of the Mississippi, thus serving to inflate the building statistics, and the tendency of manufacturers to keep supply about leved with demand. The price situation is expected to become stiffer as the season advances.

The confident advertiser for work is convincing. Knowing his capability in certain lines, he "speaks right out." It's not egotism—it's self-confidence.

SUMMER HOME ON WATCHUNG MOUNTAINS

Contractors Begin Work on Champlain L. Riley's Attractive Dwelling.

On the very summit of the mountain, on the highest point hereabouts, C. L. Riley is building for himself a pretty residence. The pumping station, which will provide the water supply for the family, is completed already and the cellar has been dug. The building will be completed by fall.

John S. Dahl, of this city, is the general contractor in charge of the work, and B. F. Tallamy & Brother have the mason work. The house will be two stories and a half high, of frame construction. It will contain all modern improvements, have a stone foundation, and will cost about $15,000.

From the location a beautiful view will be obtainable. Such trees as interfere with the view will be cut down, and Mr. Riley expects to be able to see as far away as New Brunswick. His sunrise and sunset views will be superb.

ALTERATIONS TO BOROUGH SCHOOL TO BE RUSHED

There will be no delay in making the alterations and improvements to the Somerset Public School in North Plainfield if the contractors can prevent it. Just as soon as possible after the contracts were awarded the work was begun, the seats having been removed from the class-rooms immediately after school closed. With over two months of good working weather before them and with most of the work to be done indoors, it seems certain that the school building will be turned over to the Board of Education before school opens entirely renomated and altered in strict conformity with the new State school law.

Going to build? See Saturday's Press.

LOCAL BUILDING ACTIVITIES NOTED

Ten Permits for New Structures and Alterations Are Issued This Week.

OUTLAY OF $9,797.50

What the Various Wards Are Doing to Build up the City Beautiful—List of Permits Granted by Inspector Doane.

Ten permits for new buildings and alterations and repairs to old ones, aggregating an estimated outlay of $9,797.50, were filed in the office of the Plainfield building inspector this week. Among the permits were two for new dwellings, several automobile houses and a repair shop, while alterations and repair jobs completed the tally.

First Ward.

John R. Cline was granted a permit to erect a one story frame building on the rear end of the lot at 158 East Second street, which will be occupied as an automobile repair shop. The building will be 16x30 feet in dimensions and will cost $100.

A garage to cost only $30, according to the estimated cost set forth in his application for a permit, is being built by Dudley B. Welsh in the rear of his property at 141 McKinley place. The building will be of frame construction, 10x16 feet in dimensions.

At an estimated cost of $150, William Leitheusser is making alterations to his residence, 712 East Second street.

Second Ward.

William H. Armstrong has been granted a permit for a $350 frame garage which he is building in the rear of his home, 712 Carlton avenue. The garage will be one story high, 14x18 feet in dimensions.

A pretty residence is being built by Mrs. Violet J. Ransome, of 916 Madison avenue, at 955 Dixie lane, 300 feet southwest of Denmark road. The dwelling will be of frame construction, two stories high, 51 feet front by 25 feet, 6 inches deep, and will cost $5,640.

A permit was granted C. F. Fulmer for a cement and hollow tile machine building at 704 South avenue. The building will be one story high, 20x38 feet in dimensions, and will cost $500.

Third Ward.

A dwelling to cost $1,900 is being built on the south side of West Fourth street, about 200 feet southwest of Monroe avenue, by the Standard Investment and Real Estate Company, of Dunellen, which concern has entered the building field in Plainfield. The plans call for a structure 20 feet wide and 30 feet 6 inches deep, two stories and attic, of frame construction.

Mrs. F. H. Butler, of 520 Stelle avenue, has been granted a permit for the erection of a frame automobile house, 18x18 feet in dimensions, one story in height, to cost $500.

Fourth Ward.

A permit for alterations to the house at 1011 South Second street, by John Stercks, the lessee, has been granted. The work will cost $177.-50.

At 933 West Third street, Samuel Redd is building a frame barn 18x40 feet in dimensions, one and a half stories high, which will cost $450.

BUILDING NOTES

Dr. J. J. Rufe, of High Bridge, has erected a garage on his property.

John K. Nevins has bought the large garage property in Mine Brook road, Bernardsville, carrying with it a railroad siding, from the Calvin Smith estate.

R. W. Nelson has purchased the Gallagher estate at Westfield and is rebuilding the house and outbuildings, which were consumed by fire last winter.

The Methodist Episcopal parsonage at Dunellen has been undergoing repairs.

Work on the Harris-Baker-Silvers Company plant on the Blackford tract at South Plainfield is being pushed and will probably be ready for occupancy in two months or less.

Patrick Kaine is hurrying to completion the two-family house he is erecting at South Plainfield.

BORO BUILDING OPERATIONS.

Maral Gennovario is making extensive alterations to his residence, 184 Duer street.

A two-story frame dwelling is being erected by Peter Wilson, on Wilson avenue.

An addition being built to his residence, Grove street and Greenbrook road, by Henry Clemens, will be used as a confectionery store.

TWO FAMILY HOUSE ABOUT COMPLETED

Charles W. Beiter Will Erect Dwelling on Stelle Avenue Near Grant.

From plans drawn by Architect Gerge H. Fisher, Harry Taub, of 525 West Fifth street, has made extensive alterations to the property, New and Second streets. The house is an old one, but Mr. Taub has remodeled, enlarged and renovated it in every way, brought it strictly up-to-date, and arranged it for two families. Mr. Taub will occupy the first floor himself.

Charles W. Beiter, of this city, will erect a two story and attic frame colonial residence on Stelle avenue, near Grant. The building will be modern in the internal arrangements, while the exterior will be of an earlier type. The plans show an entrance in the centre of the house, opening into a reception hall which has on one side of it a spacious living room with a large porch at the side. The living room has a large fire-place of brick. The dining room is on the other side of the hall and is separated from the kitchen by a well arranged butler's pantry. The kitchen will have all modern equipment, and there is a large storage pantry.

The second floor has three bedrooms and a bath, and there is a convenient sewing-room. The linen closet in the hall is provided with an improved clothes shute so that clothes may be transferred from this floor to the laundry in the basement.

The exterior of the building will be covered with creo-dipt shingles of a dark brown color, and the trimmings will be a light cream. The plans were prepared by Architect George H. Fisher, Jr., of Plainfield, who will have charge of the erection. Robert W. Wright has the contract for the entire work and Frank McInnery will attend to the mason's work as a subcontractor.

THE GARDEN DAY BY DAY
By TARKINGTON BAKER

The Week's Work In Brief

Water as necessary but always thoroughly—never by merely spraying.
Sow string beans and corn for succession.
Cultivate the asparagus bed.
Clear all flower beds and borders, shrubberies and the vegetable garden of weeds.
Spray the elm trees with arsenate of lead—roses with Bordeaux-arsenate of lead.
Pinch off suckers forming on berry bushes.

MANY a good lawn, to say nothing of flowers and vegetables, are ruined in July by applying artificial moisture in the wrong way. Watering, in most localities, will be a necessity this month. But it might as well be omitted entirely — perhaps better omitted—if it is not done properly. Spraying lightly, though it may seem to refresh the plants, is injurious. Thoroughness is essential. When it comes to watering the lawn, water it until the soil is soaked to a depth of at least a foot. Divide the area, say, into seven equal parts; soak one part each day. This will mean a thorough soaking for each section once a week. The same rule should be applied to the vegetable garden and to the flower beds and borders and to the shrubbery and newly set trees. Water either in early morning or late afternoon, never while the sun is high and hot. Occasionally, to make sure that the watering is not being done either too late or too early, thrust your hand down in the loose soil. If the sun has been baking this and water is applied incautiously, the soaking will raise the temperature oftentimes twenty degrees—almost enough frequently to cook the roots. The rise in temperature, too, is greater the better the soil and the more thorough its cultivation.

Sow an early, or second-early variety of corn now and another ten days later—the last of the season. Two sowings of string beans should also be got in before the middle of the month to insure a succession of the crop. Cucumbers may be sown now if a sowing has not already been made. Continue cultivation, keeping the soil well stirred and the surface mulch finely pulverized. Not a weed should be allowed to gain a foothold. Weeding done early in the morning of a hot day gives best results for the sun's heat will be sure to wilt them completely and prevent their taking fresh hold—as they too frequently do—upon the soil where they happen to fall. Flower beds and borders also should be gone over carefully to eliminate every weed showing. Be thorough; dig them up by the roots. It takes time, but it pays in the long run. The perennials and shrubberies will benefit from a light application of bone dust dug in as soon as it is applied. If the soil happens to be heavy or sandy—not a light, friable loam—put humus on in the form of a heavy mulch. This is all the easier done now since humus, like bone dust, can be had by gardeners everywhere in pulverized form, convenient, safe and free from weed seed.

The asparagus beetle is very likely to put in his appearance now. Arsenate of lead will check his advance and may be applied at the rate of an ounce and a half to a gallon of water. Cultivate the asparagus bed also, bearing in mind the fact that the plants are now forming the crowns from which will spring next season's crop. Nitrate of soda, a tablespoonful to the square yard, will prove beneficial. Keep it from direct contact with the plants.

One of the most deadly enemies of the elm is the elm-leaf beetle. The second generation will be appearing shortly; its advance guard is usually in evidence about this time. A spraying with arsenate of lead, using it as strong as two ounces to the gallon, should be applied now and another, if necessary, a fortnight later. Spray the roses at the same time with Bordeaux. Give the asters an application of liquid manure and see that the dahlias do not form too many stems—three or four are sufficient. Take time by the forelock and, as work slackens, make ready a supply of potting soil in which to grow spring-flowering bulbs indoors during the winter. Rotted sod to which has been added rotted cow manure to one-third of its bulk makes the best compost. The two ingredients should be thoroughly mixed. Sharp sand added will improve it in a majority of cases. This compost, to which may be added humus for ferns and foliage plants, makes a good stock soil for all indoor gardening operations. Wash empty pots.

Elm-leaf Beetle—young larvae on left, egg mass on right and beetle and larvae attacking foliage in center.

Allow no suckers to spring up from the roots of young blackberry and raspberry bushes. Keep them cleaned off as fast as they appear. Pinch back the tips of "cap" raspberry plants when they have reached a height of two feet. Keep the plantation cleanly cultivated. Bear in mind in pinching back all the berry bushes, that an essential of the operation is to do the work when the canes have reached the desired height—not after they have grown higher. The purpose is not to cut back but to check the growth. Cutting back produces weak, spindly bushes; pinching back produces sturdy, well-balanced, self-supporting plants.

UNION COUNTY BUILDING CONTRACTS ARE FILED

The following building contracts have been filed in the office of the county registrar at Elizabeth:

Charles W. Beiter with Robert W. Wright, entire work new building, Stelle avenue, Plainfield, $4,467.

CHURCH IMPROVEMENTS

An extension is being built on the rear of St. Joseph's church, North Plainfield, which will be utilized for the storage of coal for the heating plant. A door is being cut through the rear wall to give access to the coal bins. These have been taken away out of the basement, which has been fitted up with a stage and will be used for entertainments and dances. New cement walks are being laid in the yard in the rear of the church.

WORK COMMENCED ON TWO STORY BUILDING

Work has been started on the two-story frame store and flat building which the K. & G., Inc., will erect at West Front street and Johanna place. The cellar has been excavated and the work of framing the structure will proceed rapidly. The building will have a frontage of about 40 feet when finished and will contain two stores on the first floor and two housekeeping apartments above. The estimated cost is about $5,000. This concern has just completed a building in this same neighborhood.

BUILDING NEARLY COMPLETED.

The Laing Machine and Auto Repair Company's automobile plant on Sycamore street will be ready for occupancy in a few weeks. The building, which is two stories high, of brick construction, will be used as a carriage and automobile paint shop.

IN CHANCERY OF NEW JERSEY.

Charles S. Runyon, Mrs. Charles S. Runyon, Katherine Hodgdon, Henry W. Hodgdon, William Sexson, Elizabeth Sexson, Mary Utter, Samuel Utter, Albert L. Runyon, Mrs. Albert L. Runyon, Smith Gibbons.

By virtue of an order of the Court of Chancery of New Jersey made June 11, 1915, in a cause wherein Lemuel B. Woolston and James F. Buckle, partners in trade as Woolston & Buckle, are complainants, and you and others are defendants, you are required to appear, plead, answer or demur to the bill of said complainants, on or before the twelfth day of August next, or the said bill will be taken as confessed against you. The said bill is filed to foreclose two mortgages executed July 21, 1896, by John B. Mills, Anna B. Mills, his wife, and Francis S. Runyon, one to David A. Depue, of the City of Newark, County of Essex, and State of New Jersey, the other to Eliza Stewart Depue, of the City of Newark, County of Essex and State of New Jersey, on lands in the City of Plainfield, County of Union, and State of New Jersey, and you, Charles S. Runyon, Catherine Hodgdon, Henry W. Hodgdon, William Sexson, Elizabeth Sexson, Mary Utter, Albert L. Runyon are made parties defendant because you are next of kin and heirs-at-law of Francis S. Runyon, one of the mortgagors who executed the said mortgages, and you, Mrs. Charles S. Runyon, are made a party defendant because you are the wife of said Charles S. Runyon, and you, Samuel Utter, are made a party defendant because you are the husband of the said Mary Utter, and you, Mrs. Albert L. Runyon, are made a party defendant because you are the wife of the said Albert L. Runyon, and you, Smith Gibbons, are made a party defendant because you are the husband of Hattie L. Gibbons, and failed to join in a conveyance of said property to the said Frederick J. Huff.

Corporation Notice

Notice is hereby given that an ordinance entitled: "An Ordinance to Vacate an Unopened and Unused Street on Property of John Gray, Running Through the Block Bounded by Putnam Avenue, Webster Place and Woodland Avenue, and Being the Unopened and Unused Continuation of Berckman Street," a copy of which is subjoined to this notice, has been introduced before the Common Council, read the second time, and ordered engrossed preparatory to its third reading, and that it is the intention of the Common Council to adopt such ordinance at the regular meeting of the Common Council, to be held in the Council Chamber, No. 149 North Avenue, in the City of Plainfield, N. J., at eight o'clock p. m., on Monday, the second day of August, A. D. nineteen hundred and fifteen, at which time and place prior to the adoption of said ordinance said ordinance will be considered by the Common Council, and all persons interested may be heard before the Common Council with reference to the proposed ordinance.

By order of the Common Council.
JAMES T. MacMURRAY, City Clerk.
Plainfield, N. J., June 22, 1915.

AN ORDINANCE

TO VACATE AN UNOPENED AND UNUSED STREET ON PROPERTY OF JOHN GRAY, RUNNING THROUGH THE BLOCK BOUNDED BY PUTNAM AVENUE, WEBSTER PLACE AND WOODLAND AVENUE, AND BEING THE UNOPENED AND UNUSED CONTINUATION OF BERCKMAN STREET

WHEREAS, it appears that the hereinafter described unused portion of the street, which street is particularly described in a return of the Surveyors of the Highway recorded in Book 1 of Road Returns for Union County at page 54, and which appears by the Surveyor's map to have a width of sixty-six (66) feet instead of sixty (60) feet as shown by the return, has never been opened to public use, to wit, the portion thereof hereinafter particularly described; and

WHEREAS, it appears that John Gray is the owner of all abutting lands on said portion of said street, and that he and his wife have applied to the Common Council of the city of Plainfield to vacate said portion of said street; and

WHEREAS, the said portion of said street has not been opened to public use for more than twenty years, or at all since it was laid out by the Surveyors of the Highway as aforesaid, and

WHEREAS, it appears that the opening of said portion of said street to public use would involve a large expenditure of public funds, and that the opening of said portion of said street to public use would be of no public benefit; and

WHEREAS, all of the owners of abutting lands on said portion of said street have consented in writing to such vacation by filing in the office of the city clerk in the city of Plainfield such consent duly acknowledged as in the case of an acknowledgement to a conveyance of lands; and

WHEREAS, it appears to the interest of the city that such unopened and unused portion of said street should be vacated and the Common Council judges the public good requires the same be done;

The Inhabitants of the City of Plainfield, by their Common Council, do enact as follows:

1. That the unopened and unused portion of said street hereinabove referred to and more particularly hereinafter described, which was laid out by the Surveyors of the Highway by their return dated October 20, 1865, recorded in Book 1 of Road Returns for Union County, at page 54, and which unopened and unused portion is particularly described as follows:

Beginning at a point in the centre line of Berckman Street as the same is now laid out and opened, said point being distant one hundred and eighty-nine and one-tenth (189.1) feet in a magnetic course of south forty-two degrees and thirty-seven minutes east along said centre line of Berckman Street from its intersection with the centre line of Webster Place, said beginning point also being in the division line between lands formerly belonging to Evan Jones and Stephen Vail, thence running south forty-two degrees and thirty-seven minutes east through lands of said Vail and J. H. Thomas, now John Gray, a distance of fifteen hundred and forty-six feet, more or less, to its intersection with the westerly side line of Woodland Avenue (formerly the Short Hill Road), said line is intended to cover a portion of the same route as described in Book 1 of Road Returns for Union County at page 54 and is the centre line of Berckman Street (sixty feet wide) .....

the same is hereby vacated and [illegible] of the public use and burden pursuant to the acts of the Legislature in such case made and provided.

BOY SCOUT GETS A HERO MEDAL

Harvey Kiederling First Member of Local Organization to Receive Honor.

PERFORMED BRAVE ACT

Assemblyman W. N. Runyon Presents Medal Which Was Awarded by the National Court of Honor—Local Troops Represented.

The first hero medal ever awarded by the national headquarters to a Plainfield Boy Scout for bravery displayed in the performance of his duty, was pinned upon the breast of Scout Harvey Keiderling, of Troop 11, in the rear of Scout headquarters, the First Presbyterian church, last evening, by Assemblyman William N. Runyon, president of the Plainfield Boy Scout Council.

Many of the local Boy Scouts representing every troop in the city were drawn up in line by Third Deputy Commissioner F. E. Bach for review and the recipient of the decoration took his position at the head of the column. The address was made by William D. Murray, of this city, who, besides being chairman of the local Court of Honor, is also a member of the National Editorial Board of the Boy Scouts of America. Mr. Murray represented last night the national organization making the award and told about the great organization that kept the 355,000 Boy Scouts of the country up to the highest state of efficiency and made it possible to award such a distinction to a Boy Scout who, in the moment of another's peril was ready and willing to suffer bodily harm in an attempt to save.

President Runyon addressed his remarks to Kiederling and said:

"Harvey, it takes a man and a manly heart to forget one's self in the moment of another's danger and seek to save, for the Scriptures say, and I take it that every boy here makes it part of his scout duty to familiarize himself with the Scriptures to the end that his life may be the better shaped by the Great Creator of us all; 'greater love hath no man, than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends.' You did this, Harvey, and there is not a single boy in all this great Scout organization in Plainfield, boys who know you, who is not proud of you for the manly thing you did in an emergency and did it well, and we love you mighty hard for having done it.

"The actual value of the medal we pin upon your breast is little. You could probably get only a few pennies for it were you to try to dispose of it. The letter of commendation and admonition sent to you from national Scout headquarters voices the sentiment I would express, not the intrinsic value of the decoration, but what it means to you. Harvey you have set a mighty high standard for yourself to live up to what that medal means. Don't let it spoil you, boy, but wear it with modesty and with honor to yourself and to the great organization which you have the proud distinction to represent."

Kiederling won his medal a few weeks ago when, while Robins Circus was in the city, he snatched a young girl, Miss Sadie Pangborn, from the path of a team of horses that had become unmanageable.

ONE FIRE IS REPORTED ON INDEPENDENCE DAY

Only one fire disturbed the serenity of the Plainfield fire department yesterday. It was in the Rink building, on Watchung avenue, owned by Charles H. Hand, on the rear porch of the apartment occupied by Mrs. Mary Latourette. Very little damage was done, due to the quick and efficient work of William H. Olmsted, a newsdealer, whose store is directly under Mrs. Latourette's flat, and who used a fire extinguisher to excellent purpose.

The fire started from a spark from some unknown source in a pile of debris. Being at the back of the building it got under good headway before it was discovered. Then two boxes were pulled—61 and 21—but before the firemen arrived Mr. Olmsted had got in his good work. Chief Doane sent his men to Olmsted's assistance. The fire had eaten into the weather-boarding but had done no serious damage. The loss is trifling. Chief Doane said that he expected to have a bad fire on his hands when he first learned where it was.

RECREATION PLAY WAS A SUCCESS

"Soldiers Brave and Maidens Fair" Pleases Large Audience.

Although the audience was not as large as was anticipated, "Soldiers Brave and Maidens Fair" scored a big succes in the Plainfield High School Auditorium, Saturday night. Prior to the presentation of the play the Recreation Committee held an ice cream and cake sale in the lobby of the school.

The young men and women taking part in the legitimate production reflected credit on their coach, Henry C. White, each participant portraying his or her character with perfection. The stage and costumes were especially beautiful, everything taking the spectator back to the early Colonial days. Southern hospitality, southern chivalry and pretty southern maidens all held an important part in the display.

The entire cast was as follows: "John Tallmadge," Captain Washington's bodyguard, Harry Shirley; "Captain Armstrong," a British officer, Walter Glaentzer; "Reuben Adamson," a staunch Loyalist, Henry Donnelly; "Tarpo," negro servant, Peter Walsh; "Marshall," negro servant, Raymond Wilson; "Patience Powell," Ruth's friend, Miss Anna Pierson; "Ruth Adamson," daughter of a Royalist, but herself a Colonist, Miss Edith Allen.

MINIATURE ARSENAL WAS ON EXHIBITION

Police Acquire Many Souvenirs Over the Fourth From Guilty Celebrants.

Confiscation proceedings indulged in by the local police over the Fourth transformed the city courtroom into a near-arsenal this morning, revolvers of various kinds and miniature bombs being included in the exhibit. Nine youthful celebrants, ranging in age from nine to twenty-five years, were brought before Judge DeMeza to tell how they acquired the forbidden articles and what they intended to do with them. The following answered to the magistrate's roll call: Harry Thomas, colored; James McCarthy, Arthur Shields, Earl DeNise, Gus Jetto, colored; Thomas Nibley, colored; Isaac Richards, George Wilson and Fulton Harnass. They had been arrested by Patrolmen Henderschott, Martin and Birmingham and Captain John J. Flynn.

They all were fortunate enough to draw suspended sentences after Judge DeMeza had administered individual reprimands, in which he expounded the horrors of tetanus; the good qualities of the safe and sane slogan, and the foolishness of burning up money. All of the defendants promised faithfully to adopt more modern methods of observing the 140th anniversary of the birth of American independence when the time falls due next July, and upon this condition they were allowed to go.

TOOK JEWELRY WITH HIM TO FOOL NEWARK THIEVES

Michael Pagudulet, an Italian, who told the court that he sells jewelry during his off-time as a real estate dealer, was arraigned before Judge DeMeza in the city police court, this morning, to answer to a charge of peddling without a license preferred against him by Patrolman Roy T. Martin. According to the defendant he came to this city yesterday from Newark for the purpose of exhibiting some watches to prospective customers in the Netherwood Italian colony, but he maintained that his visit was made for the purpose of getting a "line" on buyers rather than to dispose of his wares. He admitted having a suit case full of jewelry with him.

"Why do you carry these articles with you?" asked the court.

"I am afraid of burglars in Newark and always carry them with me."

"The next time you have them in Plainfield it will cost you $20," said the court. "Now you can go on a suspended sentence."

DEMOCRATS TO MEET.

An important meeting of the Plainfield Democratic Club will be held in the clubrooms at North and Park avenues tonight at 8 o'clock. It has been requested that a full attendance be present, inasmuch as final arrangements will be made for a representative delegation to attend the banquet given by Union county Democrats to former Congressman William E. Tuttle, in Elizabeth next Thursday night.

PETITIONS FILED WITH CITY COUNCIL

Majority of Property Owners Favor Widening of Somerset Street.

With the majority of the property-owners' signatures attached, the petitions favoring the widening of Somerset street between Front street and the bridge over Green brook, together with other petitions containing a large number of local business men expressing themselves favorable to the improvements, were filed this afternoon at the office of City Clerk James T. MacMurray. Attached to the petitions were photographs showing the congested traffic conditions which occur at Front and Somerset streets frequently during the day.

The documents will be presented this evening at the July meeting of the Common Council, and in some quarters, it is believed that favorable action will be taken. Hope has been expressed that definite action be taken at once, so that the improvements would not later conflict with the proposed building to be erected at the Gloekler corner, where the old frame building was recently torn down. Should the improvements be made now, the city would have to pay but the value of the ground, and not on any building which may be erected, either at this or any other future time.

The following property-owners of land between Front street and the bridge have signed the petition: John W. Cox, Louis Kadesh, Samuel Fine, Richard Walter, James P. Homan (owns building on the bridge), Lena M Hoerster, the A. M. Griffen Company, J. J. Heidloff and the First National Bank, the president, A. J. Brunson, signing for the latter institution. The three who did not sign, it is understood, favor the project under certain conditions.

Several of the members of the Common Council have already expressed themselves, in an informal way, as being favorable to the work at this time, while others are still of an open mind.

FEDERAL INSPECTORS VISIT THIRST QUENCHING DEPOTS

Revenue inspectors employed by the Federal government visited the local thirst quenching emporiums in the business section this morning, sampling the wares and examining the revenue stamps supposed to be affixed to each article.

The visits this morning were confined exclusively to saloons. The inspectors come unannounced and when they flash the gold emblem of authority on the unsuspecting bartenders, the latter individuals must produce the goods sought.

JOSEPH MONTANYE DIES AFTER LONG ILLNESS

Joseph Montanye, aged about 84 years, a resident of Plainfield for nearly forty years and at one time engaged in the lumber business, died at his home, 1027 Arlington avenue, last night, from asthma, with which he had been a sufferer for a long time. He was under treatment for the complaint at Muhlenberg Hospital several months ago but little relief was afforded.

Mr. Montayne was a native of Pennsylvania. For a number of years he was in the employ of L. A. Rheaume, when the latter conducted a lumber and coal business at Watchung avenue and East Fourth street. Later he engaged in business for himself until ill health compelled him to retire.

The deceased was associated with the religious society known as the Brethren and when able attended services regularly. He is survived by one daughter, Miss Donna Montanye, with whom he lived. Mrs. Montayne died about two years ago. The funeral will be private.

MARRIED HALF CENTURY.

Mr. and Mrs. John G. Stryker, of 434 West Sixth street, quietly observed their fiftieth wedding anniversary Friday night. They are old residents of Plainfield, Mr. Stryker having followed the grocery business for many years. He is at present employed by J. L. Bennett, the grocer. The couple have two children, Miss Lulu M. Stryker, who resides at home, and Arthur T. Stryker, who is employed by the A. M. Griffen Company.

BURNED HIS HAND.

Through the accidental discharge of a blank cartridge, Thomas Flatley, the seven-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Flatley, of 534 West Fifth street, received a severely burned palm yesterday afternoon. The little lad was attended by Dr. N. W. Currie, who reported no further complications.

FITTING ENDING TO THE FOURTH

Music and Fireworks Attract Large Crowds to Parker Field at Night.

PLEASURE FOR ALL

Playground Commissioners Complimented on Attractive Program Made Possible by Generous Contributions.

Parker Field was the scene of the closing events of yesterday's Fourth of July celebration where a program provided for the public by the Board of Playground Commissioners was presented with a band concert in the evening and a display of fireworks at night, the Independence Day observance in Plainfield brought to a fitting close.

All roads last night led to Parker Field, and before 8:30 o'clock, the hour set for the beginning of the fireworks display, there were several thousand people occupying the grandstand and the bleachers or standing or sitting about on the field. Automobiles and carriages were parked on Randolph road in a long line. A roped-off enclosure at the northern end of the field was kept free from people, and within this space the fireworks were set off.

From the moment when the first rocket mounted into the air until "Good Night" announced the end of the display there was something in the pyrotecnic line for the spectators to see. The assortment of fireworks included the usual line of rockets, Roman candles and flower pots, among the aerial pieces, while the set pieces consisted of pinwheels, emblematic standards, etc. One set piece, "Niagara Falls," aroused the most enthusiasm, and the handclapping and the honking of automobile horns testified to the enjoyment of the spectators in this form of entertainment. Throughout the first part of the exhibition the Plainfield band played patriotic airs. Prior to the beginning of the fireworks display the band gave a concert which was attended by a good sized audience.

The public has the Board of Playground Commissioners, at the head of which is Allen E. Beals, and the many generous hearted citizens who contributed to the fund for yesterday's display, and the Plainfield company of Boy Scouts. The latter marched to the field just before the exhibition opened, with banners flying, and aided the police in keeping the north end of the field clear of the spectators.

MORGAN IS IMPROVING ASSAILANT TRIES SUICIDE

New York, July 6.—It was stated at the office of J. P. Morgan & Company this morning that Mr. Morgan's condition continues to improve, and that everything is going as well as possible. Mr. Morgan held a conversation over the 'phone with some of his partners at the office of the firm this morning.

Mineola, L. I., July 6.—Frank Holt, who attempted last Saturday morning to assassinate J. P. Morgan at his home in Glen Cove, early this morning attempted to commit suicide in his cell here by pushing the lead from a pencil into his wrist, in an effort to break an artery.

JUNIORS ATTEND CHURCH.

Members of various lodges of Jr. O U. A. M. attended service in Grace Methodist Episcopal church Sunday evening and listened to a patriotic sermon delivered by the pastor, Rev. C S. Gillespie. His text was "Render unto Caesar the Things Which Are Caesar's." The Juniors occupied seats reserved for them in the body of the church. There were national flags for decorations and the music was of a patriotic nature.

VEHICLES COLLIDE.

An automobile owned and driven by David Sullivan, of 808 Park avenue, collided with a horse and wagon driven by Mike Bruno, of Somerset street, at Madison avenue and West Front street last evening, the horse drawn vehicle being badly damaged in the smash. No one was injured.

COUNCIL MEETS TONIGHT.

The July meeting of the Common Council will be held tonight, when among other matters to be considered will be that of the case of Patrolman William Mernaugh, who is under suspension for infraction of rules. It is expected that the Police Board will recommend some action.

INJURED HIS FINGER.

While engaged in repair work on the elevator of the old Dayton Mill on Somerset street, Saturday, Ray Trimmer, of Washington street, caught his finger in one of the shafts severely mangling it.

SENATOR MARTINE WILL MAKE PROLONGED VISIT

Glad to Be Back Among Plainfield Friends—Expects to Be Re-elected Next Year.

"Jim" Martine, our own Jim, otherwise known as the Honorable James E. Martine, senior United States Senator from New Jersey, is again in our midst. Not one of those fleeting visits which he has paid to Plainfield during the past couple of years, but a real, honest-to-goodness, settle-down-and-stay visit of several months. Cedarbrook, the old homestead, which has been closed for many months, will once again be thrown open for the reception of the Senator's political and personal friends, and will be restored to its usual attractive appearance, after having been more or less wrecked by the mischievous boys of the neighborhood.

When a Daily Press reporter found the Senator working around the place yesterday in his shirt sleeves, the usual cheery greeting was forthcoming, and he expressed great delight at being back in Plainfield. "Of course, I am not going to be able to stay here all the time, as I expect to get about the State considerable, but this will be my headquarters," said the Senator. When he was assured that the general impression seemed to be that he was not to be opposed in the Democratic party for renomination next year, he confidently asserted that not only would be he renominated but re-elected.

"Since returning from the trip to Hawaii, which by the way was a glorious one, I have been in Washington finishing up a lot of work. I am trying to have a son of Eugene Burke, the postmaster at Morristown, appointed a chaplain in the army, and I also took up with the architect's office in the treasury department the question of a minor change or two in the new Plainfield postoffice. The postmaster's room, as provided in the original plans, would have been quite small, and I have been able to have it enlarged a couple of feet. I also tried to get a room for the assistant postmaster, but the department informed me that it is not the custom to separate them from the clerks, as they are the working executives of that part of the service."

The Senator said that he never felt better in his life than at present, and he is preparing to start on a vigorous campaign for re-election.

LOCAL MAN'S AUTOMOBILE RUNS DOWN A PEDESTRIAN

While driving his automobile along North Broad street, in the vicinity of Mary street, Elizabeth, last night, Emil Pierson, of 1283 East Second street, this city, struck a negro who gave his name as Charles Curvey and his address as 33 Golden street, Newark. The victim appeared to be badly hurt and was removed to the Elizabeth General Hospital. At that institution today it was said that his left side was severely injured and that internal hurts had been located.

The responsibility for the accident could not be determined last night, but when Mr. Pierson appeared voluntarily at the Elizabeth police headquarters the sergeant on duty released him to appear on his own recognizance when wanted. A probe of the condition surrounding the mishap will be made when the negro has recovered sufficiently to warrant it.

FINED FOR FIGHTING.

Charged with fighting, August Podreco, 26 years old, or 13 Harmony street, and Frank Vitelli, 21 years old, of 11 Greenbrook road, were arrested Saturday afternoon at Somerset and Chatham streets, North Plainfield, by Special Officer Stewart. When arraigned before Recorder Hand this morning, Pedreco, who was the aggressor, was fined ten dollars, and Vitelli was made to pay five dollars.

HAD NO LIGHT.

That the North Plainfield police are determined to enforce the vehicle law was shown Sunday night in the arrest of Daniel Nugent, 25 years old, of 321 Stebbins place, Plainfield, who was driving a horse and wagon on Sycamore avenue at 8:40 o'clock without a light. Recorder Hand suspended sentence upon him this morning, when he appeared in court. Special Officer Cooper made the arrest.

FIRED BLANK CARTRIDGE.

Only one arrest for violating the fireworks ordinance was recorded in the North Plainfield police court, this morning. The offender was a boy, Francis Fosber, fourteen years old, of 28 Linden avenue, whom Officer Herrmann caught firing blank cartridges. Recorder Hand suspended sentence in his case.

William Wyman, of West Front street, is confined to his home with an attack of grip.

WYLIE BROWN IS NOW A BENEDICT

Takes Miss Stevenson, of Chicago, for His Bride at Home Ceremony.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Stevenson, Jr., of Chicago, announce the marriage of their sister, Miss Sarah Stevenson, of that city, to Wylie Brown, son of Mrs. Edward W. Brown, of Watchung avenue, this city. The ceremony was performed Saturday afternoon at 4 o'clock at the summer home of Mr. and Mrs. Stevenson at Winnetka, Ill., and was witnessed by the immediate relatives and a few intimate friends of the couple. Among the guests was the bridegroom's mother and sister, Mrs. Edward W. Brown and Miss Edna Brown.

Rev. Dr. McClure, of Chicago, performed the ceremony. The only attendants were the Misses Stevenson, nieces of the bride. An informal reception followed, after which the bride and bridegroom came East. They will reside in New York city.

The bride has occasionally visited in this city, but has spent most of her life in Chicago, where she has a large acquaintance. Mr. Brown is a graduate of Cornell, Class '98. He holds the responsible position of secretary of the Bridgeport Brass Company. Mr. Brown is also active in outdoor sports, being a member of the Plainfield Country Club, where he has been prominent in golf and tennis tournaments.

JOHN CARTY MARRIES MISS MAE E. BURKE

Following Quiet Wedding Couple Departed for Honeymoon in New England.

Miss Mae Elizabeth Burke, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Burke, of Lee place, was married to John J. Carty, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Carty, of Orchard place, in St. Mary's church at noon yesterday. The ceremony, which was a quiet affair attended only by the immediate relatives of the couple, was performed by the Rev. B. M. Bogan, of the church, in which both bride and bridegroom are active workers. Attending Miss Burke as bridesmaid was Miss Margaret Burke, her sister, and Thomas Carty, a brother of the groom, was best man.

Immediately after the wedding the newlyweds left on a honeymoon trip to include a tour of the New England States and upon their return they will live in this city. Mr. Carty is sales manager in the local office of the New York Telephone Company and is actively identified with Watchung Council, Knights of Columbus.

MR. MELLICK EXPLAINS WHY DISPLAY WAS POOR

Much criticism was heard last night and today of the fireworks display, but if the exhibition was not up to the expectations of the spectators it was not due to any negligence on the part of the Playground Commissioners. In an interview with the Daily Press, George P. Mellick, president of the Commission, said that the Commission was much disappointed about the display, but that the fireworks were bought from the Payne people, who have a reputation for putting out the best in the country. Somewhere between the point of shipment and the point of delivery dampness got to the explosive substances, and this took the life out of scores of the pieces.

FINE WEATHER PREDICTED FOR METHODIST EXCURSION

The annual Methodist excursion to be run to Ocean Grove and Asbury Park, Thursday, promises to be the biggest ever, the various committees in charge reporting a record sale of tickets. The churches included in the outing are the Sunday-schools of the First, Grace and Monroe Avenue Methodist churches of this city; the Methodist churches of Dunellen, and Evona and Wilson Memorial capels.

The train will leave for the shore resort in the following order: Dunellen, 8:04 a. m.; Clinton Avenue, 8:06 a. mb.; Grant Avenue, 8:09 a. m.; North Avenue, 8:12 a. m., and Netherwood, 8:15 a. m. The excursion will leave Asbury Park in two sections, one train leaving 7:10 and the other 7:15 p. m. Both sections have provisions made for baggage room, baby carriages and other parcels excursionists wish to take with them.

BRITISH TROOPS TAKE TRENCHES

Great Activity on West Flanders Front—Close Fighting in Argonne.

ANSWER TO U. S. READY

Our Government Refuses to Divulge Outline Received—Italians Resume Offensive With Some Success—Russians Claim Gains.

Paris, July 6.—The French war statement issued today says:

"The night of July 5-6 was marked by extreme activity at several points on the West Flanders front. Supported by French artillery, British troops carried some German trenches southwest of Pilken, on the east bank of Ypres Canal.

"In the Argonne there has been fighting at close quarters, grenades and petrels being used to support the attacks. French artillery broke up several attempts of the Germans to attack.

"On heights of the Meuse, Germans made two attacks against our men occupying the southern range of Sonvaux-Ravine, and against our positions east of Calonne. They were completely repulsed.

"In the region around Le Pretre forest Germans resumed the offensive, delivery two attacks which broke down and resulted in heavy losses being inflected on the enemy."

The French steamer Carthage, which was sunk near Cape Heles by a German submarine with a loss of six of her crew, carried no troops nor debarkation material, says the Journal De Paris, this morning.

Washington, July 6.—The position of Germany, to be announced officially in its expected note to the United States on the subject of submarine warfare, has been outlined to the American government. The exact nature of the communication will not be made public.

Lausanne, July 6.—The Italians have resumed the bombardment of the summit of Stelvio Pass, and are throwing hand grenades upon the Fredinandshone Hotel.

Rome, July 6.—The Italian war statement issued today says:

"The artillery fire against Malborgeth and Predil continues effectively. Our offensive on the Carnia plateau is developing successfully. In engagements yesterday 400 Austrians were captured. Our dirigibles successfully bombarded enemy camps near Doberdo and the Dornberg-Proachina railway line, damaging the Proachina junction and station.

Petrograd, July 6.—The Russian war statement issued today says:

"All German attacks between the Vieprez and western bank of the Bug, as well as on the latter river between the village of Krylow and Sokal, on Saturday and Sunday morning were repulsed. We took hundreds of prisoners. The situation on the Bug and above Sokal on the Zlotalopa and Dniester is unchanged.

"Report on Caucasus operations—On Saturday there was heavy firing along the Black Sea coast. In the region of Karaderbuc, to west of Alkbazik, our cavalry patrols attacked two squadrons of Turkish cavalry that fled in panic, pursued by our infantry."

Athens, July 6.—Gen. Liman Von Sanders, German commander of the Turkish army at the Dardanelles, has been wounded, according to a report received here today.

Rumors to the effect that the Sultan of Turkey is dead are being persistently circulated here, apparently with some basis of fact. The reports add that his death is being concealed in order to avert a panic.

Marseilles, July 6.—The steamer Annam, which arrived today from the Dardanelles, reports that she was bombarded by the Cape Helles forts, which did serious damage to the vessel and caused a fire in her cargo, which was extinguished with difficulty.

London, July 6.—With her captain and eight of the crew killed and eight others injured from shell fire as the result of a German submarine attack, the steamer Anglo-California limped into Queenstown Harbor early this morning. No details are obtainable as to the nature of the attack.

All the Happenings of the Day In Plainfield's Hustling Suburb.

THOUGHT WILLIAM CURRAN WAS DEAF AND DUMB

William Curran, of 1237 Adam street, Philadelphia, who tried to obtain money in the borough Saturday evening, under the pretense of being deaf and dumb and unable therefore to earn money to procure the necessities of life, proved to be his subsequent undoing.

Curran was successfully getting away with his game at Taylor's Hotel when an argument started. Curran succeeded in remaining silent for a couple of minutes and then, unable to withstand the strain any longer, he expressed his opinion on the subject under debate in most emphatic terms. Some one then yelled "fakir," and Curran shortly found himself pinned to the floor. Local police headquarters were immediately notified of the catch. Marshal Tarpey was shortly on the scene and soon Curran found himself behind the bars in the borough jail.

When arraigned in Judge David S. Campbell's court Sunday morning, Curran, with amazing nerve in face of his revelation of the night before, endeavored to make the court believe that he really could not hear or talk. "Curran, I know that you can hear and talk and it is useless for you to stand there and make believe that you can do neither. If I were satisfied that you were a professional 'fakir,' I would send you over the road for a long term, but I have no proof that you are and I am going to give you the benefit of the doubt and release you with the warning to get immediately out of town and stay out."

ANTI-SALOON SPEAKER.

Rev. Dr. Bushnell, secretary of the Anti-Saloon League, of Missouri, addressed a union temperance service of the Methodist Episcopal and Presbyterian churches held in the Presbyterian church Sunday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Painter, of Orange, and George H. Firstbrook, of Newark, were visitors at the home of Captain and Mrs. B. A. Cole, on Washington avenue, over the holidays.

John Rinehart, Jr., of Penfield place, is said to be contemplating taking a trip to San Francisco to attend the Panama Exposition in the fall.

ERNEST BROWN BREAKS WRIST JUMPING PORCH

Ernest Brown, the twelve-year-old son of Rev. and Mrs. E. R. Brown, broke his left wrist Saturday. The young man had just completed washing the front porch of his home with a hose and he was in the act of taking a short cut to turn off the hose by climbing over the porch railing and jumping to the ground when the accident occurred. While doing this he slipped and in trying to catch himself with his left hand his wrist doubled up under the railing and snapped. He is under the care of Dr. J. T. Longbotham. His wrist is encased in a plaster paris cast, which will probably have to be kept on for six weeks.

$15 OR 20 DAYS."

Arraigned before Judge David S. Campbell in the local police court Sunday morning, on two counts, one for being drunk and disorderly, and the other for having resisted an officer, James Jackson (colored), of 237 West Second street, Plainfield, who is employed in the brickyard of Albert Rajotte, was given a severe reprimand and sentenced to pay a fine of $15 or be sent to New Brunswick for twenty days. Jackson did not have $15 in his possession and he was taken over to New Brunswick by Marshal Isaac V. Smalley.

Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Dildine, of Prospect avenue, motored to and spent the week-end and holiday at Delaware Water Gap.

Thomas Fresbie, who has been laid up for the past two weeks with rheumatism, is reported as being no better.

AN UNCLE TO H. C. SMITH.

Dr. William H. Zabriskie, the noted specialist, of Glen Cove, L. I., who was the first physician to attend J. P. Morgan, shot twice by a fanatic Saturday morning, is an uncle to H. C. Smith, of the borough. The first operation for appendicitis in Muhlenberg Hospital at Plainfield was performed by Dr. Zabriske in the neighborhood of eighteen years ago, the noted specialist coming to Plainfield especially for the purpose on a special train.

HOLIDAY VISITORS.

Harry R. Titsworth and family, of Hopewell, spent the holidays in the borough as the guests of Mr. Titsworth's parents, Mr. and Mrs. S. R. Titsworth, of New Market road. Mr. Titsworth recently moved from the borough to Hopewell, with his family, to accept a position as manager of a new branch store of the Great Atlantic and Pacific Tea Company.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Travis Sutphen, of South avenue, are visiting Rev. and Mrs. N. J. Sproull at Newport, R. I. Mr. Sproull was formerly pastor of the local Presbyterian church

ENJOYED AUTO TRIP.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry G. Morse and son, Harold, of 253 New Market road, have just returned from an automobile trip through the Delaware Water Gap, Pocono Mountains and Tobyhana, Pa. Speaking of his trip to a reporter, Mr. Morse said: "The Pocono Mountains are most beautiful at this time of the year. The trip to Tobyhana was interesting in that one of the artillery branches of the regular army is stationed there. The camp is used for artillery practice for all of the artillery east of the Mississippi River. While visiting there we saw a polo game between the officers stationed there."

UNDERWENT OPERATION.

Postmaster Henry S. Garretson returned to the borough Saturday afternoon, after submitting to an operation for eye trouble in the New York Ear and Eye Infirmary. Mr. Garretson has cataracts growing on both eyes and his sight has been becoming so bad of late that he would pass people and not recognize them.

Watchung.

The patriotic services in the Mary E. Wilson Memorial Union church were observed with much interest on Sunday. At the morning service Rev. Mr. Ramsey preached on "The Weakness of America in the Present Crisis." Special music, which consisted of anthems by the choir, a solo by Miss Elsie F. Schmidt and violin solos by George H. Spier, was enjoyed by all. In the evening Mr. Ramsey chose for his topic, "Things Our Nation Must Keep Sacred." There was also special music at this service which consisted of selections by the girls' chorus; solo, "A Perfect Day," by Lawrence J. Vail, and violin solos by George Spier.

The funeral services of Mrs. Catharine Meyers were held Sunday afternoon at her late home and later in the Coontown church. The services were conducted by Rev. George Bowers, of Warrenville, who was assisted by Rev. Mebane Ramsey, of Watchung. Interment was made in the Coontown cemetery.

The baseball game scheduled for yesterday morning between the married and single men was called off on account of wet grounds, but such enthusiasm was created among the old-timers that it will be played next Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

Mr. and Mrs. Luke Pandick, of North avenue, entertained a house party of relatives and friends from New York yesterday. A splendid display of fireworks occupied the forepart of the evening and was followed by music and dancing.

A number of good scores were returned at the weekly shoot of the Rifle Club held on the Westfield road range on Saturday afternoon. Besides the members a party of girls, who want to become members of the club, tried their hands at shooting.

Florence O'Sullivan, a former Plainfield policeman, who was recently appointed as marshal by the Township Committee, started on his new duties yesterday, and while he did not "pinch" anybody, was much in evidence in order to do so if it became necessary. Opinions are now being passed around as to who the first one will be to be escorted to the lockup by the new copper.

Although it was impossible to secure several of the speakers, the anti-saloon mass meeting held in the Baptist church on Sunday afternoon was well attended by residents of the Plains and borough. Rev. Raymond E. Marshall, pastor of the Methodist church, and who arranged the meeting, introduced the speakers in a short address. The speakers were delegates to the Atlantic City convention, and, besides telling of what is accomplished at those annual sessions, described the work that is being done toward prohibition throughout the length and breadth of the United States.

Miss Viola Garder, of North avenue, has left for Baltimore, Md., where she will spend several weeks with relatives.

Many local people were at the Westfield Golf Club yesterday to play a round over the course as it has been changed. Four new holes are included in the course, which has been changed on account of the building of School No. 3 on a section of the old links. As it is now arranged, the trolley tracks run through the links, a section being in Fanwood township and a section in Westfield. From now on there will be keen competition to see who can annex the new records for the course. At present, and for a number of years, both the amateur and professional records

Stylish SR Reliable

"Git Thar!"

The philosophy of life, as expressed by one of our greatest humorists, Josh Billings, is contained in the two simple words "Git thar."

In other words, set yourself a goal, and ATTAIN it. Create ideals, and REALIZE them. In brief —"GIT THAR."

Our goal is to be the best shop for "Most Things Men Wear" in Plainfield —and to have you admit it.

Our ideals are realized in the personal service that has won for us—and kept some of the most exacting customers in town.

This may sound big. MAKE US PROVE IT. We are waiting for the opportunity.

Suits $10 to $30.

have been held by local residents, Councilman A. I. Nichols holding the first honor with 73 strokes, while A. J. Conway turned in a 77 score on two occasions.

There were no serious accidents reported yesterday as the result of celebrating for the first time in years. Although the usual noise prevailed, most of the local people enjoyed displays during the evening. The old cannon that has been housed in Excelsior Hall for many years, was hauled out by a number of young men in the 'Plains on Sunday at midnight and helped to usher in the holiday with a roar that brought many from their beds.

Justice of the Peace Joseph Clark, of Front street, is recovering from a light attack of paralysis.

The Misses Estelle and Florence Curry, of Westfield avenue, are spending several weeks at Watkill, Ulster county, N. Y.

Sunday-school directors of the local churches are completing arrangements for the thirty-third excursion of the "Big 8" to Asbury Park two weeks from today.

Miss Marion Storr, of the borough, is spending several weeks with her aunt, Mrs. Paul Kuhl, of Flemington.

Miss Helen Neilson, of Martine avenue, has been visiting relatives in Perth Amboy for the past week.

A meeting of the Boy Scouts will be held in the lecture room of the Baptist church tonight. After the amount obtained from the entertainment is found, camping arrangements will be made.

Y. W. C. A. ENJOYS "BACK TO THE WOODS" OUTING

Seven members of the Y. W. C. A. enjoyed a "back to the woods" week end, spending four days in the wilds of the Watchung mountains, camping in a bungalow near Riley's farm on Rock road. Hikes over the mountains just as the sun was rising, moonlight suppers, outdoor lunches, in fact, everything you would do if you were out in the open these seven did. Historical points of interest were visited and stories told. A feature of the outing was a mock wedding in which all the girls took part. Miss Elizabeth Wetherell was the blushing bride of Silas Watkins (Gertrude Mair), while Miss Beatrice Gardner performed the ceremony being the pompous Deacon Walter Simpson. The remainder of the number witnessed the wedding and saw to it that the youthful couple were given a fine send off. The honeymoon was spent on the famous rock on which Washington viewed his troops. The entire party returned to town this morning.

Those who went on the trip were the Misses Beatrice Gardner, Elizabeth Wetherell, Reba Kline, Margaret Hawkins, Marion Mair, Gertrude Mair and Ethel Blazier.

Y. M. C. A. "HOUSEKEEPING CENTRE" OPEN TODAY

The summer sessions at the "Housekeeping Centre" start today with twenty-seven young girls enrolled. Miss Beatrice Gardner, supervisor of the centre, has charge of the class and each day different recreations are offered the girls to keep them interested during the summer. The opening day will be known as recreation day and the time will be spent playing games on the rear lawn of the Y. W. C. A. association. Beside games, country walks and story hours will occupy a large portion of the schedule. Practical housekeeping suggestions and instructions in the preparation of summer lunches will be taught the young misses.

REV. F. J. HUBACH PLANS A SERIES OF MEETINGS

The series of grove meetings in connection with the Forward Movement of the Methodist churches scheduled by Rev. Frederick J. Hubach, district superintendent of the Elizabeth District of the Newark Conference, will be held in Califon and vicinity from July 21 to July 30 inclusive. Rev. Frank McDaniels, head of the Pennington Seminary, will assist Mr. Hubach in his tour. Among the towns to be visited in the immediate vicinity of Califon are Flanders, Kingwood, Stanton, Quakertown and Norton.

Mr. Hubach will speak at Cranford tonight and tomorrow night at Raritan; Thursday, New Germantown and Whitehouse; Friday, Lebanon and Bloomsbury; Sunday, Asbury, West Portal and Clinton; Monday, Hampton; Tuesday, Succasunna.

PLAN ANNUAL FESTIVAL.

Plans for the annual ice cream festival given under the auspices of the consistory of Trinity Reformed church are complete and the affair arranged for Thursday night, July 29, in the vacant lot at the corner of Church and East Front streets, promises to be a success. The Dutch Arms Band will furnish music during the evening and young women members of the church will act in the capacity of waitresses.

That funny fellow Scoop is on the classified page.

CHRISTIAN FIELD

The annual excursion of the First Baptist Sunday-school to Asbury Park will be held Thursday, July 29.

"National Ideals and How Home Missions Will Promte Them," is the subject for the prayer meeting tomorrow night in the First Baptist church. Egbert Fountain will be the leader.

The quarterly business meeting of the trustees of the First Baptist church will be held Thursday evening.

GETS ANOTHER CHANCE.

Arraigned on a complaint of disorderly conduct preferred against him by Patrolman Henderschott on June 12 last, Frank Batalli was adjudged guilty in the city court, this morning, but was given another chance because of his previous good record and upon his promise to steer clear of evil companions in the future. Batalli was one of a trio arrested by Henderschott, the other two cases having been previously disposed of. The offense grew out of a fight in the business section of West Front street.

DEALERS IN THE TOILS.

Harry Dreier, Leo Ziezel and George Wilson, local dealers in articles used for the Independence Day observance by youthful Americans, were arraigned before Judge DeMeza in the city court, this morning, to answer to charges of selling revolvers and blank cartridges to minors. Zeisel and Wilson were allowed to go with reprimands while decision in the case against Dreier was reserved by the court.

GAMES WERE A FEATURE.

The picnic given by the Polish Falcons, of this city, Sunday afternoon, was a success, from every point of view. A large number of members and their families attended the affair, which was given at the foot of the mountains near Greenbrook. Outdoor games were the principal features during the afternoon. Refreshments were served throughout the afternoon.

TO ARRANGE PROGRAM.

The social committee of the Y. M. C. A. will meet Thursday evening to map out a program of entertainment and diversion for the balance of the year. The committee consists of F. O. Dunning, chairman; E. F. Sheppard, F. M. Smith, Henry Kinney, Rae Boice, Collis Case and Cedric Ostrum.

Most of the real estate sold today in Plainfield will be sold as a direct result of classified advertising.

DISPLAY OF FIREWORKS AT PARK GOLF CLUB

Among the private displays of fireworks last night was the one at the Park Golf Club. Under the direction of Walter Whitehead, chairman of the house committee, an enjoyable evening was provided, dancing also being a feature. On Saturday, at Mr. Whitehead's suggestion, the members within a few minutes raised $100 for the display of fireworks.

The set pieces of which there were a number could be seen a considerable distance about the city and borough. This year's house committee is especially active and credit is also due H. H. Woodland, treasurer, for his work in behalf of the club.

PARK AVENUE CHURCH HOLDS OPEN-AIR SERVICE

The Park Avenue Baptist church enjoyed the novelty of an open-air service on Sunday evening, when the congregation met on the lawn facing Prospect avenue, adjoining the church. The attendance was large and the patriotic service, led by the pastor, Rev. Dr. Birney S. Hudson, a very interesting one. A solo, "Nearer My God to Thee," was beautifully rendered by Irving Manley.

The idea of an open-air service met with such favor and proved such a success that the remaining Sunday evening meetings throughout the summer will doubtless be held on the lawn, the weather permitting.

HENRY D. MAXWELL IS RE-ELECTED SECRETARY

The 133rd annual meeting of the Society of the Cincinnati of New Jersey was held at the New Essex and Sussex Hotel, Spring Lake, yesterday afternoon, and permeated with the sturdy spirit of the Revolution. While the speakers were neutral in their remarks, it was plain that the hereditary descendants of the officers of '76 and who constitute the personnel of the society of the Cincinnati realize the gravity of the international situation.

The society re-elected its old officers and adjourned to meet at the call of the chair. Henry Dusenbury Maxwell, of this city, was re-elected secretary of the society.

MANY ATTEND ALL-DAY PICNIC AT DUNELLEN

The all-day picnic given by the Watchung Homestead, of Bound Brook, and Queen City Homestead, No. 4898, of this city, Brotherhood of American Yeoman, in Wayside Park, yesterday, was very largely attended. Races, games, baseball games and other sports figured prominently in the program of events for the day. A tug-of-war between the married and single men present resulted in an overwhelming victory for the former. Contests between the feminine portion of the attendants provided some close competition. Dancing was enjoyed both afternoon and night, music being furnished by a stringed orchestra of six pieces. In the evening fireworks were a pleasing feature. Refreshments were served throughout the entire day.

GOODRICH WINS PRIZES.

Amherst, Mass., Jply 6.—Among prizes winners announced at the recent commencement exercises at Amherst College was C. L. Goodrich, of Plainfield. Freshman prizes of $25 and $15 were awarded to Mr. Goodrich, who also won the Walker prizes of $50 and $30 for mathematics in the fresman year.

TOWN WIPED OUT.

Richmond, July 6.—The town of Kilmarnock, Lancater county, was practically wiped out today by fire. Fourteen stores, the postoffice, telephone exchange and many other places are in ruins, and it is believed the loss will total $150,000.

CONFERS WITH LANSING.

Washington, July 6.—Sir Cecil Spring Rice, the British ambassador, had a brief conference today with Secretary Lansing. Neither the Ambassador nor Secretary Lansing would discuss the conference.

NOON-DAY MEETING.

The regular noon-day meeting will be held tomorrow noon at Rescue Mission Hall, from 12:30 to 1 o'clock. A strong speaker and good music is promised for the occasion, to which all men are invited.

FITZ BELIEVES THAT U. S. NEEDS FIGHTERS

So He's Going to Help Prepare America for War With $5 Lessons.

Bob Fitzsimmons, former heavyweight champion, is to strike new fields for fame and the almighty mazuma. Fitz is now planning to go to South America to organize boxing schools in Rio Janeiro and Buenos Ayres. Fitz is to be the real "professor," and he declares he sees a fortune in hand in one or two years.

According to the dope handed out by Fitz in Dunellen, South Americans "have gone crazy" over the prize fighting game since the Jess Willard-Jack Johnson "go" in Havana.

"Millionaires and all of the guys who have money are dippy," said Ruby Bob. "Every one wants to be a boxer. They are paying $30 a single lesson to get a line on self defense, and there aren't enough teachers to supply the dmand. This is a golden chance and I am going to take it."

Fitzsimmons will probably be accompanied to South America by Eddie Farrell, a Dunellen boxer. The latter has been instructed under Fitz and the old gladiator declares he is a coming middleweight. Until a few years ago Farrell lived in Hoboken.

SEPARATE BEER AND WHISKEY.

The educational campaign against the use of alcoholic liquors proposed by the Monday Afternoon Club is a most excellent idea and worthy of support by the citizens of Plainfield. Alcohol is the father in many cases of economic chaos and physical collapse. Unfortunately many a ruined home is proof of and supports this statement.

Moral suasion and education are far better than sumptuary laws and prohibitive legislation. Giving publicity to the knowledge showing the evil effects of alcohol on the human system will certainly produce a healthy and permanent public opinion, which will do more good in the long run than will any attempt to reform men and women by an act of the legislature.

By way of suggestion and to give added force to the campaign would it not be a step in advance if some plan could be devised by which the sale of malt drinks and alcoholic liquors could be entirely separated? If they could be parted it would not be long before alcohol would be absolutely doomed as a beverage. Who would be so bold as to call either gin or whisky a nectar or refer to them as a beverage of the gods? In poetry and mythology the nectar of the gods was looked upon as a sweet and pleasant drink. Is there anything sweet or pleasant about alcohol? It will explode and cause raging fires both mental and material.

Malt liquors have a low percentage of alcohol and if the sale of beer can be removed from the places where whisky is sold then those who are fond of malt drinks will not feel that their personal liberty is being interfered with and will stop supporting the corner saloon as it is known today in New Jersey.

Councilman R. A. Claybrook says that he will not seek re-election unless he is convinced that the people want him again. To lose his services at the present time would be very unfortunate, and it is certainly to be hoped that his friends will convince him that it is his duty to run again. With a man of his type seeking office, there is no excuse for opposition, and if he consents to be a candidate he should receive the nomination from both the Republican and Democratic parties. There is no place for partisanship in a community like Plainfield, and if Mr. Claybrook is a candidate it will be easy to show that the people of this city appreciate a man who has proven a faithful public servant.

In the taking of the State census thus far it has been intimated that in two of the larger cities, Paterson and Hoboken, the people may expect a decrease. Getting nearer home, unofficial figures have indicated that a decrease will be the case in North Plainfield, and this has caused apprehension on the part of many residents of the city, and an exhibition of some glee on the part of the "I told you so" boys, who take great delight in knocking the town. The Daily Press is reliably informed that the knockers are going to be disappointed, and that a substantial increase is to be shown in this city, possibly more than 4,000. Such information is gratifying, to say the least.

The surprising statement is officially made, says the Newark Star, that the Panama Canal will show an excess in earnings over expenditures for the first year of operation, ending June 30, of approximately $250,000, and that the canal would have shown a handsome return on the investment for the first year but for the European war. This showing completely silences the croakers. So great may this great national enterprise be that in time our government may get back all that was spent upon the waterway.

About the only thing really regrettable in connection with driving the Pillar of Fire sect out of town is the manner in which it was done. It is too bad that the authorities did not order them away before a lot of hoodlums turned the trick. It may have been all right for them to hold meetings in the tents which they erected, but the street meetings, with the disgraceful and loose talk which marked them, never should have been permitted.

William L. Smalley's decision to become a candidate for Mayor of North Plainfield places in the field a clean-cut young business man, who would make an excellent executive. Mr. Smalley has lived in either the city or borough all of his life. He has proven in the past that he is vitally interested in the welfare of both municipalities, and being thoroughly conversant with affairs on both sides of the brook will, if nominated and elected, make a splendid official.

There's a limit to everything, and it has been reached in very offensive billboard display, advertising a New York theatrical attraction on boards about town. When decency is so far overstepped as in this case, it seems to us that any municipality is justified in establishing a censorship over matters of the kind. No local manager would so offend decency as to stand sponser for the erection of such a sign advertising an attraction in his theatre.

THE FORUM

To Whom It May Concern:

On June 16 the Pillar of Fire began a series of meetings on Watchung avenue and all went well until someone began to resent the messages by making threats. Plainfield policemen were on the grounds every evening and heard the threats, one of them being known to have taken sides with those who made them. When asked to quiet the disturbance the officer replied, "You started this fight." On one evening when a message was displeasing to him, he said: "Can you swallow that?" The reply was, "Well, I did." When told by members of the Pillar of Fire that we intended to continue here until July 4, he said, "We will have you kicked off long before that."

From evening to evening the baser element became more disorderly, and threatened even to walk in the blood of speakers. There was always perfect order in the tent, but the patrolman refused to take matters in hand on the outside. On one occasion when appealed to he got on his wheel and rode away. A few minutes later Prof. L. S. Noblitt was knocked down and was severely injured by a blow from one of the ruffians.

The next morning a half dozen of our people appeared at police headquarters and related the facts to the police. The Chief asked for names and we told him that we were not so much concerned as to the assailant, but wanted to prosecute the policeman who took sides with the mob. He seemed anxious to get rid of those talking to him and finally dismissed us by saying that he would refer the matter to the Mayor.

The police knew that during the day statements had been made that the tent was going to be cut down. At the evening service rotten eggs and "stink" bombs were thrown and before some people could get out at the close of the service the ropes holding the tent were cut.

Different members were followed through the streets, egged and stoned. At Bound Brook another assault was committed on our people.

Washington, July 6—Admiral Caperton, at Cape Haitien, notified the Navy Department today that the situation there is greatly improved and quiet.

Why do so many mothers take Wood Brook milk? Perhaps they have noticed the difference in the doctor's bills, if they are wise economists. But a mother's first thought is the children, and it does not take her long to discover that Wood Brook milk is health insurance for the children.

WIERD SOUNDS HAIL GEE WAH AS "CHAMP"

Spirited Tournament in Plainfield's Chinatown Section Over the Week End.

Pedestrians happening along North avenue in the vicinity of Gee Wah's laundry Saturday or Sunday nights, or at any time yesterday, were attracted by wierd sounds issuing from the rear of the collar and cuff cleansing establishment. Repeated inquiries filed at the Daily Press office led a self-appointed committee to decide on a tour of investigation in Plainfield's week-end Chinatown section to ascertain what all the disturbance was being caused by.

"Youee landree noee ready blefore Flidee," was the greeting of Gee Wah as he answered a summons at the front door and recognized a "paid-up" customer in the visiting party. "Comee back late."

By a series of gesticulations the spokesman of the party finally convinced the venerable Chink that the customer had enough collars to last him the remainder of the week and when he was assured that the intruders were there for a friendly visit Gee Wah swung open the door and introduced the "Amelicans" to Chinese hospitality.

Squated on the floor with their legs bent up underneath them were four of the Queen City's best known collar and cuff magnates, Hong Tong, Harry Lee, Hop Lee and Charlee Fang; each of who gave the investigators the "once over" and mumbled about "Sun hottee." Gee Wah, after providing the visitors with soap boxes bearing Chinese labels, to be used as Morris chair comforts, resumed his position with his four fellow-countrymen in front of what seemed to be an unusually wide ironing board.

Hop Lee and Gee Wah were engaged in a home and home Qleezely ball tournament; Hong Tong was rooting for Hop Lee and Harry Lee was conducting a cheering section of his own to aid Gee Wah's cause. This much we were able to learn from Charlee Fang, who appeared to be fairly well acquainted with the "Amelican" language. While juggling with his ever-present "e's" Charlee gave a description of the Chinese pastime that reminded one strongly of what the vernacular of American sportdom term good old-fashioned craps." The visitors were informed that Gee Wah and Hop Lee were the finalists in a tourney that has been going on during the winter months and that they were playing for a stake of five pounds of rice.

It was soon concluded that the heart-rendering ejaculations heard on the avenue were meant as applause for good plays made by one side or the other. It was noted that Charlee appeared neutral and when one of the Americans asked him why he did not join in the applause he hurriedly explained that he was paying court to Gee Wah's beautiful sister in far-off China, and that Hop Lee had financed his laundry business since he came to this country to make enough money to enter into a marriage contract. He was therefore under obligations to each contestant and while the others rooted, or rather, squealed, he gave evidence of keen enthusiasm only by the expression of his face. He had a plentiful supply of expressions, however, and he amply made up for his speechlessness.

During a few minutes' respite taken by the players the visitors were persuaded to remain to the finish and had the pleasure of seeing Gee Wah, a fellow North avenueite, win the title after a grand finale featured by squeals that made the two-by-four business center ring. By his brilliant victory Gee Wah gains the respect of all local Chinadom as the champion Qleezely ball player. After receiving the coveted prize he mounted a washing machine and delivered what the visitors took to be a speech of thanksgiving. During the aftermath ceremonies numerous curious outsiders were attracted to the window of Gee Wah's washing headquarters and one of the visitors ventured to hint on the way out that the old Chinaman had suffered an injection of the American business men's resourcefulness in gathering free advertising.

HELD PICNIC.

The Slaveks of Dunellen and vicinity held a picnic in the woods on Columbia street, yesterday, for the benefiet of the widows and orphans of Austria-Hungary.

DUNELLEN HAD "SAFE AND SANE" FOURTH

Rain Causes Postponement of Athletic Meet to Saturday Afternoon.

Dunellen enjoyed a "safe and sane" celebration of the Fourth yesterday and as the result no accidents of any consequence were reported in the borough. The heavy downpour of rain during the early part of the day somewhat marred the Board of Trade's program for the day. The exercises which were scheduled to be held in Washington Park were called off and the athletic meet was postponed until Saturday afternoon.

The baseball game was played in the afternoon as arranged, the representative team of Scout Troops 1 and 2 meeting the Farmer A. C., of Plainfield, and losing to them by a score of 15 to 9. In the evening there was a display of fireworks at Maurer Oval, which was witnessed by more than 2,000 people.

There was not an arrest during the day and the police force was commended for its vigilance. Marshal H. Sigfreid Shugars was an added member of the force, appearing in uniform for the first time.

CARE OF HORSES DURING THE SUMMER

Excellent Rules Are Suggested for the Treatment of Animals.

The following excellent rules have been suggested for the care and treatment of horses during the summer months and the attention of all horse-owners is directed to them:

1. Load lightly, and drive slowly.
2. Stop in the shade if possible.
3. Water your horse as often as possible. So long as a horse is working, water in small quantities will not hurt him. But let him drink only a few swallows if he is going to stand still. Do not fail to water him at night after he has eaten his hay.
4. When he comes in after work, sponge off the harness marks and sweat, his eyes, his nose and mouth, and the dock. Wash his feet but not his legs.
5. If the theremometer is 75 degrees or higher, wipe him all over with a damp sponge. Use vinegar water if possible. Do not turn the hose on him.
6. Saturday night, give a bran mash, lukewarm; and add a tablespoonful of saltpetre.
7. Do not use a horse-hat, unless it is a canopy-top hat. The ordinary bell-shaped hat does more harm than good.
8. A sponge on top of the head, or even a cloth, is good if kept wet. If dry it is worse than nothing.
9. If the horse is overcome by heat, get him into the shade, remove harness and bridle, wash out his mouth, sponge him all over, shower his legs and give him two ounces of aromatic spirits of ammonia, or two ounces of sweet spirits of nitre, in a pint of water; or give him a pint of coffee warm. Cool his head at once, using cold water, or, if necessary, chopped ice, wrapped in cloth.
10. If the horse is off his feed, try him with two quarts of oats mixed with bran, and a little water; and add a little salt or sugar. Or give him oatmeal gruel or barley water to drink.
11. Watch your horse. If he stops sweating suddenly, or if he breathes short and quick, or if his ears droop, or if he stands with his legs braced sideways, he is in danger of a heat or sun stroke and needs attention at once.
12. If it is so hot that the horse sweats in the stable at night, tie him outside, with bedding under him. Unless he cools off during the night, he cannot well stand the next day's heat.

MISS JANE JOHNSTON DIES, AGED 74 YEARS

Miss Jane Johnston, aged 74 years, of Westfield, N. Y., died last night at the home of her nephew, Dr. F. C. Ard, on Park avenue, whom she had been visiting for some time. Miss Johnston was born in Westfield and had made her home in that place all her life. She occasionally came to this city for short visits. While on her last trip here, she had an operation performed for ear trouble and shortly after developed pneumonia. She steadily grew worse and death was due to double pneumonia.

Miss Johnston is also survided by a brother, Frank Johnston, of Westfield. Her body was taken to the latter place today, where the funeral will be held Thursday. Miss Johnston was a member of the Presbyterian church of Westfield.

PROCTOR'S THEATRE

"The Avenging Conscience," a six-part photo production in which feats never before atempted in the motion picture world appear, is the feature picture at Proctor's Theatre this afternoon and evening. It is the sort of mystery that was conceived by the weird, imaginative genius of Edgar Allen Poe, and has been transplanted to the screen by wonderfully vivid and artistic methods. Surely, the most mysterious, masterful and sensational motion-drama ever devised, showing how a sinner is pursued by the horror of his crime.

Tomorrow, at both afternoon and night shows, Mary Pickford, that charming young actress, appears in "Cinderella," that century old fairy tale that has delighted thousands in their childhood days. This new and modern photo version of the old tale is a delightful blend of comedy and pathos and provides an artistic treat for people of all ages. Children will find this picture especially interesting.

For Thursday, the most exciting and romantic farce, Edward Abeles' "The Millions," will be the feature. Travel pictures are still taking a prominent part in all of Proctor's programs, while plenty of comedy pictures are always on tap.

GOT MATTERS TWISTED.

The First Baptist team failed to put in an appearance for its scheduled game with the Tabs on Avon Oval, yesterday afternoon, the Baptist manager claiming that the weather did not warrant the playing of the game.

CITY LEAGUE MEETING.

There will be a City League meeting tonight in the Daily Press office, when several matters of importance will be discussed.

MANY MAKING BIDS FOR TENNIS CROWN

Paul Collier, Former School Champion, the Favorite in the Third Round.

Featuring the play in the Plainfield Country Club's local and borough championship tennis singles tournament, which got underway yesterday afternoon was the performance of Paul R. Collier, former interscholastic tennis league title holder, who appeared in a "come-back" role. Collier apparently has lost none of his old-time form and looks like a strong candidate for the municipality crown this year. He failed to get an opportunity to exhibit his wares until the second round, having drawn a bye in the opener. He disposed of Howes in a finished style in the second frame and likewise put Lyons out of the running in the third. He will now meet Tom Day, 3rd.

Forty-one starters entered the tourney and good progress was made during the afternoon's competition. Some strong contenders have made a bid for the title and some interesting matches ought to develop next Saturday afternoon, when title-play will be continued.

The results:

First round—Esty Foster defeated J. P. Stevens, Jr., 0-6, 6-1, 6-3; Robert Stevens defeated C. A. King, 8-6, 6-3; R. Gough defeated R. Bouer, 6-1, 6-3; Ned Stevenson defeated Rex Shoemaker by default; J. Cornwell defeated D. DeLaney, 6-2, 2-6, 6-4; R. Parvin defeated B. P. Adams, by default; A. A. Hassel defeated Nat. Stevens, 6-0, 6-0; Stanley Bellows defeated A. L. VanZandt, 6-3, 6-1; S. Gough defeated Tom Day, 6-1, 8-6.

Second round—A. D. Beers defeated Phillip Van Deventer, 6-4, 6-4; H. Brown defeated Edwin Daniels, defaulted at 9-9; J. B. Uhler defeated C. Garrigues, 6-1, 6-2; Aleck Baltzly defeated J. Depew, 6-0, 6-1; W. Williams defeated Kenneth Phillips, 6-2, 6-1; D. Anderson defeated Esty Foster, 8-6, 7-5; Robert Gough defeated R. Stevens, 6-4, 2-6, 6-3; Hassell defeated Parvin, 6-4, 6-2; S. Bellows defeated S. Gough, 4-6, 6-4, 6-3; McDowell defeated E. M. King, 6-2, 6-2; Baker defeated Strong, 6-3, 6-4; Collier defeated Howes, 6-2, 8-6; Lyons defeated Chase, by default; T. M. Day, 3rd., defeated S. Chandler, 6-2, 6-3; S. W. Merrihew defeated H. Mellick, 6-0, 8-6.

Third round—Baltzly defeated Uhler, 6-2, 6-4; Baker defeated McDowell, 6-0, 6-1; Collier defeated Lyons, 6-2, 7-5; Day defeated Merrihew, 1-6, 6-4, 7-5.

FARMERS PUT A 15 TO 9 WIN OVER ON THE SCOUTS

On Maurer Oval, Dunellen, yesterday afternoon, before a good sized crowd, a team composed of the best players of Scout Troops 1 and 2, met the Farmer A. C., of Plainfield. The new combination was sadly lacking in team play and lost to the Plainfield team by the score of 15 to 9. The Scouts started off as if they meant business and at the end of the third frame were ahead by the score of 9 to 0.

Lewis relieved Maskell in the box for the Scouts in the final inning. He held the Plainfielders hitless, but a base on balls followed by two errors resulted in two runs.

ALL STARS TOOK A FALL OUT OF ROYAL PLAYERS

In a well played game yesterday afternoon on Parker Field, the All Stars defeated the Royal Giants, the score being 5 to 2. "Senor" Maiden twirled for the losers and allowed only three hits, while Oscar Dilts, the N. P. H. S. captain-elect, was reached for seven bingles.

To the fact that the Stars played errorless ball is attributed the Royals' defeat.

GAMES CANCELLED.

The two games scheduled to be played at Somerville yesterday, between the Plainfield Juniors and the K. O. K. A. team of the Somerset county town, were cancelled owing to the inclement weather.

FAILED TO GET QUORUM.

Owing to the fact that only seven of the St. Joseph men showed up, the game scheduled to be played yesterday at Wayside Park between the borough team and the Plainfield A. A., was not played.

FRITTS WAS THIRD.

For the third time in as many years Jack Fritts, the local athlete, yesterday afternoon finished third in an A. A. U. pentathlon, getting eleven points against the victor's nine. The event, which was contested on Celtic Park's athletic field, was won by D. J. O'Shea, a clubmate of the local boy's in the Pastime A. C., and L. J. Harper, of the Irish-Americans, was the runner-up.

ALLOWED BUT TWO HITS.

The Quakers defeated the Queen City A. C., Saturday, on Hyde Oval, the score being 6 to 2. Clarkson, the winner's pitcher, allowed only two hits.

BIG CELEBRATION AT BOUND BROOK

Former Governor Fort and Insurance Commissioner La Monte Address Throng.

PRAISE FOR WILSON

Speaker Says That President's Name Will Go Down With Those of Washington and Lincoln If He Keeps Us Out of World War.

Former Governor J. Franklin Fort was the principal speaker at the twenty-seventh annual Independence Day exercises of the Washington Camp Ground Association, at Bound Brook, yesterday. It was originally planned to hold the meeting on the heights of Middlebrook, where Washington camped, but because of the weather the Palace Theatre was used, over 300 people being present.

President P. C. Bascom, of the organization, presided at the meeting, and gave an address of welcome. There was a prayer by Rev. D. C. Dorchester; the school children sang a number of patriotic hymns; Banking and Insurance Commissioner George M. LaMonte gave a historical address "Why We Are Here," and the Declaration of Independence was read. In his address Former Governor Fort said, in part:

"As we gather today, the most of the great nations of the earth are engaged in a warafare that is unparalleled in recorded time. The world stands by with bated breath at the magnitude of the strife, and wonders at its possible consequences. Civilization seems staggering at the thought of the fact that such a war can exist in the face of the advanced state of progress among what we call Christian nations. The spirit of the founder of Christianity and the teachings of One whom we call Master seems to be forgotten. Selfishness, and selfishness alone seems to be girdling a large part of the world.

"That our nation is still out of it is cause for rejoicing. That we wish to stay out of it is the sentiment of the vast majority of our people. We all rejoice that Woodrow Wilson is now President of the United States. His handling of the situation commands the admiration and confidence of us all. He loves peace. His great task is to impress upon the world that wars are a relic of the barbarous age; a thing to be avoided and abhored. While he stands for "America first," he also makes clear to the world that this nation stands fr any thing that 'all humanity most desire.' I believe in an overruling Providence; in a God who controls and moulds the destinies of men and nations. It is difficult to believe that the calm confidence of the American people, in this great crisis, is to make evident to the world that our nation is callings for peace—that it is a great moral force in the world, set apart by God, to teach the world the truth of civic righteousness and the curse of war? If our great President can steer a course that shall result in peace, his name is to live in history beside that of Washington and Lincoln.

"It is a noteworthy matter that all the world now turns to this Republic in the matter of peace. Our President, it is thought, can, when the time is ripe, initiate the movement to secure it. The mere suggestion of such a thing is a marked tribute to a Republican form of government. When the crowned heads of Europe shall take the President of this Republic—a government of the people—as their arbitrator, if they shall ever do so, then indeed has our form of government made a long stride toward universal acceptance.

Governments of the People.

"Are we rapidly nearing popular sovereignity in government? Will the people of the nations of the old world take the power to declare war into their own hands and out of the power of any individual? Is it not time? No one man, however great, should have the power of peace or war in his keeping. Our fathers placed this power in our government in 'The Congress.' Congress represents the people and that means no war that the people do not approve.

"There is unrest in government everywhere where the people do not rule. In Japan and China, in Turkey and Russia, in Germany and Austria, and in all the other countries similarly situated with them, there are movements more or less forceful for a popular form of representative government. It will come to each of them. It takes time for the process of evolution to eliminate the old and establish the new. But all modern history points to the ultimate overthrow of all government not republican in form.

The Tendency to "Isms."

"The tendency of our times is toward 'isms' of various kinds and of various dangers. You cannot cure everything by legislation. Constitutional amendment is not the solution of all political ills. There is a disposition to drift away from pure representative government and men embrace the suggestion witnout thinking whither it leads. The remedy, if we need any, for our present political ills, is not in more laws or constitutional amendments, but in better men.

"We are drifting and we shall drift farther away from the theory that party is everything and men nothing. I hold the other view,—that man is everything.

"It is not an easy thing to be a faithful public officer in our day. It was not difficult for the fathers to draft the Constitution of 1787, but it could not be done now. They were not beset by any interests. They were all equal in the scale of social and financial standing. They were free to devise what conscience and good public policy seemed to dictate. Think of a Constitutional Convention in our day with freedom from any kind of influence or interest except that which would make for good government.

"The future of this Republic was never brighter. A few misguided or corrupt men cannot kill the nation. As long as the people are right they will control the situation; and the people are right. Whenever they are awake and aroused, they do things.

"Our system is perfect. What we need is men to man it. Men who do not fear anything; who will put country above party; honor above gain; character above honor. You cannot destroy what our fathers builded unless their sons are false to their ideals. When thinking along these lines, I always wish the women had a vote. Whatever else may be doubtful in the problem of woman suffrage, this is true, that if women could vote, their influence would be at all times on the side of righteousness, temperance and morality. When women vote, they will bring to the electorate greater strength and stability.

Personal Rights.

"There is growing up in our time a misconception of both the rights and powers of government. We hear men talking about legislation as objectionable, because it seeks to curtail what they are pleased to call their personal liberty. A man has no personal liberty in a republic founded upon representative government, except such as the majority speaking through their representatives, see fit to allow him. When you are in a representative form of government and do not like the laws the majority give you, you have two remedies:

"First: Try to mould public sentiment to your thinking, and thus change the laws you object to, or,

"Second: If you do not like the laws, go elsewhere to live.

Practical Things Needed.

"The need of the hour is practical things—not too much theory. It is a problem with many whether our institutions of higher learning are not turning out men with ideas somewhat out of line with real conditions. Of late years we have had considerable false teaching on the rapid accumulation of wealth by individuals. That it has been rapidly acquired by many, there is little doubt. The last twenty years has, probably, seen greater individual fortunes obtained than have occurred in any country in recorded time. But this has also been a period like unto which man never saw before. Some of those fortunes of course, have been secured in ways we cannot approve, but that is true of everything in life. Yet, in the main, the men who have built up fortunes in our country are not subject to criticism. One thing should not be overlooked, namely: that the men who now have this vast wealth have created it. It did not come by inheritance. They were poor boys with no better chance in life than the average boys of our days.

"It is not a disgrace to be rich or to strive for riches. It is only when we get to a point where men, in striving for riches, forget everything else; lost all thought of the ideals of life.

"What we want, in the chairs of our institutions of learning, is men who are far seeing, quite human and very practical. The college or university professor can send a boy out with his eyes on the stars or upon the earth, just as he shall guide him. It is time to stop teaching young men that every man is selfish, exacting and bad, and cares only for dollars, no matter how he gets them, and hence that the thing to do is to condemn the whole class of men who have been fortunate enough to secure a competency. It is not the getting, but the wrongful getting or the abuse that should be warned against. The youth must not be taught that there are classes in this country to which he cannot by honest effort hope to attain. It is far from the truth.

"Another thing, boys must be taught the highest governmental ideals. In this I think, the teaching of today is largely free from criticism; only I would impress it still more. Get into the mind of every young man the fact that he is and is always to be, if he takes his place in society, an important part in government.

The Individual Only Counts.

"This is a government where the mass should not count for anything, but the individual for everything. The future of this republic rests there. The trouble with our people today is the lack of feeling of individual responsibility in public affairs. There is the danger, and the regret of it all is that as the population increases, the danger increases also. Teach the youth that each citizen is not only one of many, but that in a republic he is the government.

"We are having too much talk in our time of this or that class. There are no classes with us. Out citizenship prevents it.

"The great need of the hour is intelligent men with courage and integrity. Right is just as potential as it ever was. Truth is just as forceful in public life as at any time past. Intellectual men in public life are just as numerous as ever, but conditions about us seem to cause men to lack courage.

"The leader in public affairs has a great opportunity in our day. Much of the country's future is in his hands. As he leads wisely, so the citizen of the future will incline. The responsibility is a great one. The issue is the permanence of republican government."

NEVADA SUFFRAGIST TO CAMPAIGN IN NEW JERSEY

Miss Anne H. Martin, president of the Nevada Women's Civic League, a non-partisan political organization of the women voters of Nevada, is to join the New Jersey Campaign for Suffrage this month and remain in the State probably until the election in October. She will tour the State under the auspices of the New Jersey Woman Suffrage Association, and will also devote several weeks to work in the First Congressional District (Camden, Salem and Gloucester counties), where the suffrage work is being financed by the Alliance of Women Voters, of which Miss Martin is chairman and Miss Jane Addams honorary chairman.

GAS RATE EDICT ON ITS WAY TO THE U. S. SUPREME COURT

The ninety-cent gas rate decision of the Court of Errors and Appeals is on its way for review by the United States Supreme Court. Chancellor Walker, in Trenton, has allowed three writs of error dealing with the case when E. Ambler Armstrong, of the Public Service Corporation's legal department, formally applied.

At the same time, the chancellor allowed two writs to carry to the highest tribunal the case involving the conviction for technical assault of Patrick Sutton and Frank Mihm, inspectors employed by the Public Service Railway Company, who ejected two policemen from a car in Jersey City, after they had refused to pay fares.

As soon as the chancellor allowed the applications counsel for the Public Service filed the appeals in the United States District Court. In this way the questions will be brought to the attention of the Supreme Court. The highest court then adjourned for the season.

Hope at T. A. B. S.

The results of the games of Saturday and yesterday in the local City League show that some good ball playing was produced, besides making a decided alteration in the standing of the clubs. Even if Jup Pluvius did flood the grounds yesterday morning, that did not make the going in the afternoon battles any tougher. The Tabs are perched, at present, on the top rung of the ladder, having defeated Hope on Saturday, and having obtained a forfeited game from the Baptist clan, who failed to appear for the afternoon's fray. Nevertheless, the Hope boys came right back and hung one onto Saurer yesterday afternoon, and have a firm grip on second place. Both the Netherwood and Clinton Avenue teams won one game and lost one, winding up with a percentage of .500. Saurer did the same, but advanced only half-way to their nearest opponent. As usual, the Baptist team supports the rest, being still in the cellar.

HOPE LOSES TO T. A. B. BY RAGGED FIELDING

Tommy Heron's Lusty Clouting Fails to Subdue Abstainers.

The Tabs secured a firmer grip on the lead in the City League race on Saturday, by treating the Hope Chapel boys to a 7 to 3 defeat. Dick Schott and Tone Denny were the opposing slabmen and the latter had the better of the argument. The Tabs opened the melee nicely, Kyle doubling to centre and scoring on a passed ball. Jack Denny was presented with a pass and later scored on a wild heave by Johnnie Heron. The Hopes were held hitless until the last three frames. They obtained two runs in the seventh and one run in the eighth, on timely taps by Tommy Heron, scoring men who were on by virtue of errors on the part of the Tab team.

The hitting hero of the whole encounter was the Tab pitcher, Tone Denny, who got two wallops, while Grisley and Winters handled the most chances in the field without making a slip.

Geary, Kyle and Tommy Heron were the lucky lads when it came to clouting for extra bases.

The score:

IT LOOKS TO US LIKE ANOTHER FAKE BOX SCORE

Old Jup Pluvius was dethroned yesterday afternoon, allowing the Netherwood A. C. to defeat the Clinton Avenue A. C., by the close score of 5 to 4. However, it took ten innings for the "Orients" to do it. Benny Rosenson twirled for the losers and was touched for ten bingles. Clark handled the pitching job for the winners and held his opponents to five wallops.

Clark, the Netherwood slabman, is credited by the scorer with fifteen strikeouts, while Rosenson gets five.

KALSOMINE DAUBER HITS SAURER TEAM

Hope City Leaguers Grasp Second Place in Keen Fight.

One of the best games that has been played in the local City League race, was the Hope-Saurer exhibition on Soccer Field, yesterday afternoon, the former winning by the close score of 2 to 0. Gleason adorned the mound for the losers and was nicked for only five bingles, while Jimmy Montross, the Hope flinger, allowed only seven wallops. Wilson was the clouter on the Saurer side, making two hits, while Thorn made as many for the opposition.

By virtue of this victory, the Hope team has obtained a firm grasp on second place in the league race and has shown that it is still in the running.

It Pays to Secure a Tenant Who Pays.

The uncertain sort of tenant is easy to find. He is always answering the call of the window sign of "To Let." He is easy to please. Even a rather high rental does not frighten him away.

But the Stay-and-Pay tenant is not so easy to secure. He is surer of what he wants. He does not take the first house, or apartment, or store that he finds. He watches and answers "To Let" Ads.

And to secure him for your tenant is a good day's work—a good week's work.

Property that is advertised adequately in the Plainfield Daily Press is rarely rented injudiciously.

HOLIDAY CARD AT PARK GOLF CLUB

Fine Independence Day Program is Offered on Borough Course.

MANY SCORES POSTED

W. P. Taylor and R. M. Smith Tie for Trophy—Qualifying Round for Officers' Medal — Driving, Approaching and Putting Contests.

Several holiday attractions were scheduled at the Park Golf Club yesterday, and throughout the day the picturesque course was thronged with players. One of the chief attractions was the play for the Holiday Cup. There was a tie between W. P. Taylor and R. M. Smith for the trophy, each making a net score of 70. This will be played off this week. These cards were posted:

W. P. Taylor, 93, 17-70; R. M. Smith, 100, 30-70; H. G. DeMeza, 99, 28-71; R. G. Morse, 89, 15-74; Charles B. Morse, 93, 17-76; Dr. H. K. Carroll, 90, 13-77; R. G. Campbell, 100, 21-79; H. L. Moody, 99, 20-79; W. H. Nischwitz, 100, 20-80; F. I. Collins, 106, 23-83; A. A. Cannon, 106, 22-84; Clarence J. Hand, 110, 19-91; Dr. O. B. Whitford, 130, 38-92.

Another interesting event was the qualifying round for the Officers' Medal (challenge trophy), best ball, two men teams, scratch. Any team can challenge the winner, the match to be played in the order of challenge. The results:

W. H. Nischwitz and H. E. Blazier, 74; R. G. Morse and Charles B. Morse, 80; W. P. Taylor and A. A. Cannon, 82; Walter Whitehead and J. A. Wilson, 84.

These scores were posted for the President's Cup:

Harry G. DeMeza, 99, 28-71; W. P. Taylor, 81, 9-72; R. G. Morse, 89, 15-74; Charles B. Morse, 96, 17-79; A. A. Cannon, 106, 22-84; Dr. H. K. Carroll, 97, 13-84; Clarence J. Hand, 110, 19-91.

H. E. Blazier won the driving contest, his average for three drives being 213 yards. Mrs. J. Wesley Hegeman and W. P. Taylor won the approaching and putting competition with a score of 8.

The weekly competition for the President's cup at the Park Golf Club on Saturday, as usual, brought out a big field and the scores were generally low. Walter Whitehead scored the first three points with a net score of 70, while A. A. Cannon finished second with a 71, and Royle T. Phillips and H. L. Moody were tied for the one remaining point. These cards were returned:

Walter Whitehead, 93, 13-70; A. A. Cannon, 92, 21-71; Royle T. Phillips, 87, 15-72; H. L. Moody, 92, 20-72; Charles B. Morse, 91, 17-74; R. G. Morse, 90, 15-75; R. V. Carpenter, 96, 18-78; W. P. Taylor, 88, 9-79; R. M. Smith, 109, 30-79; J. A. Wilson, 97, 16-81; C. J. Hand, 101, 9-82; Dr. H. K. Carroll, 95, 13-82; F. I. Collins, 107, 23-84.

GLENNEY WILL PLAY REINHART

Brother of Former Champion to Strive for P. C. C. Championship.

COMPETITION IS KEEN

E. B. Shoemaker Wins 36 Holes Handicap—Play for Golf Committee Cup—Results of Saturday's and Independence Day Events.

Greatly to the surprise of his many friends, Will T. Glenney, who has held the golf championship of the Plainfield Country Club for four years, was defeated in the first round match play on Saturday by Frank O. Reinhart, who won by the close score of 1 up in 19 holes. As the result of the second round play yesterday morning, Mr. Glenney's brother, Lester Glenney, and Frank O. Reinhart are paired for the finals on Saturday, which should make a match of unusual interest, as both players are at the top of their game. Undoubtedly Mr. Glenney will make a determined effort to retrieve the honors lost by his brother, while Mr. Reinhart will play his best to win. Mr. Glenney had an exceedingly difficult match yesterday and he was obliged to go 20 holes before he defeated his opponent.

The results:

First sixteen, second round—F. O. Reinhart beat H. D. Hibbard, 1 and 2; D. O. Rogers beat Arthur Murphy, 3 and 2; S. D. Lounsbery beat O. H. Fleming, 4 and 2; W. Lester Glenney beat R. S. Rowland, 4 and 2. Semi-final—F. O. Reinhart beat D. O. Rogers, 5 and 4; W. Lester Glenney beat S. D. Lounsbery, 1 up (20 holes).

Second sixteen, second round—S. H. Patterson beat G. M. Holstein, 1 up; J. Whitney Baker beat H. R. Stockton, 5 and 3; T. S. Wheeler beat H. G. Lapsley, 2 and 1; H. L. Conrad beat W. B. Gresham, 2 and 1. Semi-final—J. Whitney Baker beat S. H. Patterson, 5 and 4; H. L. Conrad beat T. S. Wheeler, 2 up.

Third sixteen, second round—B. C. Kenyon beat E. A. Lyon, 3 and 2; L. B. Alling beat C. W. King, 3 and 1; Kenneth J. Browne beat W. B. Gresham, 5 and 4; F. S. Barr beat H. G. Phillips, 2 and 1. Semi-final—B. C. Kenyon beat L. B. Alling, 4 and 2; F. S. Barr beat Kenneth J. Browne, 6 and 5.

Defeated eight—W. M. Alling beat C. E. Lipscomb, 1 up; L. G. Carman beat H. H. Craig, 1 up; J. R. Shoemaker beat J. C. Martin, 8 and 6; W. A. Engemen beat A. M. Tweedy, 3 and 1.

There was also a 36 holes match play handicap, best selected 18 holes. These cards were returned:

E. B. Shoemaker, 76, 16-60; J. R. Shoemaker, 73, 11-62; C. W. King, 92, 27-65; H. E. Moore, 89, 23-66; S. D. Lounsbery, 76, 9-67; O. H. Fleming, 81, 14-67; C. E. Lipscomb, 88, 21-67; E. T. Willson, 82, 15-67; W. Lester Glenney, 74, 5-69; J. Whitney Baker, 77, 8-69; H. G. Phillips, 93, 24-69; B. C. Kenyon, 86, 16-70; A. W. Kleinecke, 96, 24-72; D. H. Rowland, 92, 19-73; B. Putnam, 88, 16-72; J. P. Stevens, 100, 25-75; Frank O. Reinhart, 81, 6-75; F. C. Osborne, 102, 25-77; H. J. Cochran, 104, 26-78; F. W. Wallace, 112, 27-85.

These scores were posted for the Golf Committee cup:

J. R. Shoemaker, 78, 11-67; C. E. Lipscomb, 91, 12-70; J. Whitney Baker, 78, 8-70; W. Lester Glenney, 78, 5-73; S. D. Lounsbery, 83, 9-74; J. P. Stevens, 100, 25-75; B. C. Kenyon, 92, 16-76; D. H. Rowland, 100, 19-81; L. G. Carman, 91, 10-81; W. A. Engeman, 93, 11-82; O. H. Fleming, 96, 14-82; F. W. Wallace, 112, 27-85.

Perhaps, the greatest surprise was the defeat of Will T. Glenney in the first round for the championship play by Frank O. Reinhart, 1 up in 19 holes. The match was hard fought from the very first. Glenney has held the championship for four years and he appeared to be right on to his game as was shown by the way he met Reinhart. The former champion displayed his old-time form and captured the honors.

The results of Saturday's play follows:

First sixteen—F. O. Reinhart beat Will T. Glenney, 1 up (19 holes); H. D. Hibbard beat W. M. Alling, 3 and 2; D. O. Rogers beat M. J. Dumont, 6 and 4; Arthur Murphy beat C. E. Lipscomb, 4 and 3; S. D. Lounsbery beat L. G. Carman, 4 and 3; O. H. Fleming beat H. E. Butler, 2 and 1; W. Lester Glenney beat Charles A. Reed, 7 and 5; R. S. Rowland beat H. H. Craig, 6 and 5.

Second sixteen—G. M. Holstein beat G. A. Bomann, 8 and 6; S. H. Patterson beat J. C. Martin, 2 up; H. R. Stockton beat S. T. Jerrin, 3 and 2; J. Whitney Baker beat J. R. Shoemaker, 3 and 2; H. G. Lapsley beat J. E. Erickson, 3 and 2; T. S. Wheeler beat A. M. Tweedy, 4 and 3; H. L. Conrad beat W. A. Engeman, 1 up; W. B. Gresham beat H. S. Brown, 1 up.

Third sixteen—E. A. Lyon beat J. R. Evans, 2 and 1; Burnett C. Kenyon beat Charles P. Lyman, 4 and 2; C. W. King beat F. C. Osborne, 3 and 2; L. B. Alling beat Harry Williams, 7 and 5; Keneth J. Browne beat A. W. Kleinecke, 1 up; W. G. Cooke beat J. P. Murray, 2 up; H. G. Phillips beat W. F. Merrill, 5 and 3; F. S. Barr beat A. W. Ransome, 6 and 5.

There was also a large field out for the Golf Committee cup. These cards were returned.

C. E. Lipscomb, 91, 21-70; J. Whitney Baker, 78, 8-70; Arthur Murphy, 81, 9-72; J. R. Shoemaker, 84, 11-73; H. D. Hibbard, 89, 14-75; W. B. Gresham, 96, 22-76; J. P. Stevens, 101, 25-76; Burnett C. Kenyon, 92, 16-76; W. A. Engeman, 92, 11-81; B. Putnam, 104, 16-93. C. E. Lipscomb also won the sweepstakes event with a net score of 70.

BAPTISTS ARE STILL LOOKING FOR PREY

Clinton Avenues This Time Are Elected to Beat the Church Boys.

On Saturday the "winless" First Baptists were snowed under again by the score of 8 to 5, the Clinton Avenue ballists being the victors. The game was an interesting one, although the Clinton Avenue aggregation garnered three runs in the opening frame and two more in the fourth, while the Baptists remained inactive until the fifth session, when they rushed one tally over the pan. They repeated this in the sixth and things began to look rosy for them, inasmuch as the West Enders seemed unable to butch hits and register a few more counters. However, the argument was settled for good and all in the ninth frame, when Brown's men obtained three runs. In this inning the Baptists nabbed three tallies, but these came too late to do any damage.

"Box" Apgar was out of the game, having been confined to his bed by illness during the past week. Gunzelman borrowed Fritz Maisel's shoes and thereby stole three bases on Stine, the Springfield boy. "Hub" was hurt later in the game, but did not retire. Compton, the Baptist man, was the "Ty Cobb" of the day, getting three hits, two of which were doubles.

LOCAL FAVORITES PERFORM.

In a hard fought Tri-County League contest, the Washington nine shut out Hackettstown, yesterday afternoon, the score being 1 to 0. Several former Plainfield players performed in the game, Jimmy Clinton and Ernie Linderman, both well-known locally, being the opposing pitchers. Clinton had the better end of the pitching argument, but was defeated. Joe Harter, Wally Cosgrove, Swanson and Lennon, all of whom have performed here, played on the losing combination, while "Red" Grimes played right field for the victors.

Old Jup Pluvius to the fore once again! He certainly put a crimp in the morning portion of our holiday plans.

Britt Martin is the Bill Stallings of the City League. According to reports the veteran baseballer is having his work cut out for him in piloting the destinies of the Saurer crew. No manager on the circuit has run into as much hard luck as the factoryite and that is the main cause of the low position of his combination in the standings.

When it comes to rounding up a team of semi-pros Britt has the material right under his thumbs but these "simon-pures" are mighty hard for him to handle and he is having the time of his life keeping an aggregation together.

They tell us Umpire Coriell had an off-day Saturday. Oh, well, even umpires get these things once in a while.

Whaddayathink of that Hope-T. A. B. S. encounter as a reviver of the old-time City League zest? Not that we want to toot our own horn, but if you'll take a glimpse back into the gloomy past you'll recollect that we told you many times that the only way to bring back baseball enthusiasm was to get a league of this variety underway. It's got the Sunday school aggregation beaten forty different ways.

They tell us Bob Fitzsimmons is going to start a boxing class for those who wish to learn the art of self-defense at five shekels per lesson. We know some people who would rather be able to turn out a hundred yards in ten seconds than stick around to battle in the fistic way. Why not tell us how to get away from danger's zone, at half the price? There are too many white hopes around already.

Netherwood has announced that it will file a protest with the league management against the Saurer team for Saturday's game. Thereby giving us further evidence of the fact that the local organization is a real league. Who is going to be the Bennie Kauff?

Every indication bears out the fact that the A. A. U. officials have neglected to pick Ralph Runyon for the Eastern team that will go to the Panama-Pacific Exposition. All we have to say is that the athletic world's "400" has deprived itself of a real point-getter by refusing to take along the Plainfielder.

Cheer up, Ralph! When you've served your apprenticeship in "rep" getting it won't matter whether you can pole-vault or not when they're handing out plums of this kind. In athletics, as well as in politics, the most capable individual is oftentimes forgotten in the shuffle.

Johnny Heron certainly played the infant's stunt in that Hope-T. A.

B. S. encounter Saturday when he "laid down" and practically tossed the game away for the Chapelites. You'll never be a real baseball artist, Johnny, until you get over those kid days.

About the noisiest thing we heard over the Fourth was the grumbling of the baseball magnates whose morning programs had been nipped in the bud. We take it that the local coppers didn't have much opportunity to enforce those safe and sane regulations with this opposition.

By the time September rolls around the City Leaguers will have the choicest collection of postponed games ever mustered together by one organization. We see the championship being decided indoors some time around the first of January by the hot stove leaguers.

Another article that doesn't seem to be a rarity in the local organization is the error. Each club has a healthy string of miscues piled up and the season is just getting underway.

After Saturday's game Umpire Corriel plead with President Dobbins to be allowed to exhibit his arbitration ability on some other lot besides the Abstainers'. We take it that Corriel wants a little more excitement. He'll probably get all that's coming to him before the season winds up.

SCHOOLEY LOSES STATE TITLE, BUT HAS A BIG DAY IN RACES

William Schooley, State hurry-scurry canoe racing champion, formerly of this city, was defeated at Newark, yesterday afternoon, by a fellow club member, Harold Rohlfs, of the Tuscarora Canoe Club.

However, Schooley and his partner finished first in the one-quarter mile doubles; his team finished first in the one-quarter mile fours, and he came in second in the hurry-scurry race.

ALAS! WE'RE SURE IT'S A REAL LEAGUE

Netherwood's Protest of Saurer's First Win Lends Credence to Belief.

Highland Park Saturday was the scene of the Saurer team's first victory, the Netherwoods being defeated by the overwhelming score of 12 to 6. Gleason decorated the mound for the Saurer combination and was touched for only seven hits, while Frederickson, twirling for the East Enders, was reached for 16 taps. Wilson was the heavy sticker for Saurers and Moran held that honor for the opposing side.

There was some question about three Saurer players, Netherwood declaring them ineligible. This matter will be settled at the league meeting tonight.

HIGHLAND C. C. AHEAD BY ONE RUN AT THE FINISH

On Sunday the Highland A. C. defeated the White Sox by the close score of 6 to 5, the issue being in doubt up until the last minute. Stites twirled for the losing combination and was found for ten safeties, while Hoffmeister and Stebor, the Highland slebmen, allowed only six hits. Stebor was the heavy sticker of the afternoon, getting three clouts of the safe variety. Kirch and Luthman each garnered a triple, both coming at opportune times. The score:

An Imaginary Baseball Game on an Imaginary Lot With Imaginary Players.

In yesterday's issue of the Newark Morning Star the following baseball yarn appears. Therein Plainfield is represented with a genuine Sunday baseball team, something that we've already wanted but have never been able to get. Aside from this, however, the only thing we are handed in the article is credit for having some real ball-players, some of whom have long since deserted our shores. No, gentle fan, we had no ball game of this kind here Sunday; we have no stars of the calibre mentioned; and we would like to meet the individual whose imagination is vivid enough to allow him to think thusly of the Queen City:

The Newark Whirlwinds handed a beating to the Plainfield A. A. at Plainfield, yesterday afternoon, the score being 7 to 1. Holmes, a former Columbia University twirler, allowed the homesters four hits and fanned thirteen.

INVESTIGATE CIRCULATION OF BAD $5 BILLS AT SHORE

Asbury Park, July 6.—Federal agents are at this place investigating the circulation of counterfeit $5 Indian-head bills. They are particularly anxious to find a woman, who, it is believed, judging from information furnished by banks, knows something about the spurious money.

On the bad bills, it is said, the feathers of the Indian are of a lighter hue than on the good money. Engraving on the counterfeits, it is also said, does not come as near the edge of the paper as does the engraving on the good bills.

OVER 800 DELEGATES ATTEND CONFERENCE

More Than Thirty Institutions Represented at the Northfield Gathering.

At the great convention of advertising men recently held in Chicago, attended by over 4,000 delegates, the president of the U. S. Chamber of Commerce uttered an important truth in saying, "The power by which millions of minds may be turned to the consideration of the same thing at the same time is a wonderfully useful influence." This is one principle which underlies the summer conferences at Northfield, and D. L. Moody showed his wonderful sagacity in bringing students together for a week or ten days, and leading them to focus their thougats upon themes of vital and world-wide interest.

This year over 800 delegates came for the Young Men's Conference from more than 30 leading institutions, including the University of Pennsylvaia, Harvard, Yale, Columbia, Amherst, Dartmouth, Massachusetts Institute of Technology and eight theological seminaries. In spite of the war the contingent from Canada was as large as usual, and there were 10 young cadets from West Point, besides delegates from China, Japan, India and Latin America. About 100 tents were provided for their accommodations and the rest were housed in the dormitories of Northfield Seminary.

Large place was given this year to the preparatory schools, nearly all the leading ones in the East being represented by about 200 delegates, and a new feature was a daily meeting of 40 or more masters from these schools. Principals Alfred E. Stearns, of Andover; H. B. Buehler, of Hotchkiss; John Dallas, of Taft; Malcolm Peabody, of Groton, and George C. St. John, of Choate, are the types of men who are training our boys for lives of efficiency in all that is highest and best. In a recent commencement address, Prof. Bliss Perry deplored in boys and girls today what he called "inefficiency in essentials." At the Northfield Conferences young people are taught how to gain power for the essentials.

The afternoons are devoted to baseball and other games into which the Orientals enter with as much zest as anybody.

John R. Mott is the presiding genius and the magnet which draws teachers and speakers who know how to hold the attention of boys and young men. One favorite this year was Raymond Robins, whose thrilling experiences as miner, criminal lawyer, Alaskan explorer and evangelist held his audience spellbound for an hour and a half.

In Closing Conference, July 30 to August 15, is anticipated with more than ordinary interest and able speakers have been secured from England as well as the United States.

ANTI-SALOON SERVICE SUNDAY WELL ATTENDED

The first of the union church services for the summer was held Sunday night in the First Baptist church, and was an anti-saloon mass meeting. Sunday was National Prohibition day in New Jersey. Fred O. Blue delivered the principal address and was followed by the Rev. W. S. Foreman, of St. Louis, who made the appeal for contributions. The service was well attended.

The national convention of the Anti-Saloon League of America opened at Atlantic City today to continue through Friday. The pastor, Rev. Dr. Philip Burroughs Strong, will attend as the representative of the First Baptist church.

PENROD

Copyright, 1914, by Doubleday, Page & Company

CHAPTER XXI.

Twelve.

THIS busy globe which spawns us is as incapable of flattery and as intent upon its own affair, whatever that is, as a gyroscope. It keeps steadily whirling along its lawful track, and, thus far seeming to hold a right of way, spins doggedly on, with no perceptible diminution of speed to mark the most gigantic human events. It did not pause to pant and recuperate even when what seemed to Penrod its principal purpose was accomplished, and an enormous shadow, vanishing westward over its surface, marked the dawn of his twelfth birthday.

To be twelve is an attainment worth the struggle. A boy, just twelve, is like a Frenchman just elected to the academy.

Distinction and honor wait upon him. Younger boys show deference to a person of twelve. His experience is guaranteed, his judgment, therefore, mellow; consequently his influence is profound. Eleven is not quite satisfactory. It is only an approach. Eleven has the disadvantage of six, of nineteen, of forty-four and of sixty-nine. But, like twelve, seven is an honorable age, and the ambition to attain it is laudable. People look forward to being seven. Similarly, twenty is worthy, and so, arbitrarily, is twenty-one; forty-five has great solidity; seventy is most commendable and each year thereafter an increasing honor. Thirteen is embarrassed by the beginnings of a new colthood. The child becomes a youth. But twelve is the very top of boyhood.

Dressing that morning, Penrod felt that the world was changed from the world of yesterday. For one thing, he seemed to own more of it. This day was his day. And it was a day worth owning. The midsummer sunshine, pouring gold through his window, came from a cool sky, and a breeze moved pleasantly in his hair as he leaned from the sill to watch the tribe of chattering blackbirds take wing, following their leader from the trees in the yard to the day's work in the open country. The blackbirds were his, as the sunshine and the breeze were his, for they all belonged to the day which was his birthday and therefore most surely his. Pride suffused him. He was twelve!

His father and his mother and Margaret seemed to understand the difference between today and yesterday. They were at the table when he descended, and they gave him a greeting which of itself marked the milestone. Habitually his entrance into a room where his elders sat brought a cloud of apprehension. They were prone to look up in pathetic expectancy, as if their thought was, "What new awfulness is he going to start now?" But this morning they laughed. His mother rose and kissed him twelve times. So did Margaret. And his father shouted: "Well, well! How's the man?"

Then his mother gave him a Bible and "The Vicar of Wakefield." Margaret gave him a pair of silver mounted hairbrushes, and his father gave him a "Pocket Atlas" and a small compass.

"And now, Penrod," said his mother after breakfast, "I'm going to take you out in the country to pay your birthday respects to Aunt Sarah Crim."

Aunt Sarah Crim, Penrod's great-aunt, was his oldest living relative. She was ninety, and when Mrs. Schofield and Penrod alighted from a carriage at her gate they found her digging with a spade in the garden.

"I'm glad you brought him," she said, desisting from labor. "Jinny's baking a cake I'm going to send for his birthday party. Bring him in the house. I've got something for him."

She led the way to her "sitting room," which had a pleasant smell, unlike any other smell, and opening the drawer of a shining old whatnot took therefrom a boy's "slingshot," made of a forked stick, two strips of rubber and a bit of leather.

"This isn't for you," she said, placing it in Penrod's eager hand. "No. It would break all to pieces the first time you tried to shoot it because it is thirty-five years old. I want to send it back to your father. I think it's time. You give it to him from me and tell him I say I believe I can trust him with it now. I took it away from him thirty-five years ago, one day after he'd killed my best hen with it accidentally and broken a glass pitcher on the back porch with it—accidentally. He doesn't look like a person who's ever done things of that sort, and I suppose he's forgotten it so well that he believes he never did, but if you give it to him from me I think he'll remember. You look like him, Penrod. He was anything but a handsome boy."

After this final bit of reminiscence—probably designed to be repeated to Mr. Schofield—she disappeared in the direction of the kitchen and returned with a pitcher of lemonade and a blue china dish sweetly freighted with flat ginger cookies of a composition that was her own secret. Then, having set this collation before her guests, she presented Penrod with a superb, intricate and very modern machine of destructive capacities almost limitless. She called it a pocketknife.

"I suppose you'll do something horrible with it," she said composedly. "I hear you do that with everything, anyhow, so you might as well do it with this and have more fun out of it. They tell me you're the worst boy in town."

"Penrod, aren't you the worst boy in town?"

"Oh, Aunt Sarah!" Mrs. Schofield lifted a protesting hand.

"Nonsense!" said Mrs. Crim.

"But on his birthday!"

"That's the time to say it. Penrod, aren't you the worst boy in town?"

Penrod, gazing fondly upon his knife and eating cookies rapidly, answered as a matter of course and absently. "Yes'm."

"Certainly!" said Mrs. Crim. "Once you accept a thing about yourself as established and settled it's all right. Nobody minds. Boys are just like people really."

"No, no!" Mrs. Schofield cried involuntarily.

"Yes, they are," returned Aunt Sarah. "Only they're not quite so awful, because they haven't learned to cover themselves all over with little pretences. When Penrod grows up he'll be just the same as he is now, except that whenever he does what he wants to do he'll tell himself and other people a little story about it to make his reason for doing it seem nice and pretty and noble."

"No, I won't!" said Penrod suddenly.

"There's one cookie left," observed Aunt Sarah. "Are you going to eat it?"

"Well," said her great-nephew thoughtfully, "I guess I better."

"Why?" asked the old lady. "Why do you guess you'd 'better?'"

"Well," said Penrod, with a full mouth, "it might get all dried up if nobody took it and get thrown out and wasted."

"You're beginning finely," Mrs. Crim remarked. "A year ago you'd have taken the cookie without the same sense of thrift."

"Ma'am?"

"Nothing. I see that you're twelve years old, that's all. There are more cookies, Penrod." She went away, returning with a fresh supply and the observation: "Of course you'll be sick before the day's over. You might as well get a good start."

Mrs. Schofield looked thoughtful. "Aunt Sarah," she ventured, "don't you really think we improve as we get older?"

"Meaning," said the old lady, "that Penrod hasn't much chance to escape the penitentiary if he doesn't? Well, we do learn to restrain ourselves in some things, and there are people who really want some one else to take the last cookie, though they aren't very common. But it's all right. The world seems to be getting on." She gazed whimsically upon her great-nephew and added, "Of course when you watch a boy and think about him it doesn't seem to be getting on very fast."

Penrod moved uneasily in his chair. He was conscious that he was her topic, but unable to make out whether or not her observations were complimentary. He inclined to think they were not. Mrs. Crim settled the question for him.

"I suppose Penrod is regarded as the neighborhood curse?"

"Oh, no!" cried Mrs. Schofield. "He"—

"I daresay the neighbors are right," continued the old lady placidly. "He's had to repeat the history of the race and go through all the stages from the primordial to barbarism. You don't expect boys to be civilized, do you?"

"Well, I"—

"You might as well expect eggs to crow. No; you've got to take boys as they are and learn to know them as they are."

"Naturally, Aunt Sarah," said Mrs. Schofield, "I know Penrod."

Aunt Sarah laughed heartily. "Do you think his father knows him too?"

"Of course men are different," Mrs. Schofield returned apologetically. "But a mother knows"—

"Penrod," said Aunt Sarah solemnly, "does your father understand you?"

"Ma'am?"

"About as much as he'd understand Sitting Bull!" she laughed. "And I'll tell you what your mother thinks you are, Penrod. Her real belief is that you're a novice in a convent."

"Ma'am?"

"Aunt Sarah!"

"I know she thinks that, because whenever you don't behave like a novice she's disappointed in you. And your father really believes that you're a decorous, well trained young business man, and whenever you don't live up to that standard you get on his nerves, and he thinks you need a walloping. I'm sure a day very seldom passes without their both saying they don't know what on earth to do with you. Does whipping do you any good, Penrod?"

"Ma'am?"

"Go on and finish the lemonade. There's about a glassful left. Oh, take it, take it, and don't say why! Of course you're a little pig."

Penrod laughed gratefully, his eyes fixed upon her over the rim of his upilted glass.

"Fill yourself up comfortably," said the old lady. "You're twelve years old, and you ought to be happy—if you aren't anything else. It's taken over 1,000 years of Christianity and some hundreds of thousands of years of other things to produce you, and there you sit!"

"Ma'am?"

"It'll be your turn to struggle and muss things up for the betterment of posterity soon enough," said Aunt Sarah Crim. "Drink your lemonade!"

"Aunt Sarah's a funny old lady," Penrod observed on the way back to the town. "What's she want me to give papa this old sling for? Last thing she said was to be sure not to forget to give it to him. He don't want it, and she said herself it ain't any good. She's older than you or papa, isn't she?"

"About fifty years older," answered Mrs. Schofield, turning upon him a stare of perplexity. "Don't cut into the leather with your new knife, dear. The liveryman might ask us to pay if— No, I wouldn't scrape the paint off either—nor whittle your shoe with it. Couldn't you put it up until we get home?"

"We goin' straight home?"

"No. We're going to stop at Mrs. Gelbraith's and ask a strange little girl to come to your party this afternoon."

"Who?"

"Her name is Fanchon. She's Mrs. Gelbraith's little niece."

"What makes her so queer?"

"I didn't say she's queer."

"You said"—

"No; I mean that she is a stranger. She lives in New York and has come to visit here."

"What's she live in New York for?"

"Because her parents live there. You must be very nice to her, Penrod. She has been very carefully brought up. Besides, she doesn't know the children here, and you must help to keep her from feeling lonely at your party."

"Yes'm."

When they reached Mrs. Gelbraith's Penrod sat patiently humped upon a gilt chair during the lengthy exchange of greetings between his mother and Mrs. Gelbraith. That is one of the things a boy must learn to bear. When his mother meets a compeer there is always a long and dreary wait for him, while the two appear to be using strange symbols of speech, talking for the greater part, it seems to him, simultaneously, and employing a wholly incomprehensible system of emphasis at other times not in vogue. Penrod twisted his legs, his cap and his nose.

"Here she is!" Mrs. Gelbraith cried unexpectedly, and a dark haired, demure person entered the room wearing a look of gracious social expectancy. In years she was eleven, in manner about sixty-five, and evidently had lived much at court. She performed a courtesy in acknowledgment of Mrs. Schofield's greeting and bestowed her hand upon Penrod, who had entertained no hope of such an honor, showed his surprise that it should come to him and was plainly unable to decide what to do about it.

"Fanchon, dear," said Mrs. Gelbraith, "take Penrod out in the yard for awhile and play."

"Let go the little girl's hand, Penrod," Mrs. Schofield laughed as the children turned toward the door.

THE W. C. T. U.

The Masonic fraternity throughout the country will do well to take notice that the violation of State laws by any of its members is a Masonic crime. A letter calling attention to this fact has been sent to Masonic bodies of Chicago by the chairman of the crime prevention committee of the Fraternal Educational Association. This letter points out that the managers of some of the hotels which open their bars on Sunday are thirty-second degree Masons and belong to Oriental Consistory, also that some of the Masonic lodges are deriving profit from the lawlessness which prevails in the city, and suggests that "the time is ripe to apply the canning process to commercialized fraternity."

Ohio Knights of Pythias, who will not receive into membership any person connected with the liquor business, have ordered that no liquor advertisements be printed in any publication, program or other document circulated by the order.

No boose was served at the banquet provided by the State of Pennsylvania on July 4 in Philadelphia.

During the first eight months of the fiscal year, 1914-1915, the production of beer in the United States has decreased more than three million barrels. The cause of the enormous decrease, where under natural conditions an increase would have been only natural, is assigned by some to the increase of prohibition territory; and this is true to some extent.—Brewer's Journal for June.

The Supreme Court of Delaware has decided that unlicensed clubs cannot legally serve liquors to members under any conditions.

Des Moines, Iowa, dry since last February, when the saloons were closed by action of the City Council, still retains its commercial equilibrium. Collections are steadily improving, especially among the working class. People thrown out of work by the closing of the saloons are finding other employment. One hotel is adding five more stories to its six. "People come to the bank regularly now, who perhaps were never inside a bank half a dozen times in their lives before,' says a leading banker, "and the weekly payroll of large employers of labor is steadily increasing."

The city of Des Moines by closing its saloons lost an annual revenue of $133,000. This deficit has been almost wholly provided for by the municipal economy program.

"Employes of this company are not permitted to visit saloons during the noon hour. Violation of this order will be at the employe's risk." In conspicuous places about the Wisconsin Steel Company's plant in Chicago this ruling was posted the other morning, and at noon the horde of workers filed straight by the three saloons located near the company's gate. "Wisconsin steel has gone dry," said the head of the safety department. "We can't have the men's efficiency reduced by drinking during working hours. The men themselves will soon appreciate the value of the new ruling."

Daddy's Bedtime Story—

The Little Cloud That Boasted Too Soon.

There Was a Great Golden Ball in the Sky.

"I MUST tell you about a little cloud that boasted too soon," daddy told Jack and Evelyn. "And as is very likely to happen in such a case—but I will tell you the end of the story when I reach it. Won't that be better?

"The little cloud was born one hot summer day from the vapor which rose from the sea. It was a lovely little cloud, rather dark in the center and all white and fleecy around the edges, and after a little it floated through its sea of blue sky that was as blue as the tossing sea of real water down underneath, and the golden sunlight gave those edges a sort of orange tinge, while the center part of the cloud grew almost black.

"The little cloud, which had lived only a few minutes, was very glad to be alive. It noticed as it sailed along through the blue sky, too, that it grew and grew and grew. It had been a very tiny cloud at first.

"It looked around and about it, and it was the only cloud in all that sea of sky, and then it did feel proud, and it said to itself: 'Why, I must be something new! There is nothing like me around about anywhere. Everything and everybody must be looking at me, I should think.'

"And the little cloud looked down at the blue tossing sea, but the sea seemed to be intent upon its own business and to be paying no attention to it. There were some great birds flying over the sea, occasionally diving down into the waves for fish, but they didn't seem to be paying any attention to it either.

"Then the little cloud felt rather annoyed, like a boastful little boy who doesn't succeed in attracting the attention he thinks he deserves, and the little cloud sulked. But soon it looked up and saw something which restored its interest in life.

"There was a great big golden ball up in the sky, all warm and grinny and comfy, smiling down at it, and the little cloud was sailing straight for that big golden ball.

"Then the little cloud felt ambitious. 'My,' it said; 'I'll be there in a minute, and I'll put that big shining ball right out so as to make everything dark!'

"In another minute that's what the little cloud did. But the sun smiled down at it. The sun had heard little clouds talk before.

"And in another minute the little cloud noticed that the sea at which it was looking was no longer dark, but smiling again, for the little cloud had passed on, leaving the sun smiling as before. It had boasted too soon."

Household Hints

CANNING AND PRESERVING.

Gooseberry Marmalade—Make a proportion of two-thirds gooseberries to one-third pulp, adding a little over a pint of water to a pound of fruit; cook until soft. Put through sieve, and to each pound of fruit add one and one-fourth pounds granulated sugar. Cook until thick, skimming when necessary. Put in jelly glasses. In making this marmalade, if one prefers, the combination of gooseberries and raspberries may be used instead of gooseberries and oranges.

Currant Marmalade—After having washed and drained the desired quantity of currants and taken off the stems, cook and mash. Then rub through a fine sieve—so fine, in fact, that the seeds will not get through. For every pound of pulp allow one pound sugar if red currants are used; if black currants are used, three-fourths of a pound. (This latter measure prevails for white currants as well.) Cook pulp twenty-five minutes, add sugar, stir and cook until a little put on a cold saucer retains its round shape. Put into jars and, when cool, cover.

Pear and Pineapple Marmalade—Take two quarts pears, one large pineapple and four cups sugar. Pare, core and quarter the pears; prepare the pineapple (using care to remove the eyes). Chop fine, place in porcelain-lined pan, add sugar and boil until clear. Seal in glasses.

Orange Marmalade—Take six oranges to two lemons. Slice fruit, then add a pint of cold water and one and one-quarter pounds granulated sugar. Cook until it jellies, and put into glasses.

Orange-Rhubarb Marmalade—Take three pounds sugar, three pounds rhubarb and four oranges. Wash rhubarb thoroughly; also wash oranges. Then peel oranges, cutting the white inner part away from the skin and using the outer skin of orange. Place all, rhubarb, sugar, oranges—both pulp and outer skin—in a granite dish, and boil until thick. Seal in jars. This is a delicious

THE TABLE.

Minute Soup—Excellent for supper when something warm is desired, or for the little folks when they return from school. Light bread or crackers crumbed in a bowl or deep dish; add lump of butter, half cup sweet cream, plenty of pepper and salt; if fond of onions, cut a few slices thin and lay over the top; pour over plenty of boiling water and you will be surprised to see how good it is. If not fond of onions, add an egg well beaten, after the water is poured over, and stir well.

Egg Salad—Take as many hard-boiled eggs as there are people to be served; cut lengthwise and lay on eggs. Serve on lettuce leaves and cover with salad dressing.

Peach and Pineapple Salad—Drain juice from one can sliced pineapple and one can peaches; lay slices on individual plates and place halved peaches on top of pineapple, placing several sour cherries in the pit cavity of the peaches; pour cream salad dressing over each slice.

Spanish Bun—One and one-fourth cups brown sugar, two eggs, one-half cup milk, one-fourth cup butter, one teaspoon cinnamon, one-half teaspoon cloves, one-half teaspoon nutmeg, one and three-fourth cups flour, one and one-half teaspoons baking powder. Frosting for bun: White of one egg beaten stiff, one cup brown sugar.

California Nut and Date Bread—One cup sugar (granulated); add two eggs and beat, one and one-half cups sweet milk, one cup dates chopped fine, one cup English walnut meats chopped fine, one-fourth teaspoon salt, four cups flour, four teaspoons baking powder. Sift flour and baking powder four times. Put into two loaves and bake in slow oven one hour.

New Rhubarb Sauce—One cup prunes, three cups rhubarb, one cup granulated sugar. Wash prunes and cook until tender in enough water to cover; when done remove stones. Peel rhubarb, cut in small pieces, add to prunes with sugar and cook un-

Glimpses of Married Life

BY MRS. EVA LEONARD

"What was it like?" asked Nell when Olive appeared in the afternoon, following her interview with Mrs. Ellson.

"Not a bit exciting. You have but to show an insane person you are not afraid and you can succeed in carrying your point. I think the trouble about poisoned notes and meddlesome interference of all kinds is at an end."

Nell smiled incredulously.

"Well," Olive was answering the smile, "I have delivered my ultimatum. It's Mrs. Ellson's next move and I shall pursue a policy of watchful waiting.'"

"It would be a relief if she were in an asylum," said Nell, heaving a sigh.

"Of course Dr. Ellson would not adopt such a measure, except as a last resort," said Olive.

"What do you hear from Dick?"

"He arrives next Saturday. How I wish we could have a reunion of the old jolly crowd, or as many of them as are left, while he is here."

"Mr. Joplin asked to come down from Ann Arbor Friday, and I planned to let him. I hope we can get back to our old friendly footing; this is the first I've heard from him since I refused him."

"Oh, have him by all means," said Nell. "What shall we do to celebrate the reunion?"

"A skating party would be jolly, with an oyster supper after it. I hope the ice will be good."

"Just the thing!" exclaimed Nell enthusiastically. "I haven't skated for two years, but I certainly don't want to forget how."

So it was arranged and there was a gathering of the clan the afternoon after Dick's arrival. Mr. Joplin joined the skating party. Olive received him as if the last scene between them had never occurred.

As they were skating by themselves at some distance from the others, Olive remarked slyly:

"Your friend had a cold wait for you by the steps the other night, didn't she?"

Joplin stared. "So you saw her?" he asked. "Wasn't that the craziest thing you ever heard of?"

Crazy is right. I told her that if she didn't stop I'd tell Dr. Ellson and have her alimony cut off."

"When did you see her?" he asked in utter astonishment.

"I went to her lodging house and sent in your card," she replied.

"My head would be good squirrel food, I guess. I can't follow."

"Why, I figured it out as you had gone away together that you and Mrs. Ellson were fellow conspirators and that your card would bring an interview where mine would not."

"How did you know where she lived? She would not let me go home with her."

"Nell and I followed her to her boarding house once, after she had rendered us some attention. We thought turn about was fair play."

"Olive!" exclaimed the young man, "if you aren't the most——" he paused for a word.

"Eccentric," supplied the girl, skating away in a straight line for the crowd.

"Tell me more about your interview," persisted Joplin, catching up with her.

"There's not much more to tell. I spread out her sins in a row before her, bribing the maid to spy on me and read my letters, her poison letters, her shadowing my home. I mentioned them all, and I delivered my ultimatum. I don't expect to hear from her again."

FLOUNCES POPULAR FOR DANCE FROCKS.

No. 8957.

Flouncings or bordered materials are worn a great deal on afternoon and evening dresses, with very good effect. They lend a quaintness and comliness to the garment that quite becomes femininity. A misses' dress of this sort, Ladies' Home Journal Pattern No. 8957, has a foundation waist to be made with high neck and standing collar, round or low neck and full-length or shorter puff sleeves with or without sleeve caps, a bolero jacket cut straight at the lower edge and laid in soft plaits on the shoulder in front; a fire-gored skirt with three straight flounces which are perforated to cut away in panel effect in front. Pattern cuts in sizes 14, 16, 18 and 20, size 18 requiring 4¼ yards 36-inch material and 9 yards 18-inch flouncing.

INVESTIGATING NEW YORK CITY.

New York, July 6.—The legislative committee which is investigating the city administration of New York will meet this week and organize with Senator E. R. Brown, of Watertown, as chairman. There is no secret of the fact that the committee will try to bring out that if the city cannot afford to pay its major share of the $19,500,000 direct tax levy the fault lies not with the tax but with the city administration. The committee includes nine Republicans and three Democrats. Senator Brown denies that the creation of the investigating committee, which he himself suggested, was a political move to avenge Governor Whitman for the wide criticism he received from the city officials.

CRITICIZES CONDITIONS AT NEW BRUNSWICK POOR FARM

New Brunswick, July 6.—Living conditions at the Homestead, the city's poor farm, are in bad condition, according to a statement made by Mrs. Bessie Thompson, of the Visiting Nurse Association. She recently inspected the Homestead at the behest of Commissioner James Mershon, in charge of the city's poor.

"I would not send a dog to the Homestead so rotten are the living conditions there," Mrs. Thompson said.

The allegations concerning the poor farm are denied by John Breece, recently ordered dismissed as steward of the Homestead, and his wife, who aids him in the administration of the place. Breece still is on duty at the Homestead with his wife. They refuse to give up their positions.

Mrs. Thompson says that the farm is unhealthy and that the eleven women inmates, whose ages run from thirty to eighty years, are kept in a constant state of uncleanliness. She makes the charge that another visiting nurse, found Mrs. Beece running off the hot water one day when they were ready to give the women inmates a bath. Mrs. Thompson says Mrs. Breece protested against the use of the bath tub, which she has to use herself. Miss Berger charges that towels and soap were not available.

In response to most of these charges, Mrs. Breece, through her husband, denied their truth. Breece said there were no towels and soap on the farm, because Commissioner Mershon had refused to buy them. In response to charges the inmates were dressed in filthy clothing and worn-out shoes, Breece said the commission has not honored an order for shoes recently made.

Breece and his wife brand as untrue the report some of the women never get their baths. They get baths each week, said Breece. Breece added he never had seen any vermin about the place. Mrs. Thompson says she found the sleeping quarters of the inmates infested.

IN CHANCERY OF NEW JERSEY.

To Louis Bevier, Jr., and Mrs. Louis Bevier, Jr.

By virtue of an order of the Court of Chancery of New Jersey, made on the day of the date hereof, in a cause wherein The Board of Trustees of the Seventh-Day Baptist Memorial Fund is complainant, and you and Grace B. Kaufman, Albert G. Negley and Eleanor M. Negley are defendants, you are required to appear, plead, answer or demur to the bill of complainants, on or before the fourth day of August next, or the said bill will be taken as confessed against you.

The said bill is filed to foreclose a mortgage against you, given by the said Albert G. Negley and wife to the complainant, dated July 8, 1907, on lands in the City of Plainfield, County of Union, and State of New Jersey, and you, the said Louis Bevier, Jr., are made a defendant because you are the record owner of said mortgaged premises, and you, the said Mrs. Louis Bevier, Jr., are made a defendant because you are the wife of said Louis Bevier, Jr., and may claim some interest therein by right of dower or otherwise.

Dated June 3, 1915.

EIGHT PROPOSALS FOR FIRE ENGINE

International Motor Company, of Plainfield, One of the Firms Bidding.

COMMITTEE TO ACT

All of the Figures Will Be Taken Under Advisement and the Bids Investigated—Allowance for Hose Wagon Larger Than Expected.

Proposals for furnishing the city with a new automobile combination hose and chemical engine were received by the Common Council at its July meeting last night, eight firms making bids for the contract. The estimates follow: Garret Carriage Works, New York city, for three types, (a) $5,782.47; (b) $4,652.47; (c) $4,005; allowing $1,000 for old hose wagon. American La France Fire Engine Company, Inc., Chicago, Ill., three types, (a) $3,300, F. O. B. Plainfield, allowing $400 for old hose wagon; (b) $4,800, F. O. B. Plainfield, allowing $400 for old hose wagon; (c) $5,300, F. O. B. Plainfield, allowing $400 for hose wagon. Aarons Fox Fire Engine Company, Cincinnati, O., two types, (a) $5,800, F. O. B. Plainfield; (b) $5,750, F. O. B. Plainfield; no bid for hose wagon given. D. Arthur Burt & Company, Eastern agents for the Segrave Engine Company, Columbus, O., two types, (a) $5,750; (b) $5,450; both bids allowing for service of expert agent after delivery and a $200 discount if electric self-starter is not wanted. Robert Woodhouse, Eastern agent for the Nott Engine Company, $6,000, allowing $1,500 for old hose wagon. White Company, Newark, two types, (a) $4,978.50; (b) $4,-[illegible]2. International Motor Company, Plainfield, two types (a) $4,092 with an allowance of $250 for hose wagon; (b) $5,189 with an allowance of $700 for hose wagon. C. H. Minton, Eastern representative for the G. C. Hale's Company, Kansas City, $5,000, F. O. B. Plainfield, allowing $800 for old hose wagon and charging $150 extra for an electric started if same is wanted. All of the proposals were referred to the fire and buildings committee and will be taken under advisement by that body.

Representatives of several of the concerns presenting estimates were present at the Council meeting last night and each proposal was accompanied by a set of specifications. The difference in types and prices given by individual bidders is accounted for by the difference in horse power of the engines on which prices are quoted. The International Motor Company included in its sealed quotation a letter advising the Council that it was recognized as a home concern and requesting that some consideration be given this fact in making the award.

METHODIST EXCURSION THE FIRST OF SEASON

Many Plainfielders have signified their intention of going on the first excursion of the season which leaves here tomorrow morning for Asbury Park under the auspices of the Methodist churches of Plainfield and Dunellen. The committee in charge of the outing have arranged the trip in two sections, trains leaving the stations at the following time: Dunellen, 8:04 a. m.; Clinton Avenue, 8.06 a. m.; Grant Avenue; 8:09 a. m.; North Avenue, 8:12 a. m., and Netherwood, 8:15 a. m. On the return trip trains will leave Asbury Park at 7:10 and 7:15 p. m.

The comfort of all who go is assured, the committee having accommodations for baggage, baby carriages and other luggage excursionists wish to take with them.

REMOVING GROVE ST. BRIDGE.

Grove street, North Plainfield, is closed to traffic while the iron truss bridge over Green brook is being removed. A fine new bridge, a Luten, of reinforced concrete, is to replace the old structure, which has been bought by the Somerset County Board of Freeholders for use in some isolated section of the county. Arthur E. Smith, of this city, has the contract for the new bridge.

FUNERAL OF HARRY CARR.

The funeral of Harry Carr, who died Saturday at Bonnie Burn, was held yesterday afternoon at 2 o'clock at his late residence, 35 Pearl street, North Plainfield, being in charge of the Rev. C. S. Gillespie, pastor of the Grace Methodist Episcopal church. Interment was made at Hillside. The pall bearers were W. H. Randall, Harry Allen, Charles Steurtevant and Frederick Schuman.

AN ADJOURNED SESSION.

The Common Council will hold an adjourned meeting in the Council chambers Tuesday night, July 20.

GASOLINE IS FOUND IN SEWER CULVERTS

Street Commissioner Gavett Conducting An Investigation to Find Offender.

Convinced that some individual or firm in Plainfield is emptying gasoline in large quantities into the sewers, Street Commissioner Andrew Gavett is conducting a personal investigation with a view to revealing the identity of the guilty party. Evidences of gasoline have been found from time to time when sewers have been opened by the city department and the danger of causing an explosion is apparent. In 1895 an instance of this kind occurred and the sewers covering a wide area were torn up.

Should a pedestrian drop a match or lighted cigar while passing over the sewer culvert the fumes of the gasoline would undoubtedly become ignited and an explosion with possible loss of life would follow.

Mr. Gavett has visited several local cleaning establishments in an effort to find out what is being done with gasoline after it is used for cleaning purposes, but his probe has as yet not fully satisfied him and he has been unable to fix any definite responsibility.

POLICE DISCREDIT CHAUFFEUR'S ALIBI

Man Accused of "Joy-riding" Over the Week End Will Be Tried Tomorrow.

Because his alibi was so flimsy that the local police refused to place credence in it, Lemuel Donaldson, colored, was returned to a cell this morning when arraigned before City Judge DeMeza to answer to a charge of "joy riding," to await trial tomorrow morning. In the meantime the authorities will conduct an investigation to reveal the true status of the allegations against the prisoner.

Until arrested last night, Donaldson was employed as a chauffeur by Fred VanZandt, a local taxicab operator. According to VanZandt his man took the car out Saturday afternoon and failed to put in appearance again until last night when he was arrested.

Donaldson explains his two days' absence by saying that he took a passenger to Newark and was employed by him over the week-end to drive him to various places. When requested to exhibit the money he would get as remuneration for such a contract Donaldson put in the alibi that the man had refused to pay him.

It is the belief of the authorities that the man's story has no foundation and the condition of the car indicates that it has been subjected to some hard usage. According to Donaldson his passenger was Raymond Johnston, a colored man employed by the Loizeaux Lumber Company.

$6,000 APPROPRIATION ASKED FOR NEW SCHOOL

In a petition received from the Board of School Estimate, the Common Council, at its July meeting last night, was requested to set aside an appropriate of $6,000 for the purchase of land on which a new school will be erected in the Netherwood section of the town. The petition was filed with the proper committees and will be reported back at the next meeting of the Council.

This is the first definite step in the direction of a school for the East End of the city, a thing that has been agitated for several years. Recently the demand has been an urgent one, the increasing number of children of school age in that part of the city making the need strikingly noticeable. While it is certain that the school building will not be started for another year at least, the ground may be purchased at any time after the appropriation is made.

APPROACHING WEDDING.

Announcement has been made of the approaching marriage of Miss Lillian Remppies, of 760 Webster place, to Harry Teepee, of Morristown, which will take place in St. Mary's church August 18. The couple will make their home in Morristown. Following the marriage ceremony a reception will be accorded the newlyweds and their friends in Debele's Hall, North Plainfield.

FUNERAL WAS PRIVATE.

The funeral of Joseph Montanye, who died Monday night, was held at his late home, 1027 Arlington avenue, this afternoon, and was private. The service was in charge of the Plymouth Brethren, J. F. Parker conducting the service. Burial was made in Hillside cemetery.

CITY RECREATION CENTRES POPULAR

Five Playgrounds Are Thrown Open for the Amusement of Children.

ATTENDANCE IS LARGE

Competent Supervisors Are in Charge of the Sports and Will Teach Basket Weaving, Dancing, Etc—Exhibition of Work a Feature.

The five city playgrounds were thrown open yesterday for the summer months, with competent instructors in charge of each, anxious to do all they can not only to amuse but to teach the hundreds of children who will come under their care during the coming months. Mothers, who have to go out to work, send their children to the various playgrounds and know that they are out of harm's way and are having a fine time under the watchful eye of the person in charge at that particular playground. The number of children who gathered yesterday at the different schoolyards where the playgrounds are mapped out, was unusually large and exceeded the anticipations of those in charge of the work.

At Parker Field about three hundred boys gathered, some to enjoy themselves all morning; others, to stay all day, eating lunch in the cool grove with which this great field is blessed. Supervisor George W. Wristen, the supervisor at this particular

COUNCIL SETS DATE FOR PUBLIC HEARING

Matter of Widening Somerset Street Will Be Subject of Discussion July 13.

Petitions were received from interested property owners at last night's meeting of the Common Council requesting that body to take up the matter of widening Somerset street, between Front street and the dividing line in the bridge over Green brook, an agitation which was started here a number of years ago and finally dropped as being inexpedient at that time. One petition bore the names of John W. Cox and others, and the second one came from the office of Elston M. French, a North avenue real estate dealer. Many names were affixed to each document and it is pretty certain that the agitation is a general one.

Those asking for the improvement call attention to the fact that a building is being erected at the juncture of West Front and Somerset streets which will render the widening practically impossible if action is delayed until after the construction work is carried out. The petitions call for a five-foot widening on each side of the thoroughfare to make the curb line coincide with the North Plainfield portion of Somerset street, which was widened to the present width some time ago. On the eastern curb line it will be necessary to tear down the bootblack parlor on the corner and it is thought that immediate action will keep the widening expense down to a minimum.

Chairman Francis J. Blatz read the requests on behalf of the petitioners and set Tuesday night, July 13, as the date for a public hearing on the matter. At that time all interested will be asked to express their views on the proposition.

EVELYN THAW IN CONTEMPT; STATE SPRINGS SURPRISE

New York, July 7.—Evelyn Nesbit Thaw today was declared in contempt of court and will be brought back under arrest to testify for the State in Thaw's insanity test, unless she crosses into Canada.

The defense created a surprise at noon today, when it put on the stand Susan Merrill, who ran the roominghouse on West Fifty-eighth street, this city, in which Harry Thaw, under the name of Prof. Reed, ran a so-called theatrical agency. Susan Merrill was a witness in the Thaw murder trial.

GERMAN REPLY READY SATURDAY

Expect That Von Jagow Will Hand Note to Gerard Before Week End.

TURKS SLAUGHTERED

French Troops Mow Them Down in Attack on Dardanelles—Russians Also Claim Success in Caucausus—Another Zeppelin Wrecked.

New York, July 7.—According to a Berlin dispatch to the New York evening papers, Chancellor von Bethmann-Hollweg conferred with Foreign Secretary von Jagow until an early hour today, regarding the German reply to the American note. Following this conference it was stated at the Foreign Office that the communication probably would be handed to Ambassador Gerard on Saturday.

Excepting Count Reventlow, editorial writers here have refrained from discussing the probable contents of the reply for several days. The German press on the whole continues to adopt a friendly attitude toward America. Without exception the newspapers condemned the attempt to assassinate J. P. Morgan as the act of a crazy man.

Paris, July 7.—After a heavy bombardment of the Allies' positions at Dardanelles the Turks opened a general attack Monday. As the infantry advanced the Ottoman soldiers were mowed down by French artillery, machine guns and rifles, most of the attacking forces being slaughtered.

The French war statement issued today says:

"In the region of north of Arras bombardment continued all night. Two German attacks were repulsed. On heights of the Meuse a new German attack against the crest south of the Sonvaux ravine was checked, also one west of the crest.

"Southeast of St. Mihiel the enemy, after a bombardment of great violence, took the offensive on a front extending from the hillock which dominates the right bank of the Meuse to south of Ailly, as far as the place called Tete A Vache, in forest of Apremont. At a single point he penetrated into our first line on a front of about 700 yards. At every other point he was repulsed with heavy losses.

"In eastern section of Le Pretre forest we broke up a new attack by the Germans."

Gen. Alexander Von Kluck, who was wounded some months ago while inspecting the advance trenches of the Germans, has recovered, and returned to the front near Soisson.

Petrograd, July 7.—The Russian war statement of Caucasus operation issued today says:

"An artillery duel occurred yesterday in the coast region. South of the Chariandagh chain a Russian detachment engaged a regiment of the enemy's infantry that was supported by artillery, machine guns and two squadrons of suwaris. The enemy was driven back. West of Alilavant the Turks attempted to take the offensive but failed."

Amsterdam, July 7.—Another Zeppelin was wrecked Sunday. Compelled by motor trouble to descend, the airship dropped on a farm house near Assenede, completely collapsing. Allied aeraplones which recently raided the German airship shed at Brussels also flew over Malines and attacked the arsenal there, but caused only slight damage.

Pretoria, July 7.—After a long running fight Gen. Botha's British forces have taken Otavi, in extreme northern part of German southwest Africa.

Copenhagen, July 7.—Four more neutral steamers, three Danish and one Swedish, have been intercepted by German warships in the Baltic and taken to Swinemunde.

Berlin, July 7.—The German war statement issued today says:

"West of upper Vistula we made good progress. East of Vistula no important change occurred. During the pursuit to the Zlotalipa River, Galicia, July 3 to July 5, we captured 3,850 Russians. In the west yesterday, British troops entered a German trench north of Ypres but were rejected in the evening. West of Souchez two night attacks by the enemy were repulsed. While we were shelling troops of the enemy at Arras the town caught fire, the cathedral burning. Between the Meuse and Mosselle there was lively fighting yesterday. Southwest of Les Eparages the enemy continued his effort to win back positions recently lost. At first the French got into a part of our line, but were then driven back with the exception of a piece of 100 yards.

MERNAGH ENTERS NOT GUILTY PLEA

Suspended Patrolman Makes General Denial of All Allegations Against Him.

DEMANDS PUBLIC TRIAL

Police Board Grants Same But Does Not Set Date—Charges Preferred by Chief Kiely—Other Matters Taken up by Governing Board.

Arraigned before the councilmanic police board at a meeting last night, William Mernagh, the patrolman accused by a superior officer of certain infractions of department rules, took advantage of his rights in the matter and after entering pleas of not guilty to each count he made a demand for a public hearing. He is at present under suspension and this ban will hold good until a disposition of the charges is made by the governing board. Allegations of a serious nature were made against Mernagh by Chief of Police Kiely at a meeting of the police board on July 2, it being charged among other things that for several months he had knowledge of illegal liquor selling in Plainfield but had failed to notify his superiors. He is also said to be guilty of acting as informant for the colored man who ran the "speak-easy" and to have afforded the latter protection from the men higher up who were keeping a close surveilance on the "joint."

OLD BRIDGE MEETING PLACE FOR LOVERS

Many Curious Things Found in Dismantling Grove Street Structure.

Freeholder J. Hervey Doane was approached by Captain George Edwards, of 123 East Sixth street, when news of the proposed removal of the old iron truss bridge spanning Green brook at Grove street, was first made public, with a request to have the bases of the lampposts at the corners of the bridge examined for some pennies which his children had dropped through a slot one day a score of years ago. The pennies were found this morning.

Captain Edwards remembered the incident and desired the pennies as souvenirs of the old bridge, and so Mr. Doane instructed the superintendent in charge of the work to look out for them. The first three posts were taken down without revealing any trace of the pennies, but this morning the men came to the last of the four and in the base of this one were found two coppers, tarnished with age, but perfectly good to pass as legal tender. The dates on them are almost undecipherable, but sharp eyes this morning made out what looked like the dates "1882" and "1892." They will be turned over to Captain Edwards to return to his children, who are now grown to manhood and womanhood, or to retain himself for their associations.

The base of this particular lamppost disclosed other things besides the pennies. There were short notes, making engagements; scraps of old newspapers, and business and calling cards. Mr. Doane's theory about these finds is that the spot was used as a meeting place by youths and maidens in the old days, and that while waiting, the young people dropped their cards and such scraps of paper as they had with them through the slot in the lamppost.

WILLIAM L. SAUNDERS TO SPEAK ON "CONSOLIDATION"

Former Mayor William L. Saunders, of North Plainfield, a strong advocate of the consolidation of the two municipalities which are now separated and pursuing distinct aims by Green brook, will address the monthly meeting of the Plainfield Business Men's Association tomorrow evening in Coward's Hall, 109 Park avenue. The meeting will be called to order at 8 o'clock, and Mr. Saunders is scheduled to begin his address a half hour later.

An invitation is extended the general public to be present and listen to Mr. Saunders' talk and the discussion of the consolidation question which will follow. The meeting will be enlivened by the relation of an incident showing the unconscious robbing of Plainfield merchants, it is announced. The Mayors and members of Common Council of both municipalities interested have been invited to be present.

THREATENS TO BRING SUIT AGAINST CITY

Ransome Engineering Company Alleges Patent Rights Have Been Infringed on.

Threatening to institute civil action against the city of Plifinfield unless immediate and satisfactory restitution is made for an alleged enfringement on patent rights in the erection of the new Evergreen Avenue School, Edward S. Beach, counsel for the Ransome Engineering Company, of New York city, has communicated with the Common Council and the Board of Education. According to the concern's attorney the patent rights have been violated in the interior construction work and he sets forth that in default of a prompt settlement litigation will be entered into.

In the communication Br. Beach cites parallel cases brought by the Ransome Engineering Company, one of which made the Bush Terminal Company the defendant. According to the New York attorney the latter concern settled under the demands of the patent holders. The matter was referred to the laws and ordinance committee and will be acted upon in the near future.

MARSHAL WAS NOT A HOSPITABLE HOST

Smalley's Sense of Smell Too Keen for Newark "Joy Riders."

Too many stops at thirst quenching emporiums between Newark and Dunellen brought a party of automobilists from Jersey's metropolis to grief in the suburban town last evening, and according to the latest reports, the chauffeur of the machine, Robert Maxwell, is still occupying a cell in the borough hall in default of $10 fine and $300 bail levied against him by Judge von Minden. The fine was meted out as punishment for driving the car without a license and the bail was fixed to insure his appearance before the Middlesex County Grand Jury on a count of driving the machine while under the influence of liquor.

Early last evening the party visited the Park Hotel in Dunellen, and after a short session around the gilded bar went back to the auto for the purpose of taking the homeward journey to Newark. All was a maze in front of Maxwell, however, and when he attempted to make a turn in the roadway he landed on the sidewalk in front of police headquarters, coming within an ace of clipping Marshal Smalley, who was doing night duty.

Smalley's nostrils detected the odor of something besides gasoline when he interviewed Maxwell concerning the reasons for his sudden visit to the vicinity of the police station door and concluded that the chauffeur was not a fit person to resume the trip to Newark. The other five members of the party couldn't scrape enough greenbacks together to satisfy Maxwell's fine and tuey trolleyed back to Newark, leaving the pilot stranded high and dry in a station house cell.

DEN. GALBRAITH PLANS FOUR NEW DWELLINGS

A real estate development in the West End will soon be undertaken by Den J. Galbraith, the North avenue plumber, who owns quite a tract of land on Clinton avenue. Mr. Galbraith has 600 feet fronting on Clinton avenue, extending from Clinton place to West Fourth street, containing 62 lots.

Mr. Galbraith is having plans drawn for four modern, up-to-date dwellings, which he will start to erect in the near future. The houses will be one-family houses with baths, open fireplaces and everything that goes to make up a first-class residence, Mr. Galbraith says. The property has already been sidewalked and curbed. It is planned to have the houses completed for fall occupancy.

SIMON HAHN DEBARRED.

Trenton, July 7.—Having been adjudged guilty upon charges of malpractice as a solicitor in Chancery and of fraudulant conduct towards a client, former Judge Simon Hahn, of Newark, was debarred from further practice in the Court of Chancery today by an opinion filed by Chancellor Walker.

Galveston, Texas, July 7—The overwhelming defeat of the Villista General, Buelna, in an attack on Tepic City, is announced in a cablegram from Ver Cruz today.

DYNAMITE PUT ON LINER BY HOLT

Morgan Assailant Said to Have So Confessed Before Suicide.

MORGAN IS IMPROVING

Man Who Made Attempt on Financier's Life Makes Statement That Causes Wireless Report to Be Sent to Liner Philadelphia.

Washington, July 7—Broadcast warning to all steamers sailing from New York to Liverpool within the past four days was sent out by the Navy Department last night, on the strength of suspicion aroused by obtaining possession of a letter written by Frank Holt to his wife.

New York, July 7—A wireless message of inquiry was sent early today by the American Line officials to Arthur Mills, commander of the American liner Philadelphia, which sailed from this port last Saturday. A reply was received by Captain Mills stating that a thorough search was made of the vessel and all baggage identified. It had been feared that Frank Holt, who committed suicide last night, had placed dynamite on one of the transatlantic liners leaving New York last week.

Fifty pounds of dynamite bought by Frank Holt, who shot J. P. Morgan, is on board an ocean liner on the high seas bound for Europe, according to an admission Holt is said to have made to an agent of the Department of Justice shortly before he plunged to his death in the Mineola jail last night.

A trunkful of dynamite, shipped by Holt under the name of F. H. Henderson from Mineola, and which was found last night by Capt. Tunney in storage at a livery stable at 342 West Thirty-eighth street, accounts for only seventy pounds of the 120 pounds of explosive known to have been purchased by Holt. Fifty pounds of dynamite is still missing.

Holt is reported to have confessed that he had put the missing dynamite on a steamship bound for Europe and that the disappearance of the explosive would be explained on Wednesday. Attached to the dynamite was said to be a time clock which was set so that the dynamite would explode today. This Holt is said to have given as an explanation of his statement that everything would be cleared up today.

Government agents and police officials were endeavoring to warn all transatlantic vessels that might be imperilled today. Wireless stations along the coast made efforts last night and today to get in communication with the ships.

Word was received at the office of J. P. Morgan & Company, this morning, from Glen Cove, that Mr. Morgan shows continued improvement. He transacted business over the 'phone with his partners.

Mineola, July 7—Frank Holt, the assailant of J. P. Morgan and the man who planted a bomb in the Capitol, foiled the close watch over him and committed suicide by taking a headforemost leap from the horizontal bars in front of a second tier of cells in the jail here last night, fracturing his skull.

Jeremiah Ryan, Holt's guard, who left his post outside of Holt's door to investigate a noise in another part of the prison, has corrected his first version of how Holt killed himself. He first insisted that Holt was found dead in his own cell—the quarters adjoining the warden's, where Mrs. Florence Carman was confined. But Warden Hulse said this morning that Ryan's statement was made in the excitement of the moment and that Ryan found Holt's body in the corridor.

The corridor does not immediately join the room where Holt was confined, but a few rapid steps were sufficient to bring him to the cell tiers. Ryan has also retracted the idea that Holt killed himself by chewing a fulminate of mercury cap. The explosion Ryan believes he heard is connected by physicians with the crash of Holt's skull upon the floor.

The identification of Holt as Erich Muente, the Harvard professor in German, who poisoned his wife in 1906, was nearly completed yesterday, and it is believed that the sight of persons who knew Holt as Muenter may have strengthened him in his frantic determination to kill himself.

BAPTIST SUPPLIES.

Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss, former pastor, will occupy the pulpit of the First Baptist church Sunday morning, August 1; Rev. Bergen D. Stelle on August 8; Dr. Chambliss on August 16, and Rev. E. J. Bosworth on August 29.

ELI BEATS TIGERS.

The Parker Field Junior League opened this morning, the team representing Yale defeating that of Princeton by the score of 9 to 5.

BULLET CRASHES THROUGH WINDOW

Mrs. Jacob Acton Has a Narrow Escape From Fatal Injury.

While Mrs. Jacob Acton, of Walnut street, was sitting at her kitchen window and sewing about 1 o'clock Fourth of July morning a rifle cracked and a bullet sped through the window pane not two feet above her head showering her with glass. The bullet had lost considerable of its momentum and when it hit the wall on the opposite side of the room it dropped to the floor. On being picked up it was found to be of 32 calibre.

The rifle was fired by a 17-year-old Polock lad, who resides in the Smith place opposite the Whittier School. Mr. Acton had seen the lad scurrying into his home with the rifle following the crash of glass and the screams of his wife and he immediately notified police headquarters of what had occurred. It was Mr. Acton's intention at first to have the lad arrested but upon being questioned by the police he expressed great sorrow over his act and said that he had no idea that the bullet would carry so far. The distance from the point where the lad stood and the Acton home was considerable and as the lad was believed Mr. Acton decided not to make a complaint against him. The local police hope that this will be a lesson to any who have celebrated in the past with leaded cartridges.

Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Barton, of New York, were entertained by Mrs. Barton's father, Adam Herlich, of Front street, over the Fourth.

Mr. and Mrs. L. W. Treichler, of Mountainview Terrace, have been entertaining Miss Ida Franz, of Baltimore.

Mrs. Paul Stryker and daughter, Miss Alice, of Columbia street, spent yesterday in Roselle visiting Mrs. Stryker's daughter, Mrs. Leonard Tolley.

Miss Sarah Dayton spent the Fourth in Bayonne visiting her brother, Alfred Dayton.

J. B. Koresey, assistant superintendent of the H. K. Corbin Company, the sewer contractors, spent the holidays at his bungalow at High Hill Beach, L. I.

Borough Engineer L. T. Churchill has moved his office from the quarters of the Watchung Water Company in the First National Bank building to the vacant apartment in his father's home.

Mrs. Annie Abbott, of New Market road, spent yesterday in New York.

Mr. and Mrs. William Walters and children, of Sheepshead Bay, Coney Island, and Miss Hattie Williams, of Brooklyn, were entertained by Mr. and Mrs. Alden Wilmet, of Third street, over the Fourth.

Mrs. T. W. Day and child have returned from a three weeks' stay at Branchville.

Miss Marjorie Richards, of Newark, is visiting her aunt, Mrs. George K Post, of New Market road.

Mrs. Frank Mohan, of North avenue, visited her sister, Miss Mabel Margentino in the Italian hospital at 83rd street and East River, New York, where she underwent an operation last Wednesday.

Miss Jessie M. Stites and cousin, Miss Gertrude Hughes, were visitors at Atlantic City over the Fourth.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Margentino, of North avenue, have adopted their 15-year-old nephew, Edward Spinetta, of Pittsburgh, who is an orphan.

SUMMER SCHEDULE.

The new schedule of services for the Methodist Episcopal church will go into effect Sunday. The Sunday-school instead of meeting at 2:30 o'clock in the afternoon will meet at 10 o'clock in the morning and the hour of the morning church service has been changed from 10:30 to 11. In the evening the Epworth League and the church will hold a combined service from 7 to 8 o'clock. This new schedule is for the summer only.

CHANGES POSITION.

James H. Townley, son of Mr. and Mrs. H. S. Townley, of Madison avenue, who recently resigned his position in the office of the Deal Electric Company at Elizabeth, has accepted a position in the office of the Public Service Company at Bound Brook.

A home-made bakery is to be opened Saturday in the Alvah Gray building by Mrs. Kathryn Way, of Rochester, N. Y., who is at present making her home with her niece, Mrs. Eric Benson.

HOLIDAY TRIP.

Arthur Gangloff, Emanuel Appert, William Gangloff and Carl Marx spent the week-end and holiday in taking a canoe trip along the Raritan Canal to Princeton. They started Saturday afternoon and didn't get back until Monday evening. The nights were spent in camping along the shore of the canal. Excepting for the fact that they were annoyed considerably by mosquitoes at night and drenched through by the heavy deluge of Monday morning the party had a most enjoyable time.

GETS OFF EASY.

Paul Howard Hall, aged 15 years, of Plainfield, was arrested by Marshal H. S. Shugars as he was riding his bicycle along the sidewalk on Lincoln avenue last evening. The marshal resides on Lincoln avenue and in looking out of the window of his home he saw the offender coming and went out and arrested him. When arraigned in Judge David S. Campbell's court last evening, the court inclined to deal leniently with the lad on account of his age and let him go with a severe reprimand.

G. O. P. TO MEET.

An important meeting of the Republican County Committee will be held in the Elks' lodge rooms at New Brunswick this evening at 7:30 o'clock. All Republicans are invited to attend. The main object of the meeting is the appointment of a committee on nominations to secure candidates for the coming elections. Dunellen will be largely represented.

The delegation will make strong representations to the meeting about its being represented on the Board of Freeholders and in the Assembly and will submit the names of Mayor E. B Latham for the Assembly and Postmaster Henry S. Garretson for the Board of Freeholders. It was also said that the name of Judge Rene P. F. von Minden, of New Market, might also be submitted as a Senatorial prospect.

'Plains & Fanwood.

Active work has been started on the building of a two and a half story dwelling for James Miniszek on Russell road. I. S. Ostlin, of Richmond Hill, who has built a number of local houses, including Mr. Miniszek's residence on Midway avenue, will have general supervision of the work.

Mrs. Samuel Lucas, of Virginia, is spending some time in the 'Plains visiting her sister, Mrs. Thomas Weller, of Park avenue.

Pieces of the old cannon that helped celebrate the Fourth in the 'Plains are scattered over a radius of about a quarter-mile, according to the reports coming from different residents concerning the pieces of iron on their property. The holiday was greeted by rounds from the cannon, but when it came time to usher Independence Day out the 'Plains artillery men rammed home a load that burst the antique. The affair happened at the corner of Park avenue and Front street, and it is surprising that some injury was not done to the crowds of people watching the proceedings. As it was it cut posts on porches and trees.

People passing through the borough now will be able to identify the business section by an electric light sign that lights at quarter minute intervals on the property of George Reiner.

Following the third and final reading of the junk dealer ordinance tonight, the Borough Council will probably take definite measure about having all the ordinances compiled in booklet form to be distributed among the residents.

Miss Clara Galvion, of Newark, is spending some time in the borough as the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph E Rhodes, of Midway avenue.

With the rebuilding of the "old station" on Midway avenue, one of the landmarks of this place passes. It was formerly the Scotch Plains station on the C. R. R. of N. J., and is on the same spot as it was before the route of the railroad was changed thirty-five years ago. The property was recently acquired by Charles Norton and is being remodeled into a colonial type of house.

R. W. Nelson, of Raritan road, who recently acquired the Gallagher estate bordering his own property, formerly the Lambert estate, is having the beautiful country home destroyed by fire last winter rebuilt.

Paul Tuzo and family, of Pittsburgh, are in the borough visiting Mr Tuzo's father, Captain Tuzo, of Terrill road, who is very ill.

Entries will close tomorrow for the night tennis tournament at the Westfield Golf Club, which is scheduled to start on July 12. About a dozen of the local members are in the tournament, including the three members of the committee. At the women's putting contest on Monday, Miss Hazel Gardinar, of Martine avenue, captured second honors.

Mr. and Mrs. George Keuhn, who were wedded in the Episcopal church at Murray Hill last Wednesday, have returned from a short tour and are living with the groom's father on Westfield road.

Watchung.

"Elsinore Camp," the fresh air camp of the St. Peter's German Lutheran church of New York, of which Dr. Alfred Moldenke, son of Mrs. Elsie Moldenke, of Cottage Elsinore, is pastor, opened on Tuesday for the summer months. There is room for twenty-four children at the camp and the first consignment arrived yesterday. The camp is pleasantly situated on the Watchung Mountain, near Hillcrest road, and certainly no other spot could offer a more ideal spot for the children of the city's streets.

An auction sale of household furniture as well as farm implements and other articles will be held at the home of Rev. Dr. Charles E. Nash tomorrow afternoon.

At a meeting held last evening in the Mary E. Wilson Memorial Union church by Rev. Mebane Ramsay to organize a foreign mission study class, it was decided to hold this class on Wednesday evening of each week from 8 to 9, in the chapel. A study of Africa will be taken up by the class.

Miss Isabel Gillie is spending a few days at Edgewater.

Mrs. Edwin G. Davies and family, of Plainfield, are spending several days with Mrs. Davies' parents, Mr and Mrs. William H. Campbell.

Rev. Mebane Ramsay is attending the Anti-Saloon Convention at Atlantic City.

Frank Naughright left Saturday for a visit to his wife at the home of her mother, Mrs. John L. Helter, of Bloomsbury.

Mrs. Irra C. Sanderson and daughter, Miss Viola Sanderson, spent Sunday and Monday visiting the former's mother, Mrs. Emma Burd, of Ledgewood.

James Hosking, of Newark, spent the week-end and the holiday as a guest of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Pfeifer.

George, William, Henry and Harry Warr, of East Orange, will spend July at the home of Mrs. William O Schoenheit.

Miss Iva Nunn has returned home from a visit of two weeks with her sisters, Mrs. Marvin Ammerman and Mrs. Edward Garrabrandt, of Mendham.

Chalmers Fleming, of Matawan, is visiting his father, Daniel Fleming.

Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Roberts, of Dover, were entertained Sunday and Monday at the home of the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert Dufford.

Miss Jeannette D. Dufford is a visitor to her uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Bird, of Morristown.

Mr. and Mrs. Morris Trimmer have as visitors their son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Lester Apgar, of Califon.

Mr. and Mrs. Asa Karn, of High Bridge, are spending a few days with Mrs. Karn's parents, Mr. and Mrs Elias Buchanan.

Mr. and Mrs. George Alleger, of Lower Valley, spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Hall.

Mr. and Mrs. Burnet Larue entertained over the holiday their sons and the latter's families, Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Larue, of Phillipsburg, and Mr. and Mrs. Leon Larue, of New York.

Mr. and Mrs. John W. Jarvis spent Sunday at Riverdale.

Mrs. Margaret C. Miller entertained an auto party over the holiday, including Mr. and Mrs. Frank Frambes and daughter, of Morris Plains, and Mr. and Mrs. Martin Hildebrant and family and Mrs. Harriet Larson, of Flanders.

High Bridge-Califon.

Miss Helen Haggerty, of Newark, is spending the month with her cousin, Miss Elma L. Beaty, of Parsonage Heights, Califon.

Miss Mary Neighbour, of Lower Valley, is a guest of Rev. and Mrs. Thomas M. Simanton, of Chester, N. Y.

Mr. and Mrs. Alvah Gray, of Dunellen, took charge yesterday of the Neighbour homestead at Lower Valley for July and August.

Having sold his farm at Lower Valley to James Blazure, of Paterson, George Alligar will build a residence on his recently purchased lot on Parsonage Heights, Califon.

By the will of Mrs. Catherine Ort the Pleasant Grove Presbyterian church and the Pleasant Grove Union cemetery will receive $1,000 and $500 respectively. The residue of the estate will be divided equally between her nephews and nieces. The estate amounted to over $16,000.

Preparations are being made by the congregation of the Califon Methodist church for the annual fair on the church grounds, July 11 and 12. Morris' Imperial Band, of High Bridge will furnish the music.

Charles Miller is making improvements to his property in Church street, Califon.

Whitehouse

Rev. Henry T. Jones, pastor of the Reformed church at Whitehouse Station, will exchange pulpits Sunday morning with Rev. Isaac Sperling, of South Branch.

Mr. and Mrs. John L. Hoffman, of Red Bank, are guests of Mrs. Hoffman's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank W. Lindsey, at Dreabrook, near Whitehouse Station.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Ward, of Astoria, L. I., are guests of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Luckens, in East Whitehouse.

The Misses Elsie and Lydia Lance, of Pleasant Grove, are spending a part of their vacation with their uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. P. Davis Reed, in East Whitehouse.

The Bedminster Township Board of Education has awarded the contract for the plans for the new two-room schoolhouse at Pottersville to Peter C. Van Nuys, an architect, of Somerville. The contract for the construction will be given out soon, and an effort will be made to have the building ready for the opening of the fall term.

Stylish SR Reliable

BACK-BONE ITS IMPORTANCE TO A MAN AND A STORE.

Mark Twain had two wishes.

The first was to be a millionaire; and the second to be a multi-millionaire.

But being only a humorous wisher, neither one was achieved.

It takes more than a wish-bone to succeed; it requires a back-bone.

And the stores that "fall by the wayside" like the men who never "get there," are the spineless sorts—the kind with no back-bone!

We have been firm in our principles—we have lost many a customer because we have refused to "move a price," or "mis-state." But these things to us are unethical, and what is the joy of existence if it is not to do as we know we should?

U. S. ASTOR THEATRE

Elsie Janis, the musical comedy madcap, will appear in just the sort of film for which she is best fitted at the U. S. Astor Theatre this afternoon and tonight. The title of the picture is "The Caprices of Kitty" and it is all Elsie Janis. Miss Janis is seen in every mood she is capable to portray and that means the whole gamut of emotions.

"The Caprices of Kitty" is a sprightly comedy of boarding school life. Of course, Miss Janis dominates the action just as her antics prevailed in "The Fair Co-Ed," "The Vanderbilt Cup" and other notable musical comedies in which she has appeared. Miss Janis particularly will be remembered by the Plainfield theatregoers, among whom she is a great favorite, as the piquant star of "The Slim Princess." It is safe to say that her performance in the "Caprices of Kitty," which is produced with all the attention to detail for which Bosworth showmanship is noted, will surpass all previous appearances on the screen. It will afford a bully evening's entertainment.

It might interest Plainfield screen devotees to know that Miss Janis is now at work on a new film in California which will be exhibited at the Astor Theatre in the near future. This film is said to be the best ever produced with Miss Janis as star.

Tomorrow Vera Fuller Mellish, the accomplished daughter of Fuller Mellish, the actor, will appear as star in "The Bond Woman," a powerful dramatic photoplay. Miss Mellish inherited all her famous parent's dramatic resource and should give a very creditable performance in this remarkable feature. Friday William H. Crane will appear in "David Harum," a comedy of rural life that is as refreshing as a breeze from the sea.

PROCTOR'S THEATRE

Today has been announced as the weekly ice cream day, portions of Ritz's delicious product to be distributed this afternoon at 4:30, and this evening at 8:30. Bear in mind that Proctor's Theatre is the only moving picture house in the city with his unique feature.

At 2 o'clock this afternoon, children galore gathered for the matinee show, as the great favorite actress Mary Pickford, was appearing in the old, yet ever new, story of "Cinderella." This production is a Paramount feature in four parts, and one that has attracted more audiences with varied ages than any other that is known to the moving picture world. Children, to be sure, take in this wonderful play, while the older folks like to view it for old times sake. Certainly as clean a production as is possible.

Those who can find the opportunity, either tomorrow afternoon or evening, should make it a point to visit Proctor's Theatre to witness Edward Abelles in "The Million," a four-part Paramount feature, the picturization of the play of which Henry Savage made such a success of a little more than a year ago. Laughter and mirth is the production of this picture.

For Friday there has been scheduled one of the most sensational feature dramas of the season, starring the celebrated "Vampire Woman," Theida Bara, star of "A Fool There Was," in "The Devil's Daughter." See this picture, and you behold one of the marvels of the age.

Y. W. C. A. NOTES

The Thursday night Bible class study will be held tomorrow night at the gardens of Mrs. Frederick Mead's home on East Front street. All who come are requested to bring their supper and meet at the association at 6:30 p. m. Suppers will be eaten in the gardens prior to the study. Miss Matilda Coddington will have charge of the class tomorrow.

The attention of the business girls of Plainfield is called to the Saturday night suppers served at the association at a nominal cost. Here any young woman who lives a distance from home can get wholesome food. The suppers are served on the rear piazza of the association.

THIRTEEN CASES OF MEASLES REPORTED

Board of Health Statistics Show Work Done During June.

Thirty-seven cases of communicable diseases were reported during the past month, according to the statistics presented at the July meeting of the Board of Health last night. They were as follows: Measles, 13; scarlet fever, 3; tuberculosis, 5; chicken-pox, 10; malaria, 2; mumps, 2; diphtheria, 1; German measles, 1.

In addition to the above there was one case of tubercular meningitis and one case of typhoid fever, both patients being non-residents. As the result of the inspection of dairies, many improvements have been made. Samples of milk have been collected and analyzed as usual.

There was an examination of thirty-four cultures, eighteen being for diphtheria, nine for tuberculosis, three for malaria and four for typhoid fever. Fourteen of those examined for diphtheria were negative and four questionable. Of the nine examined for tuberculosis eight were negative and one positive. Two of those examined for malaria were negative and one questionable and three of the typhoid specimens were negative and one questionable.

The inspector disinfected nineteen rooms in nine buildings and one carriage. The isolation ward of the hospital was also disinfected once. Inspections are being made from time to time of the swimming pool and constant improvement is apparent. Inspections are being made of all stable premises and notices on the prevention of fly-breeding are posted. Letters will be sent to all offenders and the Board hopes to have fly-breeding in the city lessened to a considerable extent this summer.

J. D. Loizeaux was given permission to re-open the "dump" located in rear of the houses on the southerly side of the Arlington avenue extension. This will only be open during the summer. Several applications for renewals of permits for barber shops and hairdressing establishments were granted. Walter C. Green Sr. was given a permit to [illegible] and George W. Jackson one to collect garbage. W. G. Hoar and J. D. Mueller were also given permission to collect junk.

These inspections were made during the month:

Milk supply, 84; food supply, 74; nuisances, 153; communicable disease, 42; disinfection, 222; plumbing, 142; general work, 258; total, 875.

PARALYSIS FATAL TO MRS. WM. REYNOLDS

Well Known Resident Passes Away at Her Home on Arlington Avenue.

While apparently in the best of health, Mrs. Elizabeth Reynolds, widow of William Reynolds, was stricken with paralysis yesterday morning and died at 2 o'clock in the afternoon. She was born in this city and had made her home here all her life, with the exception of a short time spent in Elizabeth after her marriage. At the time of the death of her husband she returned to Plainfield and had made her home with her son, W. A. Reynolds, of Arlington avenue.

Mrs. Reynolds was a member of Trinity Reformed church, taking an interest in all the activities of that church until the very last. She was especially active in the home department of the Sunday-school, in which she taught. She exerted a wide influence for good in the circle in which she moved and was held in high esteem by her neighbors and friends who mourn her loss. She possessed an exemplary Christian disposition and was a willing and earnest worker in whatever work she entered.

Beside the son with whom she lived, Mrs. Reynolds is survived by one other son, G. E. Reynolds, of East Orange. The funeral will be held at the late home tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock. Rev. J. Y. Broek, pastor of the Trinity Reformed church, will conduct the service. Burial will be in the Methodist cemetery on Plainfield avenue.

NEW JERSEY BUILDING—POPULAR AT THE FAIR

The New Jersey Building continues to be the most popular among the State buildings at the Panama-Pacific Exposition; its coziness and atmosphere of welcome make it a delightful resting place for visitors from all parts of the world as well as for the residents of New Jersey.

Among the New Jersey people registered during the past week at the building were the following from this city: Miss Clara L. Williams, H. B. Freeman and Mrs. Frederic Sandford.

DR. M'CREA OFF ON TRIP TO THE PACIFIC COAST

Rev. Dr. A. C. McCrea, formerly pastor of the First M. E. church in this city, and now pastor of the Emory M. E. church, Jersey City, left yesterday for a two months' vacation trip to the Pacific coast. He will not return to his pulpit until Sunday, September 12.

During his tour Rev. Mr. McCrea expects to spend some time with his mother and sister at Los Angeles.

The itinerary mapped out by Rev. Mr. McCrea includes stops at the expositions of both San Diego and San Francisco. From San Francisco Mr. McCrea will travel north, stopping at Portland, Ore., and Seattle, Wash. At Seattle a steamer will be taken to Vancouver and Rev. Mr. McCrea will return East over the Canadian Rockies as far as Minneapolis.

PLAINFIELD HIGH SCHOOL POOL A POPULAR FEATURE

The large swimming pool at the High School was thrown open to the public yesterday and will remain open during the entire summer. The various classes were well attended and there is every indication that there will be crowds at the High School every day, all eager to take a plunge.

Ralph Patch has charge of the pool for the season. A skilled swimmer will always be on hand to assist those who are in distress and to teach those who do not know how to swim. Special hours have been arranged for the men and boys, and also for the women and the girls. No boy who is under sixteen years of age may use the pool at night.

A schedule of the special hours arranged for men and boys follows: Monday, 9-11 a. m.; Tuesday, 2-4 p. m. and 7:30-9 p. m.; Wednesday, 9-11 a. m., 2-4 p. m.; Thursday, 7:30 to 8:30 p. m.; Friday, 9-11 a. m. and 8:30 to 9:30 p. m.; Saturday, 8:30 to 10 p. m.

The schedule for the girls and women is as follows: Monday, 1:30 to 3:30 p. m.; Tuesday, 9 to 11 a. m.; Thursday, 9 to 11 a. m.; Friday, 2 to 4 p. m.; Saturday, 9 to 10:30 a. m., and 7:30 to 8:30 p. m.

ENDEAVORERS HOLD WORLD CONFERENCE

15,000 Delegates Representing 100,000 Societies Gather in Chicago.

Chicago, July 7.—The world conference of Christian Endeavor workers, which opened brilliantly here this morning, has brought to Chicago 15,000 delegates representing 100,000 separate societies, and a membership of nearly 5,00,000. A review of the work in every land, plans for its further extension and the discussion of virtually every phase of religious activity will come before the big convention, which extends until next Monday.

The convention is the first world's meeting of the Endeavorers since 1909, when it met at Agra, India. There are present delegates from England, France, Spain, Italy, Persia, India, Siam, China, Japan, Australia, Africa and Latin America.

The main topics of the great convention are temperance, missions and peace. The great impetus given to temperance in European countries, due to the realization by governments of necessity in war, will grow stronger in peace, it is declared by the European delegates, and the back-bone of intoxication will be broken forever. The peace discussions will urge the early settlement of the great world-war and the taking of international precautions to prevent future wars.

Reports from the field, including many from the various countries involved in the war, will be presented on the closing day of the convention. The plan of the conference has been changed this year. There will be four simultaneous meetings, instead of a dozen small meetings.

The annual meeting of the trustees was held this afternoon. Tonight a rousing welcome meeting will be held, at which prominent men will speak. Although Rev. Francis E. Clark, founder of the Chrstian Endeavor movement has been ill, it is hoped that he will be present.

Among the features of the convention will be the appearance of "Billy" Sunday, who will hold evangelistic meetings in his unique style. Hon. William Jennings Bryan has also promised to come to address the convention on temperance.

Tomorrow afternoon an "All-Canadian Rally" will be held, when the speakers will be from Canada. On Thursday evening the annual address of President Clark will be read.

Denominational rallies will be held on Friday afternoon, and in the evening all denominations will get together for another big rally. On Saturday morning the Christian Endeavor Institute will be held, as well as the missionary and junior conferences.

Saturday afternoon will be an international field day, wherein the athletic prowess of the delegations will be tested on Stagg Field, at the University of Chicago.

Sunday morning there will be a decision and consecration service, and in the afternoon "Billy" Sunday will be heard. A women's meeting will be held also on Sunday afternoon, and Miss Anna A. Gordon, president of the W. C. T. U., will be the principal speaker.

The final day of the world conference will be ushered in by a sunrise consecration service on the lake front. In the afternoon a world-wide conference will be conducted, in which representatives of all nations will take part. The convention will come to a close on Monday evening with a memorial service in honor of the workers who have died during the past year.

MOTOR VEHICLE RECEIPTS SHOWING GREAT INCREASE

Trenton, July 7.—Collections made by the State motor vehicle department from January 1 to June 30 amounted to $857,154.30. Total receipts for the year of 1914 were $814,535.30. For the first six months of the present year the receipts of the department therefor exceed those for the entire preceding year by 42,619.

In the present year 63,412 cars have been registered and 76,240 drivers' licenses have been granted. The number of examinations for drivers' licenses in June exceeded all previous records, 6,249 applicants having been examined, of whom 483 were rejected.

MINING ROMANCES

Seekers After Gold Who Had Riches Thrust Upon Them.

"SWEDE LUCK" IN ALASKA.

Stories That Are Told of the Way Some Prospectors Stumbled Into Claims That Put Them on Easy Street. Good Fortune Plus Hard Work.

It is literally true that some men who went to the north had fortunes thrust upon them. There is Charley Anderson, who was prospecting on the Yukon. Shortly after the Klondike strike was made by George Mammack and Skookum Jim, Anderson, trail weary, ambled into the frontier Camp of Dawson—then known as Lousetown—from Circle City. He had developed a taste for a primitive beverage of local manufacture known as "hooch," and promptly proceeded to gratify it. When he came to he discovered that his alcoholic companions had gone through his clothes, extracted $800 and left in lieu thereof a deed to a claim on Eldorado creek, which was thought to have no other value except which pertains to a grazing for moose.

Anderson almost wept. It was true he was the owner of a location, but a claim isn't necessarily a mine, and also there is a lot of difference between a deed to a piece of frozen ground and $800 in real money, which was all he had possessed. But he was not bereft of credit. Taking the deed to a trader, he pledged it for a grubstake, which he hauled to the creek on a hand sled. He burned wood to thaw the frozen muck and discovered that the gravel underneath was thickly permeated with gold. The moose pasture proved to be worth more than $2,000,000. There are some wonderful real estate records in Alaska!

Depressed and discouraged because he had been unable to find values in a quartz mine which he had been sent to examine, John Treadwell sat in a log cabin hotel in Harrisburg, now Juneau, waiting for a steamship to take him back to San Francisco. French Pete Erussard drifted in and told Treadwell a hard luck story. Treadwell was sympathetic. The tale was well told; so well that he was induced to put up $500, taking therefor a deed to a half interest in a claim. Treadwell returned the following year and examined the property. Then he bought the other half and it became known as the Treadwell mine. It has produced more than $50,000,000, and there is sufficient ore blocked out to keep the big stamp mills working for many years.

Erik Lindblom went to Alaska on a whaling vessel—shanghaied from San Francisco, some people say. With Jafet Lindeburg and John Brynteson he discovered the Nome goldfields and laid the foundation for a big fortune.

Two of the richest placer claims in Western Alaska were traded for comparative trifles—one for a gasoline engine that wouldn't chug, and another for $30 and a bottle of brandy distilled from prune juice. There are thousands of similar instances, common in the history of every mining camp.

But there is another side to the story. Thousands of men in Alaska, with privation and hardship for their teammates, have toiled bravely and assiduously for many years and have failed to find the golden fleece. Perhaps they lacked what the north terms "Swede luck."

"Swede luck" is so called because many of the rich strikes have been made by Scandinavians. In Alaska every Scandinavian is a Swede. Personal observation, however, has shown me that "Swede luck" means hard work and enduring fortitude under adverse circumstances.

Several years ago at the mouth of a creek where a strike had been reported and an incipient stampede was in progress I met a prospector.

"Who made the strike?" I asked.

"Who do you think made the strike?" he countered disgustedly, as though I had propounded foolish question No. 4962. "Did you ever hear of anybody having luck in this darned country unless he was a Swede?"

I walked fourteen miles up that creek and found six holes to bedrock. Pay had been encountered in the sixth. Every shaft had been dug by the Swede who made the strike, and who, by the way, happened to be a Norwegian.—Sunset Magazine.

How Toucans Roost.

Nothing could be more eccentric to our eyes than the way in which toucans go to roost. The bird does not "tuck its head under its wing, poor thing!" and so settle down, but packs itself up in most orderly fashion. The tail is turned forward over the back, in the soft feathers of which the gigantic bill is hidden. Then the tail shuts down, all semblance of a bird is lost, and one can see nothing but a ball of feathers.—London Standard.

"He cleared the sill at a bound and vanished in the darkness!" related Romance, breathlessly.

"But," scoffed Realism, "only a moment ago he was riveted to the spot. Did he file the rivets?"

"Oh, no!" rejoined Romance, nothing daunted. "Fortunately it was only a small spot, so that by a superhuman effort he wrenched it loose and carried it along with him!"

HOW TO BECOME A CYNIC.

Trust everybody, and obey the Golden Rule implicitly.

Never refuse to make a loan.

Don't hurt anyone's feelings by saying, "No."

Give up your seat in a street-car to a "lady," and learn from her silence or otherwise that she isn't one.

If someone bumps into you on Broadway or in the Subway, stop and apologize.

Give your rival in love a chance to be alone with your girl once in awhile. Then spend two weeks' pay on a wedding-present for them.

Hunt for chances to do outside errands for your bosses. They will show their appreciation by giving you more of them to do.

Don't ask for a raise in salary; just wait for it.

Write a short story and send it to the magazines.

And, if you are not a Cynic when you get through doing these things, there is no hope for you—you are just a lovable old fool.

A FINE DAY'S FISHING.

The angler dreams he's catching pickerel
As fast as he can yank
The pole, and that they're flopping 'round pell-mell
Upon the breezy bank.

He sees the perch with shining silver scales
Disporting on the sod;
He sees great sunfish wag their slimy tails
While dangling from the rod.

He fondly thinks of many a pleasant dish,
And wakes with smiles elate,
To ascertain that not a single fish
Has nibbled at his bait.

But, all the same, in spirit he is glad,
For, by that tranquil lake,
A finer day's sport he's really had
Than if he'd been awake!

PHYSICIANS UNITE TO CARE FOR AGED

Geriatric Society to Study Diseases of Advancing Years.

PLANS TO MEET MONTHLY.

Care of Aged Involves Many Different Problems, Declares Secretary of New Society—Child Dependent Has World For Its Guardian—Aged Dependent Is Disowned by His Own.

To study senile conditions and causes, thereby deferring the process of age, the New York Geriatric society was recently formed by prominent physicians of New York. With the exception that many aged persons are known to suffer from hardening of the arteries, little more is known of the diseases of advanced life than fifty years ago.

This is the first society of its kind ever formed. It is the intention of its members to hold monthly meetings, at which papers dealing with the aged, their diseases and their care will be read and analyzed. The officers of the society are Dr. Robert Abrahams, president; Dr. Edward P. Swift, vice president, and Dr. I. L. Nascher, secretary.

"Enormous strides," said one of the officers of the society to a New York Herald reporter, "have been made in medicine in the last half century, but the diseases of advanced life, diseases of the heart and kidneys, diabetes and cancer are far more frequent now than then. There are numerous factors in the lives of the aged which make old age a hardship, yet which can be remedied. Heretofore there has been no organized movement to study senile conditions or to work for the welfare of the aged.

Old Men as Paupers.

"The new society will take up scientific study of senile conditions. We expect to arouse the public conscience to the general neglect of the aged."

In a paper recently published Dr. Nascher, the secretary of the new society, declares that the care of the aged involves many difficult problems. He says:

"Whatever advances have been made in the betterment of the aged have been incidental to the general progress of civilization and not to any direct effort to improve their mental, physical or material condition. The old man dependent upon the bounty of the community still goes to the workhouse or poorhouse, a pauper. He is treated as a pauper, lives as a pauper and dies as a pauper, unpitied, uncared for. The child dependent has the world for its guardian; the aged dependent is disowned by his own.

"It is but little better in the home. So long as the old man and the old woman are able to support themselves and look after their own welfare they are endured with more or less cheerfulness. Let them become dependents and they are at once an unwelcome burden. It is then noticed that the old man cannot accommodate himself to the new order of things and he is called 'old fashioned.' Owing to increased forgetfulness, he leaves his clothes on the chair and paper scraps on the floor, and the housewife calls him a nuisance. The old woman who adheres to her old ideas and decries modern dress customs and unconventionalities is 'cranky,' while if she adapts herself to modern ideas in dress and customs she is called 'giddy.'

"The family still looks after its aged members, though more often from a sense of duty or fear of condemnation than from gratitude or filial affection. The state looks after its dependents with pity for the helpless child in the asylum, with sympathy for the charity patient in the hospital, with indifference for the aged pauper in the almshouse.

"Those who have never given a thought to this subject cannot realize the utter neglect of the aged by the medical profession. There are but few physicians in this country who take any special interest in the aged or who make a special study of the senile organism. Not a single work on the subject has appeared in this country in thirty years, yet there are scores of French and German works on senile diseases."

URGES SANE FOURTH.

Head of Safety First Federation Would Bar Retail of Fireworks.

Darwin P. Kingsley, president of the Safety First Federation of America, has sent to the governors of all the states a letter urging measures in favor of a safe and sane Independence day celebration. He calls attention to the fact that on July 4 of last year there were forty persons killed and 1,466 seriously injured by fireworks and explosives, as compared to thirty-two killed and 1,131 injured on July 4 of the preceding year.

The letter urges that no permits to sell fireworks or explosives at retail be issued; that no permits should be issued for the sale of fireworks at wholesale, except for delivery outside of the jurisdiction where permit is issued; that the authorities, where they have the power, should for ten days prior to July 4 seize and destroy fireworks kept without a permit; that campaigns of publicity be waged and that the authorities lay in a supply of anti-tetanus vaccine for instant use for the prevention of lockjaw in the case of injuries.

SUMMER CLASSES HAVE BIG ROSTERS

Board of Education's Special Educational Privilege Has Become Popular.

With a large attendance the summer school for the grades opened in the Whittier School yesterday morning, the work being transferred to that institution from the High School building in acordance with the new departure of work to be experimented with this season. No classes in High School subjects are included in the routine, but children were received from the Fifth, Sixth, Seventh and Eighth grades. Those who failed to qualify for promotion to the High School are being given an opportunity to make up their work so that they will be prepared to enter the freshman class in the fall.

Children whose parents have moved into the city recently and who have not had an opportunity to obtain standing in the local schools, are being given optional opportunity to attend the summer classes, to take up work that will determine their position in September.

Out of town children who desire special coaching have been received and will pursue the course of study desired upon the payment of a fixed rate of tuition. The following teachers are in charge of the work: Mrs. Sarah L. Wardner, principal; the Misses Alys Trenbath, Mabel Trenbath, Alice Brick, Elsie Schmidt, Olive B. Griggs, Rita Pond and Nora M. Koons.

REV. AND MRS. MAGUIRE IN TOWN FOR A VISIT

Rev. and Mrs. Gabriel Reid Maguire, formerly of Plainfield, but now of Boston, dropped into town today to renew acquaintances. They made the trip here by automobile and were on their way to the seashore, where they will spend a short time.

Mr. Maguire was here long enough to say that the work at the Ruggles Street Baptist church, Boston, of which he is the pastor, is growing by leaps and bounds and that his trustees have found it necessary to erect a new building to accommodate the rapidly increasing Sunday-school.

PROFESSIONAL MEN LIABLE TO FINES FOR DELINQUENCY

Fines of $50 each may be imposed upon several hundred druggists, dentists and tobacco dealers, because they failed to pay the required war tax upon narcotics in their possession. According to the act of Congress, the taxes were due on or before July 1, and no extension of time has been granted.

Deputy Collector of Internal Revenue Charles Levering today stated that many of the professional men and merchants affected by the new law in this district have neglected to pay their assessments. It was thought that the government would allow a few days of grace for the benefit of the delinquents, but the Washington authorities did not issue such an order.

Just what action the government intends to take against the non-payers is not known. The war tax statute assesses tobacco dealers $2.40 for every six months, while the druggists, dentists and doctors are required to pay larger amounts.

LAW MERGING DEPARTMENTS TO BE ATTACKED SEPT. 22

Trenton, July 1.—The validity of the bill merging the bureau of industrial statistics with the Department of Labor will be argued before the Supreme Court September 22. In the meantime testimony will be taken as to the manner in which the measure passed the Legislature.

The order for review was signed by Chief Justice Gummere yesterday following an application before the entire Supreme Court bench by Martin P. Devlin, representing former Senator George E. Low, director of the bureau, and Jamea T. Morgan, chief clerk. The case will be heard by Chief Justice Gummere and three associate justices, to be named by him, the procedure being identical with that followed in the review of the grade crossing and other bills.

In making his application yesterday Mr. Devlin said his clients had reason to believe the consolidating law was not duly passed by both houses of the Legislature or duly approved, as required by the Constitution of this State. He showed that on January 12 there was introduced Senate bill No. 5, entitled "an act creating a department to be known as the 'Board of Labor and Industry,' and vesting therein all the powers and duties now devolved, by law, upon the Department of Labor and bureau of industrial statstics."

OFF FOR SAN FRANCISCO.

Dr and Mrs. P. B. Cregar and Mr. and Mrs. Frank H. Smith, of this city, have gone to the San Francisco Exposition. They will be away five or six weeks. Dr. Cregar returned directly from an automobile trip which took him to Pittsburg, Altoona and other points in that section of the country.

A WOMAN'S BACK

The Advice of This Plainfield Woman Is Of Certain Value.

Many a woman's back has many aches and pains.

Ofttimes 'tis the kidneys' fault.

That's why Doan's Kidney Pills are so effective.

Many Plainfield women know this.

Read what one has to say about it:

Mrs. O. C. Moore, 57 Manning avenue, Plainfield, says: "I endured much misery from backache, caused by my kidneys. Many nights I was unable to rest at all and in the morning my limbs were so stiff and sore that I could hardly get out of bed. Whenever I caught the least cold, it settled on my kidneys and any strain on my back made the aches and pains worse. I was treated by physicians, but their medicine didn't help me and it was not until I got Doan's Kidney Pills at Randolph's drug store, that I had any hope of getting rid of the trouble. They made me feel like a different person and I have never had any serious trouble since."

Price 50 cents, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mrs. Moore had. Foster-Milburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y.—Adv.

RECEIVER'S SALE.

In pursuance of an order of the Court of Chancery made and dated on the 29 day of June, 1915, in a cause there pending, wherein James Kerney, Receiver of the Inter-State Telephone and Telegraph Company of New Jersey, is complainant, and the Elizabeth Telephone Company is defendant, I James Kerney, the Receiver heretofore appointed by the Said Court in said cause, for the said Elizabeth Telephone Company, will expose for sale at public vendue on Thursday, the twenty-ninth day of July, 1915, at the hour of three-thirty o'clock in the afternoon of said day, at the office of the Inter-State Telephone and Telegraph Company of New Jersey, No. 18 South Stockton Street, in the City of Trenton, County of Mercer, and State of New Jersey.

All of the assets, property and effects, including the franchises of the said defendant company, the same being mentioned and described as follows, to wit:

All that certain underground conduit system located in the City of Elizabeth, County of Union and State of New Jersey, which consists of 52,706.4 trench feet of subway, more or less, and contains 238 set duct feet of vitrified clay conduit with 468.4 feet of laterals in connection therewith, 159 brick manholes located in the City of Elizabeth, and 1,125 feet of 25 pair lead covered cable, 2,000 feet of 50 pair lead covered cable, and 1,200 feet of 25 pair lead covered cable.

Together with one General System switchboard equipped with 100 lines, one operator's chair, one table, one clock, three magneto telephone sets and wires for connecting the same.

And also all franchises, traffic agreements, operating contracts, and all other property, real and personal of whatsoever character and wheresoever situate, belonging to the said defendant company.

Ten per cent. of the purchase money will be required to be paid by the successful bidder when the property is struck off, and the balance must be paid upon the confirmation of the sale and the delivery of the deed or deeds therefor.

Further details as to the description, etc., of the above mentioned property may be obtained upon application to the undersigned Receiver of the Company. The sale, when made, will be subject to confirmation by the Court of Chancery. Other conditions of sale will be made known at the time of the sale.

STOPPING LEAKS.

Evidently Trentonians see advantages in Commission Government. The Times of that city calls attention to one among the many which have been gained there, when it points out that there has been a saving of between $18,000 and $20,000 annually in the cost of pumping and distributing the water supply. For years it was realized by the Board of Water Commissioners that Trenton was daily using many millions of gallons of water more than other cities of the size.

The great waste was ascribed to the carelessness and recklessness of the consumers, and a large part of it was due to that cause, but the experiences of the past two years have made it plain that leaking mains were largely responsible. Commissioner Fell, soon after taking charge of the Street and Water Department, began a preliminary investigation that has been productive of such splendid results.

There have been times when the daily output of water in the city ran up to 26,000,000 gallons. Through the use of the pitometer and by stopping the leaks this has been reduced to about 15,000,000 gallons, and the necessity for installing meters—which for a time appeared to be imperative—has been at least postponed if not entirely obviated.

By improved and business-like methods of financiering, the prompter collection of taxes, and raising a sufficient revenue to meet the expenditures, a stop has been put to the great leak that was evidenced by the piling up of bonded and floating debts that required larger sums every succeeding year to meet the interest charges. The taxpayers have reason to be gratified at the saving that is being effected by the commission.

A big, broad-minded, patriotic and brave citizen of Plainfield sent a letter to the Press for publication last week, in which he took the attack on the Pillar of Fire as an excuse for criticising the police department, fire department and other public service. He even dragged in the real estate market, but unfortunately he was not the kind of a hero who would sign his name for publication, although he did let us know who he was. The absence of the signature demonstrated that he was not a regular reader of the Press, but he did not hesitate to try to use our columns to "grind his axe." So that there might be no misunderstanding we wrote to him, suggesting that while we had not the slightest sympathy with what he said, we would print the letter if he signed his name, but he has thus far failed to appear and do so. Plainfield can afford to get along without people of this character. The only persons who do a community good, are those who, when they criticize are ready to come forward with a remedy for that which they think is not right. While we have often repeated it, we wish to call the attention of our readers to the fact that any letter, not libellous, which is submitted to us for publication will appear, provided the name of the writer appears in the city directory.

The Paterson Call gives some good advice when it warns its readers to be careful about what they drink during the hot weather. There is too much tendency on the part of everyone, young and old, to make a rush for the nearest soda fountain, or bar, or pump, or any old place where something to cool the insides can be procured. All must remember that whiskey clogs the valves, and beer the wheels; lemonade, ginger ale, buttermilk, even iced tea, as the Call says "tend to keep the boilers from burning properly," and it adds the following sage remarks: "The simplest and plainest laws of health are outraged every day by the average man. Did Adam smoke? Did Eve wear a corset? Did the children of Israel make for a beer garden after crossing the Red Sea? Did Rebecca chew chocolate bon bons and ice cream and call for soda water? Adam was the first man and was made perfect from head to heel—how long would he remain so after eating pie before going to bed? Suppose he had slept in a bedroom five by seven, with the window closed down, the door shut and two dogs under the bed? Suppose Eve had laced, worn tight shoes and sat up all hours of the night, eating chicken salad and welsh rarebit and trying to keep on four pounds of dead people's hair!"

We hope that the generous readers of the Press who in past seasons have sent contributions to aid the work of the King's Daughters Day Nursery will not forget that this admirable cause is just as much in need of funds this year as has been the case in the past. Hundreds of Plainfielders who are enjoying themselves at the seashore and in the mountains these warm days could brighten the lives of the little ones if they would send along a check to be applied to the work. There have been all sorts of appeals during the past year—probably more than have before been made in the life time of any of us, but this one appeal for help at home touches every Plainfielder. Every dollar is used to make the lives of the little children easier in the hot weather. Send your checks to the Daily Press. We will see to it that the money reaches the proper person.

The suffragists are taking Senator Martine to task because he has used his franking privilege to send anti-suffrage literature through the mails. Why this should be we fail to understand, as the franking privilege is so generally abused that the Senator, in using it to help the side he favors, only sticks to a custom generally the practice at Washington. But if suffrage passes, we hate to think what the new voters will do to our senior Senator in 1916 when he seeks re-election.

'Twas surely a safe and sane Fourth (and Fifth) in Plainfield. Only one accident reported, and that a minor one.

So long as this weather keeps up, we submit that there is no better summer resort than Plainfield.

A QUERY

Question.—In passing through the streets of Plainfield while the city was decorated for the Independence Day celebration, I was impressed by the variety of ways in which the American flag was hung. In one of our stores a show case was draped with a flag, the stars of which were down. Is there not a definite rule governing the suspension of our nation emblem? O. W. K.

Answer.—The proper way to hang an American flag was told in the Daily Press of Thursday, July 1, as follows: No flag should be left hanging outdoors after sunset. The blue field and stars should always be at the top and to the hanger's left as one looks from the balcony from which he is hanging it and to the right of anyone looking from the street toward the house. This rule applies whether the flag is hung horizontally or vertically. It is against the law to place any advertisement on the flag.

amusement centre, intends having baseball leagues, tennis tournaments, track activities, gymnastic stunts and all other feats that go to make up an enjoyable summer.

The Bryant School playground housed 175 children in the morning and about 150 in the afternoon. Miss Harriet E. Moe, supervisor at this centre and pioneer in the local playground movement, was highly pleased with not only the number of children present yesterday, but with the faultless manner in which they conducted themselves. Miss Moe stated that she did not have to censure one of the youngsters at the opening. When a Daily Press reporter arrived at the Bryant School playground he noted immediately that a fence separated one section of the ground from the other and that part of the apparatus was situated in one yard and part in the other, making it very difficult for Miss Moe to keep an eye on all that transpired in both sections. By removing the swings and slides to the left section of the yard, this difficulty would be overcome. The Franklin School playground afforded amusement for 200 kiddies in the morning and for 250 in the afternoon. At this yard, as at all of the others, games and dancing constituted the day's activity. Miss Frances Nischwitz is in charge here and has for her assistant, Miss Louise B. Franke. Miss Helen C. George, supervisor at St Mary's School, reported that she had cared for 125 children in the morning and that 200 were on hand in the afternoon. Miss Ruth Wean, stationed at Irving School, had from 150 to 200 youngsters under her supervision during the day. Miss Wean is ably assisted in the performance of her duties by Miss Marion Mair.

By the first of the week the work that resembles play will commence. This consists of making baskets and various useful ornaments out of straw and like material. It has in former years proven itself very valuable to the child in later life.

ENTERS PLEA OF NOT GUILTY

the nature of a number of affidavits. Mernagh threatened to shoot the first man who "squealed" on him. The accused patrolman appeared in person before the board last night, and heard the charges read to him. He entered a complete denial. Section eight of the city ordinance entitled, "An ordinance to create and define the duties of the Board of Police and a police force," covers Mernagh's case in its present stage of development, and reads as follows. "The Common Council upon receiving the complaint shall cause not less than three days' notice to be given to the person charged, of the time and place, when and where the Common Council shall proceed to publicly examine into such charges and to afford said person every reasonable opportunity to make his defense if he has or chooses to make any. At the time and place so fixed for such public examination and trial, the public examination and trial shall be had before the Common Council by the oral examination of witnesses. It shall be discretionary with the Common Council whether to permit the defense to be conducted by counsel." Mernagh was appointed to the police force during Mayor G. W. V. Moy's regime and has been a patrolman up to the present time.

Other matters taken up during the lengthy session of the police board last night prior to the monthly meeting of the Common Council included the adoption of an interim order pending a complete rivision of the police department regulations. This new code assigns the captain and lieutenant to outdoor day detective duty and roundsman and detective service; alternating monthly in regular order. The effect of this interim order, under the new police ordinance, and for the purpose of receiving better efficiency in the department, is to have a superior officer on duty at headquarters at all times, and also to give experience in plainclothes work to all of the higher officers. The order is subject to change at the discretion of the board, as the new ordinance does not undertake to assign the duties of the members of the force in detail.

Former Mayor G. W. V. Moy has been retained by Patrolman Mernagh to represent him in his defense of the charges preferred aginst him by Police Chief Kiely.

PLANT GUILD MEETING.

The Plant, Flower and Fruit Guild will hold a monthly meeting in the Friends' Meeting House, at Watchung avenue and Third street, Friday evening, July 9, at 8 o'clock. Rev. Dr. Birney S. Hudson, pastor of the Park Avenue Baptist church, will deliver a short address. All are cordially invited to attend.

TO RESTRICT USE OF SEWER LINES

After Twenty Years Plainfield has Its First Set of Regulations Passed.

NEED AN URGENT ONE

Street Commissioner Gavett's Men Find a Unique Collection of Articles in Culverts—Proper Traps Have Not Been Provided.

Although Plainfield has used its present sewerage system for twenty years the Common Council, at its July session last night, passed the first set of regulations governing the use of the same. Heretofore the restrictions have been of a general nature and that they were unsatisfactory is evidenced by the frequent reports of conditions made by Street Commissioner Andrew Gavett.

The Council, last night, adopted on final reading Councilman Francis J. Blatz's ordinance relative to the use of sewers and the regulations to be enforced in making connections. Hereafter individuals wishing to have connections made must first secure authority from Andrew Gavett, the city engineer, and a fixed rate has been named for all such permits.

That there is an urgent need for proper traps for sewers in East and West Second streets has been evidenced by the results of the cleaning which the mains have been subjected to during the past few weeks by the sewer employes, a unique collection of articles having been found stored in the culverts. According to Street Commissioner Andrew Gavett the conditions found are produced largely by garages and stables along the route of the sewers in question and he previously recommended to Chairman Francis J. Blatz, of the councilmanic street committee, that restrictions be made to control the use of sewers. The new ordinance fixes penalties for the wrong use of the sewers and will probably go a long way toward correcting the existing evils. A list of the articles found in the sewers by employes follows:

"Coat hooks, screens, strainers, beer bottles, medicine bottles, pens, door knobs and chanks, screen door springs, knives and forks, piece 1 inch pipe 5 inches long, bicycle bells, eyeglasses, 22 and 32 cartridges and empty shells, watch chains, folding rules, necklaces, coal, broken dishes, tooth brushes, bolts, nuts, iron and tin toys, nails, hammock hooks, electric fuse plugs, flasks (one filled), pencils, coins, hinges, clam and oyster shells, tea and table spoons, ornaments, 3-inch iron discs, pocket knives, watches, watch fobs, rings, leather belt, pipes, broken glassware, broken pieces 4-inch C. I. pipe, bones, trowels, false teeth, sink brushes, belt buckles, head of small hammer, vegetables, keys, rubber tub stoppers, razor and cold chisels.

FIVE REASONS WHY ONE MAN BELIEVES IN WOMAN SUFFRAGE

Norman Hapgood, the editor of Harper's Weekly, is a firm believer in woman suffrage. He has drawn up a list of five reasons why he believes in it and has published them in the following statement:

"I think woman suffrage a very important reform to bring about for many reasons, of which the following are, perhaps, the most important:

"First.—It is impossible to carry out frankly and honestly the principles of democracy when half the race is arbitrarily excluded from power.

"Second.—Women are more interested than men in a number of aspects of life that particularly require attention from legislatures, courts and voters.

"Third.—Laboring men have gained a great deal from the vote in specific advantages, and the same thing would be true of the women.

"Fourth.—Women who belong to the leisure and semileisure class would have their thoughts turned into channels more profitable to themselves as well as to the community.

"Fifth.—Since steam and machinery took charge of industry, the interests of the old fashioned home have been carried into the factory and the community, and those interests which have always been looked upon as special to women are no longer concentrated in the household, but have become the leading public problems of the time."

Massachusetts Women's Clubs For Suffrage.

At its recent annual convention the Massachusetts convention of Women's clubs indorsed woman suffrage by a vote of more than two to one. Massachusetts is the twenty-ninth state federation of clubs to follow the lead of the biennial, which last year indorsed woman suffrage.

West Jersey Presbytery For Suffrage.

The following resolution was carried at the West Jersey Presbytery in session at Holly Beach:

Resolved, That we approve and indorse the present campaign to secure an amendment to the state constitution to give the vote to women.

The Real Dual Alliance.

Israel Zangwill, suffragist and novelist, says, "Every married couple ought to be a dual alliance, and it is self evident that the alliance can do more when both parties to it are strong than when one is a weakling."

A suffragist who was to write a paper on notable women recently turned to the encyclopedia to see what it had to say about Eve. What was her wrath to read there, "For Eve, see Adam!"

Campaign Song.

The anti tell of awful things
The woman's vote will do;
Our western men must suffer much
If anti tales are true.

Four million voting western men
Have set their women free;
They do not fear their sister's vote,
Then why, my friends, should we?
Then why, my friends, should we?

In anti tales of dire results
You never chance on one
That gives the proof of awful things
The woman's vote has done.

Those western men see good results
In what their women do;
They do not fear their sister's vote,
Then why, my friend, should you?
Then why, my friend, should you?

They gave the vote, state after state,
And always more and more,
Because they saw how well it worked
In the suffrage state next door.

Four million voting western men
Have set their sisters free.
Our women are as good as theirs—
And so next fall will we!
And so next fall will we!

—The Forerunner.

WASHINGTONIANS PROTEST.

Say Women Can Be Relied on to Use Ballot Wisely.

Judge William H. Snell's charge, in a Massachusetts paper, that the women of Washington have not made a success as voters has brought lively protests from that state.

Senator George U. Piper of Seattle, Wash., was both indignant and amused to find upon the occasion of a visit to New York that the record of the women of his state had been belittled by Judge Snell. "I could name not one but fifty instances to prove that the women can be relied on to use the vote for the good of the state and humanity. It's to the women one must look for help every time in trying to put through legislation of a social and humane nature. For instance, it was the women of Washington who were my reliance when I was trying to force the passage of the women's and minors' minimum wage law."

Senator Piper declares that the best reasons for woman suffrage in Washington are the opponents of suffrage. He says every white slaver in the state is against it; every exploiter of woman and child labor is against it; every opponent of compensation law is against it; every liquor dealer, distiller, brewer, dive keeper and hanger on is against it. He says it was the suffrage that opened the eyes of the supreme court and the legislature to what was due women. He says woman suffrage has brought power to the home and that 90 per cent of the men of Washington would as soon sacrifice their obligation to statehood as to deny suffrage to women.

The Woman's Club of Tacoma likewise refutes Judge Snell's statements in a crisp presentation of facts. "Having had but two representatives, the women can hardly be held responsible for all the freak legislation," writes Martha B. Gaynor, the club's president, "and in the face of such criticism as Judge Snell chooses to give us it is encouraging to know that we are responsible for strenuous and insistent work for prohibition, food sanitation, regulation of labor conditions for women and other constructive measures."

The Stay at Homes.

The antis are forever conjuring up a picture of homes deserted, children neglected and husbands unfed and uncomforted. But put the shoe on the other foot and it doesn't pinch at all. Does the average man's business suffer through his attention to his political interests? When his wife and children miss him from his place at the fireside, how often is his absence due to the fact that he is the voting member of the household? How much time does he spend in a year on the duties of citizenship? Let us be liberal and say a half hour to register, a half hour at the primary and another half hour at the polls on election day. Perhaps one man in ten devotes an evening or two in an exciting campaign to political meetings. Anything more than this is the exception. If a man gets his politics, as most of us do, by means of the written and not the spoken word, it is a process which does not take him out o' nights.

And so, we fancy, it will be with the women. It is not the ballot box, but lobster palaces, tango parties and white lights that lure the gadabouts. As for the others, it won't take them any longer to vote than it takes the men.—New York Evening Sun.

United Mine Workers For Suffrage.

The United Mine Workers of America in all their conventions for years past have by unanimous vote indorsed woman suffrage, and we propose in the future, as in the past, to do everything we can to advance this cause. We feel that in this day of woman and child labor it is essential, if the woman is to be protected in the factory and the workshop, that she have the power of the ballot to remedy the wrongs under which she labors.—Frank J. Hayes, Vice President United Mine Workers of America.

MANY JUNIOR BALL STARS WILL PERFORM THIS YEAR ON PARKER FIELD DIAMONDS

Parker Field, the scene of so many hard-fought baseball and football games, track meets and tennis tournaments, was opened for the summer yesterday, about three hundred boys turning out to enjoy the sports scheduled for the day. Three baseball leagues were formed, Senior, Middle and Junior, being the names given them. Any boy whose age does not exceed fourteen years may try for a berth in the Junior League, while anyone between fourteen and sixteen may try for a Middle League berth. There is no age limit to the Senior League.

Although there were not over ten baseball managers present, many others have signified their intention of placing a team in one of the leagues. The managers of the Laurels, Red Stars, St. Mary's Cadets, Laramie Parks, Peerless A. C., Liberty A. C. and Emerald A. C. have declared, at one time or another, that they would be on hand when the schedule started.

Three new baseballs, a new major league mask and a regulation size catcher's mitt have been added to the playground's equipment. Games are played daily, each league staging about three contests a week. Several local baseball stars have been members of the leagues at this popular playground and there is going to be a myriad of stars developed this year, if the plans of the supervisor, George W. Wriston, work out.

Any boy who holds the reins of a local ball team can place his team in one of the leagues by consulting Mr Wriston, who can be found at the playground daily except Sunday. Entries close shortly.

SPORT BRIEFS

President Gilmore of the Federal League, suspended Manager Fielder Jones and Player Ernie Johnson, of the St. Louis Feds, on account of their trouble with Umpire Howell last Monday.

Pitcher McCabe and Catcher Holmes released by Boston Red Sox to the Lynn team, of the New England League.

Freddie Reece, the Brooklyn bantamweight, knocked out young German in the tenth round at the Broadway Sporting Club, last night.

Jimmy Clabby, who was to have met Soldier Bartfield at Brighton Beach on Saturday night, asked for a postponement so as to give him more time to get in condition.

Al Reich and Jim Savage meet in main bout of 10 rounds at the St. Nicholas this evening.

The war will not interfere with the playing of soccer football in Great Britain, which begins on September 1.

Disbrow, the winner of the 100-mile auto race at Brighton Beach last Monday night, will be an entrant in next Saturday's race.

Pitcher Coombs, of the Brooklyn Nationals, strained a tendon in his left leg while pitching yesterday, and will be out of the game for a week or ten days.

Oneale plays Lovibond in the semi-final in North Side championship tennis match.

The Brooklyn Nationals sell Schmutz to Salt Lake City club and purchased Smyth from Fort Wayne club, of the Central League.

AMATEUR BALL JINGLES

The Netherwood and Clinton Avenue ballists certainly staged one swell conflict in the afternoon section of the Independence Day double bill. The argument lasted for ten innings and was anybody's up until the very last minute. Clark, who was on the mound for the East End aggregation, proved his worth by holding the heavy hitting Clintons to five bingles.

The Tabs did not play at all on Monday, Jup Pluvius and the First Baptist manager deciding that it was not proper to indulge in an exhibition of the national pastime on that day. The Baptist leader gave as his reason for calling off the afternoon's melee, the fact that the field was too wet. However, it is claimed that the lot bore a strong resemblance to a desert.

The Hope-Saurer argument on Soccer Field was some game, the churchboys finally walking off with a 2 to 0 decision. Jimmy Montross, the former Pet, tried a "come-back" stunt and got away with it. Gleason, the Saurer "find," again pitched a great game, but in this case Youth bowed to Age.

In speaking of Gleason we'd like to ask where this Hercules got the nickname of "Babe."

"Tush" Jaeger pulled some rare stunts around short for the Saurer team on Monday, nabbing several hot ones straight from the bats of the opposition. Might be well for some of those other Saurerites to fracture a collar-bone.

Like Matty, Britt Martin has been delegated to the scrap heap, time and again, but his performance in recent games indicates that he could more easily step forward than backward.

"Red" Wilson, of the Saurer combine, certainly is meeting the pill these days. Getting six hits in two games is no mean accomplishment.

Some pitchers assume great responsibility when they get in the heated part of the fray. A. Stebor, flinger for the Highland A. C., besides holding his opponents, the White Sox, to six hits in a recent battle, obtained three smashes himself.

Gunzelman, the Clinton Avenue player, is out after the title of the leading base-stealer in the league. He'll get it, too, if he repeats his performance of Monday, when he stole three bases on "Hub" Stine, the Baptist backstop.

SPORTING NOTES

It is just a year ago today that Freddy Welsh won the world's lightweight championship from Willie Ritchie in a London prize ring. The followers of the fight game are demanding that the Englishman get busy and defend his honors against the three American aspirants, Charley White, Willie Ritchie and Joe Welling. Welsh has made a stack of money, for his title was an excellent asset as a drawing card. Now the fans are demanding that he go over the 20 round route against the choice of his American rivals, and give the sport fans a run for their money. Welsh has had numerous bouts, but they were all short ones and in them he showed nothing alarming in the way of speed or generalship. He is well liked, is heady and resourceful, but after a year of championship honors, it is decreed that it is up to him to take his chances in defense of his title.

Dario Resta, the speed pilot who lowered all records between 200 and 500 miles at Chicago, will enter the Twin City 500-mile race set for September 4 at Minneapolis. Another big purse of $50,000 has been hung up there.

Joe Tinker, the fighting leader of the Chicago Whales, is putting over the real thing in baseball, despite his 35 years, and, like his old partner, Johnny Evers, is still shining more brightly than the youngsters.

The postponed bout between Al Reich and Jim Savage will come off at New York tonight.

Boxing will open at St. Paul next Monday night with a fast mill between Tom Gibbons and Billy Miske.

The next big rowing event is the championship regatta at Springfield, Mass., scheduled for August 13 and 14.

The Pacific tennis stars are entered in the coast championships, which will begin Saturday on the Exposition courts.

The golfers are in their glee over good weather during the early summer, and the game has had a big impetus.

The motor speeders will be seen at Burlington, Ia., on Friday, and on Sunday Milwaukee holds a 100-mile race.

The New England League has shifted its Manchester, N. H., team to Greenfield, Mass., owing to poor attendance in the mill city.

The auto races are not harming the horse meets so far this year, for the ponies have never been so popular as they are this year.

CITY LEAGUE HAS LIVELY SESSION

Many Matters in Dispute Are Settled After An Animated Discussion.

SCHEDULE IS CHANGED

Hope Gets Extra Game From Baptists and Will Play Saturday's Contest at Home—T. A. B. to Play Off Holiday Game with Baptists.

Many matters of dispute which were brought before the weekly meeting of the City Amateur Baseball League, held at the office of the Plainfield Daily Press last night, made the session a lively one and showed that while some of the individual clubs have had their bumps, the organization is far from being a "dead" one.

Although there had been some question whether the Saurer team should be given last Saturday's game with Netherwood, because it appeared on the field with only six players, and found it necessary to pick three from the crowd. Manager Coughlin, of the latter club, agreed to let the contest count as a win for Manager Martin's aggregation. Mr. Martin explained that at the time he was willing to forfeit the game to Netherwood, but it was thought best to play and not disappoint the large crowd present.

The failure of the Baptist team to show up for Monday afternoon's game with T. A. B., caused a great deal of discussion, and the majority of the league representatives agreed that the latter club had received a rough deal as Manager James J. Moynihan had made every possible effort to learn whether the Baptists were going to play and failed.

Manager Dan. Randolph, of the Baptist team, explained that he was partly to blame, although he had sent word to the T. A. B. management that he would be unable to play as some of his players had gone out of town, thinking there would be no game. The matter in dispute was referred to the executive committee and it was voted that the unplayed game be played later on. Manager Moynihan voted against this proposition. It was decided that hereafter when there is any question of a game being played that the managers of the teams notify the president of the league by 1 o'clock of the afternoon of the game.

Thomas Heron, who represented the Hope team, said that his club objected to playing on the T. A. B. field on Saturday, as it had played there last week and thought that the contest should be staged on Hope field. At first Manager Moynihan protested against any change, but later he agreed to play at Hope field, and in return the T. A. B.'s will get a game with Hope on its grounds. Another slight arrangement in the schedule will give Hope an extra game with the Baptists on the former's field.

Secretary Dan. Randolph reported that Spalding was willing to give a silver trophy or individual watch fobs, suitably inscribed, to the winning team, and this offer was accepted, after a committee of two comprising Managers Martin and Coughlin was appointed to wait on Harry Dreier and see if he would offer a pennant to the champion team. Leo Slonim previously offered a silver cup to the winners, this offer being accepted.

Several changes in the rosters of the clubs were reported. Ashley Burner, Ralph Smalley and W. Townley were posted as members of the Baptist team in place of H. Terry, Clark and Mills. Anderson was dropped from Netherwood and Hirsch put on the list. Dorman and Peacock were dropped from Clinton Avenue and the names of William Generick and Wall added. "Cliff" Randolph was added to Hope's list. Saurer dropped Stevens and Moulton and added Henry Betzenberger, Hoffmeister and Lester Lyon. The T. A. B. team reported no changes.

Inasmuch as Hope and T. A. B. will play on Hope field Saturday, Manager Martin announced last night that he would play his game on Saturday with Clinton Avenue either on Parker Field or the Netherwood grounds. The place will be announced tomorrow.

MAX MARSTON ENTERED.

After a short rest, Maxwell R. Marston, Cranford's champion golfer and New Jersey title-holder, will compete in the tenth annual metropolitan open golf championship next Thursday and Friday at the Fox Hill club, Staten Island. Sixty stars will complete and out of that number only three are amateurs, Marston being one. Marston is paired with Herbert Martin in Thursday's play and they are scheduled to start at 8:45 o'clock in the morning.

You need not keep "on your hands," to your present disadvantage, any real estate that is "good enough to advertise."

CHAMPIONS TOO SPEEDY FOR LOCAL TENNIS STARS

Rahway, July 7.—Contrary to expectations, the weather cleared Monday afternoon sufficiently to dry out the Ilderan tennis court and the finals in the men's doubles were played, with Lindsay Dunham and Harold Throckmorton defeating Hazlet Glazebrook, of Elizabeth, and Van Deventer, of Plainfield. It was some contest, too, and every minute of it was real hard play. All four men were in top-notch form, but the superior placing of Dunham and the hard smashing work of Throckmorton brought home the victory. The scores were 6-3, 11-9, 6-3.

After the match dancing was enjoyed. No arrangements have been made as yet for future matches, but the success of the first was so marked that the courts will not be idle many evenings.

RECALCITRANT BENNY KAUFF REPENTS HIS HASTY ACTION

Peace reigns again in the camp of the Brooklyn Federal League team. Benny Kauff, the centre fielder, who first caused the Federal League a lot of worry when he jumped to the Giants, and after he had been chased back into the "outlaw" fold, broke forth again with a complaint about financial dealings and vowed he would never again play with the Brookfeds, again has become penitent and as soon as his ten days' suspension expires will don a Brookfed uniform and give the club "his best services."

Business Manager Dick Carroll stated yesterday that Benny was reporting at the ball park every day, and when the club leaves on Thursday night on the Western trip Kauff will go along. "The financial difficulty which caused Kauff to desert has been satisfactorily adjusted," said Mr. Carroll. Benny refused to remain with the Brookfeds after $500 had been deducted from his salary on July 1 in accordance with the terms of his contract.

TOMMY MULLIN HAD A BIG WEEK END CLOUTING THE BALL

Tommy Mullin, the ex-Saurer player, had a busy week-end. On Sunday he caught for the Franklins and rapped out a pretty single. He handled seven chances in the field and made only one error. On Monday afternoon Tommy rendered his services to the Rahway nine, in its argument with the St. Anthonys. The Rahway team won by the score of 6 to 4, Mullin being responsible for two of his team's tallies, stealing home once, after having got on by clouting a terrific double. In the seventh Erxleben sent a two-bagger to centre and Mullin followed with a single, scoring the Elizabeth boy.

On Saturday, Tommy broke up a game at Rahway by rapping out a three-bagger with the bases filled, Rahway defeating Bloomingdale by a score of 4 to 3.

"MIDGE" KLINE ANXIOUS FOR CHANCE TO PUT STARS OUT

The management of the Royal Giants has negotiations under way for a return match between his combination and the local All Stars, on Saturday. This team defeated the Royals on Monday 5 to 2, but "Midge" Kline says that the errors committed by his catcher, Johnson, were responsible for the defeat. He intends securing Tommy Washington, of the Newark Giants, to handle the receiving job when the two teams meet again.

The conflict will be staged on Parker Field providing it can be secured for that date.

Kline also states that he thinks a match between his team and the local Tabs to be played at Avon Oval some Sunday, would be a great attraction.

BEARCATS INDULGED IN A MERRY-GO-ROUND ON BASES

The Bearcats, led by Bill Ransome, defeated Mills Barnes' Eagle A. C., on Monday afternoon, by the amazingly large score of 31 runs to 0. "Pop" Johnson, an Eagle, was knocked out of the box after an avalanche of bingles had been made by the Bearcats.

The batteries were as follows: Bearcats—Howard Craft and Clyde Cox; Eagle A. C.—Ben Johnson, A. Maiden and William Dixon. Umpire—"Pet" Robinson.

NEW JUNIOR OUTFIT.

A new juvenile ball team has been organized. It is the Peerless A. C. and is managed by Francis A. Connolly, of West Sixth street. This combination will probably enter the Junior League at Parker Field.

O'LOUGHLIN OUT FOR "MET" GOLF TITLE

Plainfield Country Club Star to Compete Against Best in District.

Tomorrow and Friday, Marty O'Loughlin, the Plainfield Country Club professional, will play for the metropolitan golf championship over the Fox Hills Golf Club links. From present indications, Marty will be the only local title seeker.

The metropolitan championship, second only to the national open championship held at Baltusrol on June 17, will attract most of the stars who competed in the Short Hills' classic.

The Fox Hills course is not by any means foreign to the local golfer, this being the fifth time he has entered the big event there. In 1908 he was runner-up, and in 1906 finished third. The other two times he failed to capture any money.

Preceding the main event of tomorrow and Friday will be the amateur-professional best ball competition for prizes given by the Fox Hills club. Prizes for the professionals will be four in number, ranging from $40 to $10.

Among the numerous competitors for the metropolitan title is Louis Martucci, the one-armed caddie master of the Essex County Country Club. He holds the record for the Essex County links, having covered the course with a score of 69.

BORO BOWLING RESULTS.

The results of last evening's competition in the Gates tournament follows:

YOUR CAR KNOWS THE DIFFERENCE

FILL your tank with Standard Motor Gasoline, and you notice the difference instantly in the "feel" of your engine.

Standard Motor Gasoline is so much better than "just gas" that it is worth while to be particular about what goes into your tank. Cylinder carbon frequently is caused by the use of an inferior fuel.

Standard Motor Gasoline vaporizes readily and burns cleanly. It is a straight-distilled product, not a mixture—the same for every drop in your tank.

You can get Standard Motor Gasoline wherever you can take a car. It is absolutely uniform — the same now as next week, and it is cheaper to buy because there are more miles in a gallon.

Use Polarine Oil, the Standard Oil for all motors. Friction free, carbon free. For sale wherever you see the "Standard Motor Gasoline Service Station" sign.

ROMANCE OF THE FROZEN NORTH

Ship on Its Way to Relieve MacMillan Party.

A ROMANCE of the arctic regions has been exploded by Donald B. MacMillan, who among other things in a letter recently received by the New York Tribune, said:

"Crocker Land, reported seen by Peary in 1906 and indicated on the latest maps, does not exist. I succeeded in covering the whole distance of 1,200 miles in seventy-two days. To us, standing on the heights of Cape Thomas Hubbard, and for several days on the polar sea, there was every appearance of an immense tract of land extending along 120 degrees of the horizon, hills, valleys and snow capped peaks."

It was confidently expected that this unexplored land of the arctic had a real existence, but it now turns out that the land that Peary thought he saw was merely a series of ice banks or a mirage.

According to Admiral Peary's description, a territory of vast dimensions lay off the coast of Axel Heiberg Land, separated from it by an arm of the arctic ocean. With his description as their guide, MacMillan and his followers raced from Etah across the frozen Smith sound, across the difficult reaches of Ellesmere Land, across Axel Heiberg Land, and then dashed under the light of the midnight sun 125 miles out over the floe filled arctic in a daring effort to be the first men to set foot upon the continent which Peary thought he had seen.

They found no continent. Not even an island broke the dreariness of the tumbled icy wastes of the frozen sea. Where Peary said the coast of Crocker Land broke the horizon was nothing but an expanse of jagged ice.

Rumors of a great northern continent have been current since the beginning of polar exploration. It remained for Peary to crystallize them into more positive form. When the rear admiral returned after nailing the stars and stripes to the pole he told of this legendary land. He thought that he had seen it, and he named it. In his mind there was little question that beyond the northern cliffs of Axel Heiberg Land stretched the uncharted shores of a great continent.

It was Peary's report which aroused the American Museum of Natural History to fit out an expedition to attain an actual foothold upon this continent. Donald B. MacMillan, who had accompanied Peary for part of the way on his final dash to the pole was chosen as its head.

MacMillan left New York on board the Diana on July 2, 1913, but in Belle Isle strait the ship leaked so badly that the explorer put back to St. John's, N. F. He started again on Aug. 5, 1913, in the Erik, Peary's old sulphy ship, for Flagler bay, but was obliged to winter at Etah, Peary's former base.

Now the little schooner George B. Cluett of the Grenfell association is on her way to the far north to relieve MacMilan and the members of his party. The ship is commanded by Captain H. C. Pickels, a veteran sailor of the arctic. Accompanying him are Dr. Edward Otis Hovey and Captain George Comer, representing the American Museum of Natural History. The ship is provisioned for two years in case the MacMillan party should not be located at Etah, North Greenland, Admiral Peary's former winter quarters. It is expected that the ship will reach Etah by the middle of August. The schooner also carries stores for the hospitals in Labrador maintained by the Grenfell association.

Professor MacMillan in his letter to the New York Tribune, which started on its journey southward last February, stated that he and Ensign Fitzhugh Green, U. S. N., would start on a 1,500 mile trip to explore new regions and should be back at Etah around June 11. Other members of his party will engage in more exploration work in different sections of the arctic region. He said that if the George B. Cluett fails to reach them their friends in the United States should not worry, as they can easily live as the natives do.

GUNS MADE TO BILK N. Y., SAYS MAXIM

Hudson Maxim, inventor and American authority in the realm of high explosives, in a statement today declared that some of the guns have been made and some of the shells cast which shall compel New York city to save itself from destruction by paying the biggest gold indemnity that was ever imposed upon a community.

"Few people have the power of imagination to see that such a thing as the invasion of this country is going to happen, and to feel the real horrors of it until after it has happened," said Mr. Maxim. "Every soldier who goes to war confidently believes that the bullet to kill him has never yet been cast. We are all endowed with the gambler's hope and the gambler's faith in chance. If it were not for this we should all be cowards indeed.

"The greatest welfare workers in this country are those men and women, like the members of the Navy League, the Army League, the National Security League and the American Legion, and those who are writing articles and books upon the subject of our defenseless condition. If the people of this country could only be aroused to a realization of how actual is their danger there would be organizing of the whole people from ocean to ocean, and the greatest united cry that ever went up to God in a call to arms for national defense.

"Cleveland Moffett has done a big, patriotic duty in writing the admirable serial just now appearing in McClure's, 'The Conquest of America.' What he has done is to tell a story of what has actually happened. Hindsight is much better than foresight. He takes the reader forward to 1921 and from that vantage point gives him an opportunity to look backward into the past, which is our present and our immediate future, and let the reader see into what a hell of war we are drifting.

"Some of the guns have been made, some of the shells have been cast, and certain it is that many more are in the making, and in the casting, which shall command and compel New York city to save itself from destruction by paying the biggest gold indemnity that was ever imposed upon a community.

"The pernicious propagandism of pacificism has paralyzed the reasoning faculties of a large number of the American people. As I have said in my book, 'Defenseless America,' 'Pacificism has ringed the nose of the American people, and is leading them, blind and unknowing, to the slaughter.'"

DETERMINE COST FOR IMPROVEMENT

Assessment of $2,980.23 Levied to Widen East Second Street.

Commissioners appointed by the city to take charge of the East Second street widening plans made a lengthy report to the Common Council at its July meeting, last night, fixing the total amount of damages at $1,042.64, and the total cost of widening the thoroughfare at $2,980.23. The commissioners are Charles Randolph, Elias Bird and John Abbott.

Councilman Francis J. Blatz, chairman of the street committee, offered a resolution affirming the reports and the Council passed it unanimously. The section of the street to be widened abuts the postoffice site, and will include that section of East Second street between Watchung avenue and Church street.

The resolution providing for the widening of East Ninth street, between Watchung avenue and Third place, was presented by Chairman Baltz for third and final hearing and was unanimously adopted. Property owners living along West Sixth street between Monroe and Clinton avenues petitioned the Council to have that section of the street properly curbed, a subject that was referred to a committee.

Two permits for the installation of gasoline tanks were granted last night; one to the Martin Automobile Company for a 550-gallon receptacle in front of its place of business on Park avenue, and a second to the firm of Abrams & Shield for a 500-gallon tank on West Front street.

E. H. Ladd, Jr., president of the governing board of Muhlenberg Hospital, petitioned the Council to adopt some form of regulations to prohibit autoists from making unnecessary noise in passing the juncture of Randolph road and Park avenue. Horace Adams, clerk of the District Court, reported that receipts totalling $164.29 had been taken in during the month and expenditures amounting to $47.59 had been made. The alms committee expended $1,133.09. Building Inspector T. O. Doane granted twenty-nine building permits during June and Street Commissioner Gavett granted six permits for sewer connections. The contract with Emil Morraller & Son for keeping the town clock in running order for the coming year was renewed and $30 set aside for this purpose. The sum of $3,500 was transferred from the general fund to the fire fund and $1,000 from the same source to the poor fund. A leave of absence was voted to Tax Collector William R. Townsend, who recently underwent an operation for appendicitis, until September 1.

SENATOR'S FRANKING PRIVILEGE QUESTIONED

Mrs. E. F. Feickert is "On the Trail" of James E. Martine.

Mrs. E. F. Feickert, of this city, president of the New Jersey Woman Suffrage Association yesterday got after U. S. Senator James E. Martine with an axe, figuratively speaking. She took him to task for what the Philadelphia Record referred to editorially as a "flagrant abuse of the Senatorial franking privilege." He is causing to be distributed broadcast, at the expense of the Federal Government, a pamphlet purporting to be an article on "Woman Suffrage" by himself, but which is in fact, so it is alleged, a scream prepared by the District of Columbia Association opposed to woman suffrage for the campiagn use of the "Antis."

Mrs. Fieckert said:

"I have in my possession a copy of the pamphlet referred to in the Record. It consists of twelve pages of closely printed matter, in all some eight thousand words. I hear that Senator Martine is generously franking this pamphlet to the voters of New York, Massachusetts and Pennsylvania as well as to those of New Jersey. I wonder if the men of these States will like the idea of his being so generous at their expense? In this connection, I would like to add that this is not the first time that Senator Martine has allowed the taxpayers of the country to help the Anti-Suffrage campaign.

"A pamphlet purporting to show that Suffrage was not a success in California went out under his frank two years ago. I was one of a delegation of New Jersey women which interviewed Senator Martine on this subject, and he undertook to defend his position, and said that if we would send him some material he would frank it out for us in the same way, provided we would be satisfied with a 'reasonable quantity.' It is needless to say that we did not accept his offer. The Suffragists of New Jersey may not be rich, but they try to be honest."

NETHERWOOD FRESH AIR CAMP OPENS

Over 300 Children and Mothers Arrive for a Two Weeks' Stay.

The summer session of the Netherwood Fresh Air Camp was opened yesterday, under the supervision of Miss Sarah Curry. Three hundred boys and girls from the East Side section of the New York metropolis were brought to the camp yesterday to enjoy the privileges of the open country for two weeks. Included in the gathering are a number of mothers with babies. The youngsters here are given an opportunity to get in touch with nature, an opportunity to breathe the pure country air, an opportunity they never have in the crowded tenement districts of the city.

Under capable men and women instructors the boys and girls play games, indulge in sports, aquatic feats and hikes. Upon the departure of the local delegation another will be sent out for two weeks. The camp will be open for two months, thus accommodating a large number of the poor New York children, who otherwise would never know the difference between city and country life.

Sunday will mark the formal opening of the camp and visitors will be welcomed at that time to inspect the work being done for the boys and girls and their tired city mothers. An elaborate program of music, addresses and songs will mark the occasion. Included in the list of speakers is Rev. Dr. Philip B. Strong, pastor of the First Baptist church. Clifford Braider heads the committee in charge of the program.

COMMITTEE MET.

Members of the committee of women in charge of the card party that was given in the local Elks' clubhouse Friday afternoon of last week, met last night and presented reports of the affair. It was shown that most of the receipts had all been turned in and the sum was considerably more than at first anticipated.

LIBERTY BELL REACHES IOWA.

Des Moines, Ia., July 7.—The Liberty Bell, en route from Philadelphia for the San Francisco Exposition, will reach this city today. Governor Clarke will be the principal speaker at the exercises to be held here in honor of the famous relic of independence.

A few dimes may "turn the tide" for you if you invest them in a "Situation Wanted" ad.

CHRISTIAN FIELD

Twenty persons were received into membership at the First Baptist church Sunday.

The following number of members were received recently into the First M. E. church: One on probation, three by letter and twenty-five from probation.

Rev. Dr. Anderson, pastor of the First M. E. church, announced the following among the supplies during the month of August; Rev. Dr. C. R. Barnes, of Hoboken; Rev. Dr. Wriston, of Boston, and Rev. Frank McDaniels, of Pennington.

The regular business meeting of the First Baptist church will be held Wednesday evening, July 14.

The Ladies' Aid Society of the Wilson Memorial Union church, at Watchung, will hold a festival for the benefit of the church on Wednesday, July 21.

PERSONAL.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur E. Smith and children, of West Seventh street, have rented a bungalow at Manasquan for the summer. They will leave today for the resort.

Mrs. Elizabeth Woodard, of Willow avenue, is able to be about again after being confined to her bed for two weeks with a general breakdown.

Mr. and Mrs. D. R. Douglass and children, of Grove street, are occupying their bungalow at Manasquan for the summer.

Martin Connaughton, of the local fire department, and family, of Essex street, are spending the week at Asbury Park.

W. W. Hall, of West Fifth street, who has been confined to his home during the course of the past month with illness, is now able to be about.

John Winzenreid and daughter, Miss Margaret Winzenreid, are spending the week visiting friends in Brooklyn.

Arthur Dunn, of South avenue, who has been confined to his home for several weeks with a severe attack of rheumatism, is now recovering.

HARRY LIEBOLD SNATCHED.

Chicago, July 7—Harry Liebold, an outfielder with the Cleveland Americans, has been bought by the Chicago Americans at the waiver price, it was announced today. He has been instructed to report Friday. Manager Rowland plans to use him in left field replacing Roth.

MURRAY JOINS CUBS.

New York, July 7—Outfielder Murray, released outright by the Giants, accepted terms offered by Rober Bresnahan last night and will report to the Cubs at Ebbets Field.

PENROD

Copyright, 1914, by Doubleday, Page & Company

CHAPTER XXII.

Fanchon.

PENROD hastily dropped the small hand and, exclaiming, with simple honesty, "Why, I don't want it!" followed Fanchon out into the sunshiny yard, where they came to a halt and surveyed each other.

Penrod stared awkwardly at Fanchon, no other occupation suggesting itself to him, while Fanchon, with the utmost coolness, made a very thorough visual examination of Penrod, favoring him with an estimating scrutiny which lasted until he literally wiggled. Finally she spoke.

"Where do you buy your ties?" she asked.

"What?"

"Where do you buy your neckties? Papa gets his at Skoone's. You ought to get yours there. I'm sure the one you're wearing isn't from Skoone's."

"Skoone's?" Penrod repeated "Skoone's?"

"On Fifth avenue," said Fanchon. "It's a very smart shop, the men say."

"Men?" echoed Penrod in a hazy whisper. "Men?"

"Where do your people go in summer?" inquired the lady. "We go to Long Shore, but so many middle class people have begun coming there mamma thinks of leaving. The middle classes are simply awful, don't you think?"

"What?"

"They're so boorjaw. You speak French, of course?"

"Me?"

"We ran over to Paris last year. It's lovely, don't you think? Don't you love the Rue de la Paix?"

Penrod wandered in a labyrinth. This girl seemed to be talking, but her words were dumfounding, and of course there was no way for him to know that he was really listening to her mother. It was his first meeting with one of those grownup little girls, wonderful product of the winter apartment and summer hotel, and Fanchon, an only child, was a star of the brand. He began to feel resentful.

"I suppose," she went on, "I'll find everything here fearfully western. Some nice people called yesterday, though. Do you know the Magsworth Bittses? Auntie says they're charming. Will Roddy be at your party?"

"I guess he will," returned Penrod, finding this intelligible. "The mutt!"

"Really!" Fanchon exclaimed airily. "Aren't you great pals with him?"

"What's 'pals'?"

"Good heavens! Don't you know what it means to say you're 'great pals' with any one? You are an odd child!"

It was too much.

"Oh, bugs!" said Penrod.

This bit of ruffianism had a curious effect. Fanchon looked upon him with sudden favor.

"I like you, Penrod," she said in an odd way, and whatever else there may have been in her manner there certainly was no shyness.

"Oh, bugs!" This repetition may have lacked gallantry, but it was uttered in no very decided tone. Penrod was shaken.

"Yes, I do!" She stepped closer to him, smiling. "Your hair is ever so pretty."

Sailors' parrots swear like mariners, they say, and gay mothers ought to realize that all children are imitative, for as the precocious Fanchon leaned toward Penrod the manner in which she looked into his eyes might have made a thoughtful observer wonder where she had learned her pretty ways.

Penrod was even more confused than he had been by her previous mysteries, but his confusion was of a distinctly pleasant and alluring nature. He wanted more of it. Looking intentionally into another person's eyes is an act unknown to childhood, and Penrod's discovery that it could be done was sensational. He had never thought of looking into the eyes of Marjorie Jones.

Despite all anguish, contumely, tar and Maurice Levy, he still secretly thought of Marjorie, with pathetic constancy, as his "beau," though that is not how he would have spelled it. Marjorie was beautiful; her curls were long and the color of amber; her nose was straight, and her freckles were honest; she was much prettier than this accomplished visitor. But beauty is not all.

"I do!" breathed Fanchon softly.

She seemed to him a fairy creature from some rosier world than this. So humble is the human heart it glorifies and makes glamorous almost any poor thing that says to it, "I like you!"

Penrod was enslaved. He swallowed, coughed, scratched the back of his neck and said disjointedly:

"Well—I don't care—if you want to. I just as soon."

"We'll dance together," said Fanchon, "at your party."

"I guess so. I just as soon."

"Don't you want to, Penrod?"

"Well, I'm willing to."

"No. Say you want to!"

"Well"—

He used his toe as a gimlet, boring into the ground, his wide open eyes staring with intense vacancy at a button on his sleeve. His mother appeared upon the porch in departure, calling farewells over her shoulder to Mrs. Gelbraith, who stood in the doorway.

"Say it!" whispered Fanchon.

"Well, I just as soon."

She seemed satisfied.

A dancing floor had been laid upon a platform in the yard when Mrs. Schofield and her son arrived at their own abode, and a white and scarlet striped canopy was in process of erection overhead to shelter the dancers from the sun. Workmen were busy everywhere under the direction of Margaret, and the smitten heart of Penrod began to beat rapidly. All this was for him. He was twelve!

After lunch he underwent an elaborate toilet and murmured not. For the first time in his life he knew the wish to be sandpapered, waxed, and polished to the highest possible degree. And when the operation was over he stood before the mirror in new bloom, feeling encouraged to hope that his resemblance to his father was not so strong as Aunt Sarah seemed to think.

The white gloves upon his hands had a pleasant smell, he found, and as he came down the stairs he had great content in the twinkling of his new dancing slippers. He stepped twice on each step the better to enjoy their effect, and at the same time he deeply inhaled the odor of the gloves. In spite of everything Penrod had his social capacities. Already it is to be perceived that there were in him the makings of a cotillion leader.

Then came from the yard a sound of tuning instruments, squeak of fiddle, croon of cello, a falling triangle ringing and tinkling to the floor, and he turned pale.

Chosen guests began to arrive, while Penrod, suffering from stage fright and perspiration, stood beside his mother, in the "drawing room," to receive them. He greeted unfamiliar acquaintances and intimate fellow criminals with the same frigidity, murmuring "'M glad to see y'" to all alike, largely increasing the embarrassment which always prevails at the beginning of children's festivities. His unnatural pomp and circumstance had so thoroughly upset him, in truth, that Marjorie Jones received a distinct shock, now to be related. Dr. Thrope, the very kind old clergyman who had baptized Penrod, came in for a moment to congratulate the boy and had just moved away when it was Marjorie's turn, in the line of children, to speak to Penrod. She gave him what she considered a forgiving look and, because of the occasion, addressed him in a perfectly courteous manner.

"I wish you many happy returns of the day, Penrod."

"Thank you, sir!" he returned, following Dr. Thorpe with a glassy stare in which there was absolutely no recognition of Marjorie. Then he greeted Maurice Levy, who was next to Marjorie, "'M glad to see y'!"

Dumfounded, Marjorie turned aside and stood near, observing Penrod with gravity. It was the first great surprise of her life. Customarily she had seemed to place his character somewhere between that of the professional rioter and that of the orang outang. Nevertheless her manner at times just hinted a consciousness that this Caliban was her property, wherefore she stared at him incredulously as his head bobbed up and down in the dancing school bow, greeting his guests. Then she heard an adult voice near her exclaim:

"What an exquisite child!"

Marjorie glanced up—a little consciously, though she was used to it—naturally curious to ascertain who was speaking of her. It was Sam Williams' mother addressing Mrs. Bassett, both being present to help Mrs. Schofield make the festivities festive.

"Exquisite!"

Here was a second heavy surprise for Marjorie. They were not looking at her. They were looking with beaming approval at a girl she had never seen, a dark and modish stranger of singularly composed and yet modest aspect. Her downcast eyes, becoming in one thus entering a crowded room, were all that produced the effect of modesty, counteracting something about her which might have seemed too assured. She was very slender, very dainty, and her apparel was disheartening to the other girls. It was of a knowing picturesqueness wholly unfamiliar to them. There was a delicate trace of powder upon the lobe of Fanchon's left ear, and the outlines of her eyelids, if very closely scrutinized, would have revealed successful experimentation with a burned match.

Marjorie's lovely eyes dilated. She learned the meaning of hatred at first sight. Observing the stranger with instinctive suspicion, all at once she seemed, to herself, awkward. Poor Marjorie underwent that experience which hearty, healthy little girls and big girls undergo at one time or another—from heels to head she felt herself, somehow, too thick.

Fanchon leaned close to Penrod and whispered in his ear:

"Don't you forget!"

Penrod blushed.

Marjorie saw the blush. Her lovely eyes opened even wider, and in them there began to grow a light. It was the light of indignation—at least people whose eyes glow with that light always call it indignation.

Roderick Magsworth Bitts, Jr., approached Fanchon when she had made her courtesy to Mrs. Schofield. Fanchon whispered in Roderick's ear also.

"Your hair is pretty, Roddy! Don't forget what you said yesterday!"

Roderick likewise blushed.

Maurice Levy, captivated by the newcomer's appearance, pressed close to Roderick.

"Give us an intaduction, Roddy?"

Roddy being either reluctant or unable to perform the rite, Fanchon took matters into her own hands and was presently favorably impressed with Maurice, receiving the information that his tie had been brought to him by his papa from Skoone's, whereupon she privately informed him that she liked wavy hair and arranged to dance with him.

Fanchon also thought that sandy hair was attractive, Sam Williams discovered a few minutes later, and so catholic was her taste that a ring of boys quite encircled her before the musicians in the yard struck up their thrilling march, and Mrs. Schofield brought Penrod to escort the lady from out of town to the dancing pavilion.

Headed by this pair, the children sought partners and paraded solemnly out of the front door and round a corner of the house. There they found the gay marquee, the small orchestra seated on the lawn at one side of it and a punch bowl of lemonade inviting attention under a tree. Decorously the small couples stepped upon the platform, one after another, and began to dance.

"It's not much like a children's party in our day," Mrs. Williams said to Penrod's mother. "We'd have been playing Quaker meeting, clap in, clap out or going to Jerusalem, I suppose."

"Yes, or postoffice and drop the handkerchief," said Mrs. Schofield. "Things change so quickly. Imagine asking little Fanchon Gelbraith to play London bridge! Penrod seems to be having a difficult time with her, poor boy. He wasn't a shining light in the dancing class."

However, Penrod's difficulty was not precisely of the kind his mother supposed.

Fanchon was soon showing him a new step, which she taught her next partner in turn, continuing instructions during the dancing. The children crowded the floor, and in the kaleidoscopic jumble of bobbing heads and intermingling figures her extremely different style of motion was unobserved by the older people, who looked on, nodding time benevolently.

Fanchon fascinated girls as well as boys. Many of the former eagerly sought her acquaintance and thronged about her between the dances, when accepting the deference due a cosmopolitan and an oracle of the mode, she gave demonstrations of the new step to succeeding groups, professing astonishment to find it unknown. It had been "all the go," she explained, at the Long Shore Casino for fully two seasons.

She pronounced very "slow" a "fancy dance" executed during an intermission by Baby Rennsdale and Georgie Bassett, giving it as her opinion that Miss Rennsdale and Mr. Bassett were "dead ones," and she expressed surprise that the punch bowl contained lemonade and not champagne.

The dancing continued, the new step gaining instantly in popularity, fresh couples adventuring with every number. The word "step" is somewhat misleading, nothing done with the feet being vital to the evolutions introduced by Fanchon. Fanchon's dance came from the orient by a roundabout way.

Pausing in old Spain, taking on a Gallic frankness in gallantry at the Bal Bullier in Paris, combining with a relative from the south seas encountered in San Francisco, flavoring itself with a care free negroid abandon in New Orleans and accumulating, too, something inexpressible from Mexico and South America, it kept throughout its travels to the underworld or to circles where nature is extremely frank and rank, until at last it reached the dives of New York, when it immediately broke out in what is called civilized society.

Thereafter it soon spread in variously modified forms—some of them disinfected—to watering places and thence, carried by hundreds of older male and female Fanchons over the country, being eagerly adopted everywhere and made wholly pure and respectable by the supreme moral axiom that anything is all right if enough people do it.

Everybody was doing it.

Not quite everybody. It was perhaps some test of this dance that earth could furnish no more grotesque sight than that of children doing it.

Earth, assisted by Fanchon, was furnishing this sight at Penrod's party. By the time ice cream and cake arrived about half the guests had either been initiated into the mysteries by Fanchon or were learning by imitation, and the education of the other half was resumed with the dancing when the attendant ladies, unconscious of what was happening, withdrew into the house for tea and a bit of gossip.

"That orchestra's a dead one," Fanchon remarked to Penrod. "We ought to liven them up a little."

She approached the musicians.

"Don't you know," she asked the leader, "the 'Slingo Sligo Slide?'"

The leader giggled, nodded, rapped with his bow upon his violin, and Penrod, following Fanchon back upon the dancing floor, blindly brushed with his elbow a solitary little figure standing aloof on the lawn at the edge of the platform.

It was Marjorie.

Of Interest to Women and the Home

The Big Rooster Looked Higher Than a Meeting House Steeple.

Daddy's Bedtime Story—

The Doggie, the Chickens and the Wise Old Owl.

"THERE was once a doggie that chased chickens," said daddy. "Of course there have been many doggies that chased chickens, but this story is about one particular doggie that chased them most all the time. Whipping did no good. He simply wouldn't stop it.

"One day he grew so tired chasing chickens when there was nobody around to stop him that he lay down with his head on his paws to rest.

"But now a wonderful thing happened. Those chickens grew and grew and grew, and then they grew some more after that till they looked to that doggie as if they were almost as big as barns.

"They didn't pay much attention to the doggie at first, but stepped about picking great worms out of the ground that were much longer than the doggie. By and by one of them cackled. It sounded ever so much louder than any cackle any one else ever heard. The doggie lay and trembled and hoped those chickens wouldn't see him.

"But they did, and they ran toward him, and he lay and trembled and wondered what they were going to do to him.

"They stood blinking at him out of their funny eyes, and one old hen, which looked as big as a meeting house, clucked: 'That's the fellow that has been chasing us. Let's take him to that wise old fellow, Judge Owl, down in the grove and let him pass sentence on him.'

"So a great big rooster whose head seemed to be higher than a meeting house steeple reached down and took the trembling doggie in his beak, and off they trotted, the whole flock of them, fuss and feathers, to the grove.

"The grove looked awfully big and tall to the doggie, too, and Judge Owl, who sat up in a giant tree top, blinked at the doggie with his yellow eyes and hooted, 'Whoo? Whoo?'

"'The doggie, Judge Owl,' crowed the great big rooster. 'He has been chasing us and scaring us to death because we were little and could not help ourselves. But now we're bigger than he is, and we have brought him before you for sentence.'

"'What have you to say?' asked Judge Owl, but the doggie only trembled.

"'I sentence the doggie to be chased by chickens,' said the wise old owl judge, and then the chickens chased and chased that doggie, and the doggie ran this way and that, while the chickens pecked at him and the doggie howled, and then the doggie woke up."

VOTES FOR WOMEN

Conducted by the Equal Suffrage League of Plainfield and North Plainfield.

"If a lassie wants the ballot
To help run the town,
And the lassie gets the ballot,
Need the laddie frown?
Many a laddie has the ballot,
Not so bright as I;
And many a laddie votes the ballot,
Overcome with rye."

—From Berkshire Eagle.

A little more than 500 years ago John Huss was burned at the stake because he believed in liberty of thought and action for all humanity, but the ideas and ideals for which he stood have not died out. But even in these days Democracy is considered by many to be merely a dream and many are the criticism to which it is subjected. Democracy is not an institution or a form of government but a point of view and the evils of which we hear so much are really not the effect of an inefficient democracy but of a decaying aristocracy. Agitators are never popular in their own day but the women who are a real menace to the country today are not the ones who are speaking from platform and soap box but those who, profiting themselves by special privileges, stand pat for things as they are.

As to Child Labor.

The following figures are taken from the United States census of 1910: In 38 male suffrage States, children at work under 15 years, 20 per cent. In ten equal suffrage States, children at work under 15 years 7.9 per cent.

From Bishop Delany.

Rt. Rev. Patrick Delany, Roman Catholic Archbishop, of Hobart Tasmania, Australia, says: "I can speak for our Tasmanian women, and I affirm that no Tasmanian woman, Catholic or Protestant, to my knowledge—and I am fairly qualified to know—has forgotten the dignity of her sex, or her self-respect, or has done any of the other things that do befall men on such occasions and that seriously weaken their claim to exclusive fitness for the discharge of those important national services. No candidate has any chance of purchasing a woman's vote in the drinkshop."

Youth Is Still Young.

(By Wittmer Bynner)

O, can there be people who need to be told
That youth is still young and that age is still old?
But that youth may be old and that age may be young?
Then hark to the truth on the tip of my tongue.

The young man who thinks that a woman must stay
By her bed and her stove and her baby all day,
Is as old as the acorn that fell off the oak
That had died of old age before Adam awoke.

And the old man who thinks that a woman must go
Where humanity calls for her yes and her no,
Is as young as the angels that come with the spring
Or the song that a genuine parent should sing.

SMART VACATION DRESS THAT CAN BE MADE AT HOME.

No. 8929-8616.

One can never have too many rough and tumble skirts—skirts for which the mountain trail has no terrors; for which the spray of salt water holds no danger; in which, in the strenuousness of tennis, the wearer will feel no discomfort. A dress of such a type is the Ladies' Home Journal Pattern illustrated above. Both skirt and waist are simple in construction, the collar and vest being cut in one. Pattern cuts in sizes 32 to 44 inches bust measure, requiring in size 36, 3 1-8 yards 27-inch material. The skirt is plaited with yoke and panel cut in one. It cuts in sizes 22 to 24 inches waist measure, requiring in size 24, 5½ yards 36-inch material.

Patterns may be obtained at the store of A. E. Force & Company.

Don't forget that classified advertisements must be in by noon on Saturdays.

—The Daily Press can be purchased each night at Mallinson's drug store, East Second street.

Household Hints..

HANDY TOOL

File the hook off a common button hook with a ring top and sharpen to a good point.

This makes a good opener for milk bottles and if hung above the sink it will always be handy when the bottles are washed before opening.

This tool was made by a child of nine after watching mother making several unsuccessful attempts at opening bottles with a fork.

THINGS WORTH KNOWING

When beans are scorched take them off the fire and set pan in cold water for ten minutes. It will take away the scorched taste and will loosen the good beans from the ones sticking to the bottom.

Drain Pipes—A tablespoon of common soda and a cup of strong vinegar put in the sink will clean out clogged pipes.

Easy Way Washing Woodwork—Take pail of water, one-half pint vinegar and a soft rag; woodwork will look like new.

CANNING AND PRESERVING

Strawberry Jam — Take equal quantities of berries and sugar. Do not mach berries. Cook thirty minutes after they begin to boil. Put in tumblers while hot. When cold, cover.

Currant Marmalade—Six oranges cut in dice, five pounds fresh currants, 1½ pounds seeded raisins, five pounds sugar. Boil twenty minutes.

Fresh Strawberries for Winter—Select firm, ripe berries, wash thoroughly in cool water to remove all sand, let them drain a few minutes, then hull them into a large dish or stone crock, and chop them with a silver knife until the juice comes to the top of the berries. Have glass fruit jars sterilized, and fill the one-quart size within two inches of the top with chopped berries (fill other sizes of jars accordingly). Have ready a sauce pan of boiling, thick sugar syrup, fill the cans and screw down tight. Set the cans into the washboiler or some other deep vessel and fill it up with boiling water, so it comes just to the lower edge of the rubber. Set out of the way and cover tightly and leave until next morning, when remove cans to cool, dark place, where they will keep perfectly and have the flavor and color of fresh berries for shortcake or to use as fruit in any way.

Canning Fruit—Housekeepers who have not been successful in their attempts at this work will find the following a most excellent recipe: Place the fruit in granite, iron or porcelain kettle; never use common iron, brass or tin for this purpose. Let it boil about five minutes. Have the jars in readiness and standing in a vessel of warm water, so they may be heated gradually. Just before filling the jars with fruit, dip a towel in boiling water and wrap it around the jar and tuck the corners under the bottom for the jar to rest upon. Fill the jar quickly; when full, thrust a knife to the bottom and stir it around several times, and the air bubbles will rise to the top. Seal as tight as possible, and stand the jar upside down in a moderately cool place. In a few hours turn the jar up and try to seat it tighter, standing it again upside down. Continue this several times, or until the cover is tightly screwed on. Stand the jars in a cool, dark place in the cellar, looking at them occasionally for a few days.

THE TABLE.

Mustard Dressing for Roasts—Heat vinegar to which has been added a finely chopped or grated onion to the boiling point, then mix with dry mustard in the usual manner adding a teaspoon of granulated sugar. This preparation will keep for several days, but if you wish to make a quantity to keep, as any prepared mustard, strain vinegar through a strainer or piece of cheesecloth, taking out the onions. The mixture will still have the onion flavor and will keep indefinitely, since the onions themselves are the only part of the combination which will spoil.

Orange Sponge Cake—Two cups pulverized sugar, yolks five eggs, whites four eggs, rind one-half orange grated (add water to make one-half cup), two cups sifted flour two teaspoons baking powder. Icing One and three-fourths cups sugar, one-fourth cup water, whites two eggs, rind one-half orange grated juice one-half orange.

Glimpses of Married Life

BY MRS. EVA LEONARD

"Well, good times have a way of coming to an end," said Dick as the family sat about the fire on the last evening of his and Nell's visit to the latter's parents in Detroit.

"Got your trunk packed, Nell?" he asked, turning to his wife, who was softly humming a song at the piano.

"Have you begun already?" said Nell, collapsing onto the keyboard with a crash.

"Year's little to the leeward, young man, and take in sail," laughed Father Reeves. "A squall is brewing."

"Well, I don't see any use of waiting till the last minute to pack and then rushing till you are black and blue in the face," said Dick.

"I see you're bound to steer in the teeth of the wind." Mr. Reeves made a gesture as if washing his hands of all responsibility and impending disaster.

"I'll help Nell in the morning, Dick. Your train does not leave till four. We'll be ready," said Mrs. Reeves soothingly.

"Thank you." Dick looked rather sheepish.

The next morning Mrs. Reeves thoughtfully dispatched Dick on an errand and she and Nell got nearly everything in the trunk while he was gone.

"My, I'm glad he's out of the way. I can work twice as fast if he's not fussing around hurrying me," said Nell.

"That looks something like," remarked Dick as he surveyed the full trunk and the dismantled room after dinner.

"The dray will be here soon; shall I close it?"

"Everything is in," replied Mrs. Reeves.

They heard the banging of the lid. After a little silence, Dick called:

"Nell, where's the key?"

"What?" called Nell from the staircase.

"Where's the key?"

"What key would I want while closing a trunk?"

There was absorbed silence while Nell thought.

"Can't you find it?"

"I'm looking for it, dear," she called, grabbing her handbag and looking in all the little pockets, unsuccessfully.

"Isn't it tied to the handle of the trunk?" she called.

"No!" came floating down the staircase.

A little pucker appeared between her eyes. She ran upstairs and looked in the dressing table drawer. They were empty.

"I wonder if I put it in my jewel case; that's packed in the tray," she thought.

"Got it?" Dick was tucking in the last strap end as he held out his hand for the key.

"I can't find it," said Nell, weakly.

"Well, this is a pretty mess." Dick dropped onto the trunk in disgust.

"I may have put it in my jewel case, and that's packed in the tray."

Dick said unutterable things with the curve of his back as he unstrapped the trunk and opened it. He silently pawed among the carefully packed things, found the jewel case, opened it, closed it and squeezed the rumpled contents of the tray back into shape.

"What'll we do? I can't find it," she said faintly.

"They won't take an unlocked trunk. Go see if your mother has any trunk keys. She might possibly have one that would fit." Dick had the air of a Christian martyr as he said:

"I suppose I had better not close the trunk again. You may think of something in the northeast corner that may contain it."

Nell dashed down the stairs for her mother's key ring. Then Dick solemnly tried every one that could be stuffed into the key hole and handed the ring back, patient endurance oozing from every pore.

"I'll have to go with the express man and stop at the hardware store and have it fitted," he said sullidly as he restrapped the trunk. "It's lucky the stores are open."

"Here's the dray," called Nell looking down the stairs.

When the man pulled the trunk upon end he exclaimed:

"Is this your trunk key here on the floor? It was under the trunk."

"Oh, I remember, I put it there so it would not get lost," said Nell.

SCOOP, THE CUB REPORTER — SCOOP'S AS CRAZY AS A FOX — BY "HOP"

WILL ATTEND WORLD'S ENDEAVOR CONVENTION

Delegates from New Jersey left Newark yesterday for the World's Christian Endeavorer Convention, which opens in Chicago today. Some of the delegates left from Jersey City while others boarded the train at Phillipsburg. Included in the party from this vicinity are Robert B. Butler and Egbert Fountain, of this city. The entire delegation will be joined at Chicago by Rev. George D. Jones, vice-president of the New Jersey Union; Arthur E. Warner, of Elizabeth, State transportation manager, and Miss Georgia Riker and Miss Alice Barnes, of Plainfield.

The party will be joined at South Bethlehem by the Pennsylvania delegation. Upon the arrival at Buffalo they will meet the New York Endeavorers and a reception will be given in the Calvary Presbyterian church by the young people.

RECREATION NOTES

Last night the Plainfield Zephers an athletic club of colored girls, met in the High School gymnasium. Several good games of basketball were played. The girls are working under a strict referee and will soon play a very sportsmanlike game. It was decided at the meeting to give a play in the near future. Margaret Cameron's farce, "The Burglar," was chosen and rehearsals will be begun at once.

This evening the Girls' Athletic Class will meet in the High School gymnasium as usual. Those who wish to may take part in the relay races and games. If some of the girls will bring their own tennis rackets the net will be put up and a game of tennis enjoyed. Plans for an outdoor athletic meet are being perfected and entries will be received at any time.

On Friday evening the Dunbar dance will be held at the Washington School for the colored people. This week the program is to be varied a little from the usual. Reading from the well known play "Peg O' My Heart" will be given. It is hoped that a large gathering of colored people will come to Washington School on Friday and enjoy a social evening.

ELKS CELEBRATE A NOTABLE DATE

Five Hundredth Meeting of Local Lodge Fittingly Observed Last Night.

INSTITUTED IN 1903

Past Exalted Rulers Officiate at Meeting—Three Initiated—Lodge Has Grown From 30 to 600 in Membership.

Members of Plainfield Lodge, No. 885, B. P. O. E., fittingly observed the occasion of the five hundredth meeting of the lodge in the Watchung avenue clubhouse, last night, an appropriate program featured by the appearance of the past exalted rulers being presented. The past exalted rulers last night served in the following official capacities: William N. Runyon, exalted ruler; George O. Stevens, loyal knight; John Cose, lecturing knight; Joseph Noonan, chaplain; Lewis A. Bellis, esquire, and J. E Griggs, of the Somerville lodge, inner guard. During the meeting three candidates were initiated into the mysteries of Elkdom. This latter event was made particularly interesting by a mark of esteem paid by a group of fellow workers to John H English, employed by the Central Railroad as yardmaster at Dunellen. Following the initiation proceedings Assemblyman William N. Runyon, on behalf of eleven Central Railroad passenger train conductors, who are Elks, presented Mr. English with a handsome gold Elk emblem set with a diamond. The recipient was taken completely by surprise and in his response he appropriately thanked his associates for the token.

An informal program of entertainment followed the lodge meeting, the Elks' quartet, composed of Elmer Cutting, William G. Smith, Edward Bennett and Harry Blimm, rendering a number of pleasing selections. Individual members who possess vocal talent also sang a number of solos and during the course of the evening refreshments were served. About 140 members attended the function and aided in making it commemorative of the anniversary date.

The local lodge was instituted December 3, 1903, the ceremony being in charge of New Brunswick Lodge, No. 324. The first officers of the Plainfield order who were installed on that date included: Exalted Ruler William N. Runyon, who was at that time city judge of Plainfield; Esteemed leading knight, A. D. Findlay; esteemed loyal knight, George O. Stevens; esteemed lecturing knight, L. I. Van Alystine; treasurer, L. B. Woolston; secretary, Walter H. Freeman; tiler, Edward C. Searing; trustees, one year, former Senator Charles A. Reed; two years, Hebert W. Stover, three years, James F. Buckle. Thirty charter members were initiated by a team composed of Peter Moore, Benjamin Suydam and C. Edward Burt, all of the New Brunswick lodge.

Following the ceremonies, which covered a period of two hours, Exalted Ruler Runyon made an address in which he expressed much optimism concerning the future of the organization and declared that the time would come when the Elks would become one of the strongest fraternal orders in Plainfield. That Mr. Runyon's prediction has come true is strikingly exemplified in the fact that the original roster has increased from thirty to over six hundred members. The Elks' home is without a doubt the finest in this vicinity and it is generally admitted that this order occupies the most prominent position in Plainfield's fraternal circles.

The day of the institution of No. 885 was a big one for Plainfielders. Many members recollect the date vividly, the occasion being featured by a driving snowstorm, an elaborate display of fireworks, the draping of all of the municipality's bid buildings in bunting, and by the record crowd of visitors entertained here for the observance. The Elks "owned" the town and members of lodges from all parts of the country came here six hundred strong. Elks arriving on incoming trains were met by a committee composed of Alexander D. Findlay, former Sheriff B. Frank Coriell, former Judge William A. Coddington, Edward Gaston, Herbert Brooks, L. I. Van Alystine and Edward C. Searing. Those who came by trolley were greeted by George O. Stevens, Harry C. Van Emburgh, J. F. Lane, William W. Warnock and Henry Pedefious.

John T. Kent, who was one of the members of the original organization of Elks, which was then known as the Order of the Jolly Corks, was present at the institution services and was one of the speakers at the reception which followed in Saengerbund Hall.

Make your Real estate "ad" one which investors and home-hunters will investigate in their own interests.

NARROW ESCAPE ON RAILROAD CROSSING

Cyclist Drives His Machine into Bank When Trains Bears Down on Him.

Raymond Cole, one of Plainfield's motorcycle speed-kings who has designs on road racing laurels, came to grief while crossing the Lehigh Valley Railroad tracks near Picton, Tuesday afternoon, and had a narrow escape from serious, if not fatal, injury. In attempting to get out of the way of a freight train which bore down upon him without warning as he rounded a bend, Cole drove his cycle into a dirt bank, wrecking it.

When he untangled himself from the mess Cole was suffering from numerous bad cuts and burises but later in the afternoon was able to proceed on his way back to Plainfield. That he escaped being hit by the train is accepted as little less than a miracle.

This puts a sudden end to Cole's plans for a cross-country tour during his summer vacation. He had mapped out a route for two weeks of pleasure touring but the present condition of his Emblem cycle will put a bad crimp in his proposed run.

ARTHUR S. JEFFREY WEDS MISS DOROTHY L. EDICK

A quiet wedding was that of Arthur Scott Jeffrey, Jr., of South Second street, and Miss Dorothy Lillian Medick, of Evona avenue, last evening, at the Church of the Heavenly Rest. The rector, the Rev. Cortlandt Mallery, performed the ceremony, the attendants being Mr. and Mrs. Charles William Smith.

Mr. Jeffrey is employed by the Central Railroad of New Jersey in Communipaw. He and his bride will reside on Rushmore avenue.

COLUMBUS CLUB EUCHRE PLANS BEING PERFECTED

Plans are well underway for a euchre and dance to be held in the auditorium of the Columbus Club, Friday night, July 16. David B. Doyle is the chairman in charge of the affair and he is being ably assisted by a corps of workers headed by Michael T. Moynihan, John Kyle and John T. Caulfield.

Following the card playing a dance will conclude the evening's entertainment, an orchestra having been engaged to furnish music for the occasion. An informal program of varied numbers will be included in the evening's festivities.

PLEASANT SURPRISE FOR MRS. GARRET Q. DOLLIVER

Mrs. G. Q. Dolliver, of Fairview avenue, celebrated her sixty-third birthday anniversary yesterday and was pleasantly surprised in the evening by a number of friends who gathered at the home of her son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Charles M. Dolliver, of DeLacy avenue.

Mrs. Dolliver was invited to dinner at her son's house and the other guests were asked in for the evening. Mrs. Dolliver was felicitated on her anniversary and wished many happy returns of the day. Among the guests present were Mr. and Mrs. Albertus Swalm, Mr. and Mrs. Winfield Schomp, Mrs. John Whitenack, Mrs. Sophia Dencklau, Mrs. Jacob Beckman, Mr. and Mrs. John Dolliver, Miss Brokaw and Rev. John Y. Broek.

ENTERTAINED AT THEIR HOME.

Mr. and Mrs. David R. Conover entertained friends last evening at their home on Jackson avenue, the borough. About hirty guests were present. The evening was spent in singing, dancing and playing games. Several piano solos were rendered by Miss Emily Starkins, of Brooklyn, and several vocal solos were rendered by the guests. The home was attractively decorated, the parlor being in green while the library and dining room were in red. The table decoration was roses. Refreshments were served. Guests were present from New York, Brooklyn, Newark, Elizabeth and this city.

TO NOMINATE OFFICERS.

The Plainfield Building Trades Council will hold an important meeting tomorrow evening at its hall on West Front street. A number of items of business will be brought before the session by Business Agent William H. Lunger. The semi-annual nomination of officers will also take place at this time, while the election will take place Friday evening of next week.

Mr. and Mrs. James Street and son, of New York city, are the guests of Mrs. Street's parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Demarest, of Somerset street.

FIRE IN HOLD OF S. S. MINNEHAHA

Caused by Explosion Possibly From Bomb Placed by Frank Holt.

VESSEL IS RETURNING

Captain of Atlantic Transport Liner Sends Message to Company That He is Making for Halifax With Fire Under Control.

New York, July 8.—Officials of the International Mercantile Marine Company this morning, received a wireless message from Captain Frank H. Claret, of the steamship Minnehaha, of the Atlantic Transport Line, stating that his vessel was on fire 570 miles southeast of Halifax. The captain said that the fire was in hold No. 3, and was not serious, but that he was putting back to Halifax for safety. The Minnehaha sailed for Liverpool on Sunday morning from New York with about 12,000 tons of cargo and no passengers.

Early this afternoon the line received the following from Captain Claret:

"Fire caused by explosion. Now controlled by suffocation and steam. Much smoke in holds. Deem it expedient to make Halifax. Due off Chebucto Head, 9 a. m. Friday."

Officials of the International Mercantile Marine Company declared themselves confident that British warships, known to be in the neighborhood, are speeding to the Minnehaha's assistance.

While no word has been received here to indicate that the explosive was placed by Frank Holt, who committed suicide yesterday when in jail for shooting J. P. Morgan, the belief among the authorities is said to be that Holt placed the explosive in the Minnehaha. Prior to committing suicide he confessed that an explosion would occur yesterday on a trans-Atlantic liner, but professed that he did not remember which vessel it was. Further details are awaited with much interest.

BOROUGH MEAT THIEVES STILL ESCAPE DETECTION

In their search for clues to the robbery of James E. Jackson's meat market, 163 Somerset street, North Plainfield, Monday night, the borough police report no progress. The thieves, who gained access to the market through a side window, stole hams, bacon and fresh meat to the value of about $75, and must have had a wagon or some vehicle in which to carry it away.

SAD CLIMAX TO FAMILY'S PLANS FOR EXCURSION TRIP

While waiting for the arrival of the Asbury Park excursion train at the east-bound Central Railroad depot, this morning, Viola, the four-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Roy VanArsdale, of 88 Jackson avenue, stumbled over a suit case and broke her right arm at the elbow. The child was in the company of her parents and was romping about the platform when she tripped over the case which contained the family lunches.

As she fell her right arm doubled up underneath her and a hurried examination revealed the fact that the limb was broken. The little one was removed to Muhlenberg Hospital, where the break was set.

JAMES E. M. TAMS PASSES STATE BAR EXAMINATION

James Elmore Moffett Tams, son of Mr. and Mrs. William H. Tams, of Trenton, and grandson of the late Mr. and Mrs. Elmore D. Moffett, of this city, is one of the five Trenton law students who passed the recent State bar examination.

Mr. Tams was born in Trenton, his father being president of the Greenwood Pottery Company of that place. The son was graduated from the State Model School in 1907, from Princeton University in 1911, and from the Harvard Law School in 1914. Immediately after finishing his studies at Harvard, Mr. Tams entered the office of Lindabury, Depue & Faulks in Newark, with which concern he will continue to be affiliated.

REV. MR. SHAW AWAY.

Rev. Edwin Shaw, pastor of the Seventh-Day Baptist church, left today for Westerly, Rhode Island, where he will take part in the institution of a Sabbath School Institute. He will be gone until next week. The services for the coming Sabbath will be in charge of the Rev. Edwin O. Moffett, of Guilderland Centre, N. Y.

MAXWELL GOES TO JAIL FOR 30 DAYS

Newark Chauffeur Given a Heavy Sentence by Justice Von Minden.

Robert Maxwell, of 29 William street, Newark, who was arrested at Dunellen, Tuesday night, by Marshal I. V. Smalley for driving an automobile while he was under the influence of liquor, was unable to secure a $10 fine and he was taken to New Brunswick this morning to serve a thirty days' jail sentence imposed by Justice von Minden.

As the stories which Maxwell told the court did not agree there was a belief that he might have stolen the car he was driving and in which there was a party of five Newarkers beside the driver. Maxwell was unable to produce a driver's license and this did not help his case much.

An investigation disclosed the fact that Maxwell did not steal the machine. It is owned by John Sesinsky, of 71 Market street, Newark, who had loaned it to Maxwell to carry on a taxi-cab business. Instead of his taking full advantage of this offer, Maxwell and five companions decided to take a "joy ride," and they eventually came to grief in Dunellen. Maxwell operated the car under a license good only in Newark. He refused to give the names of his five companions who returned home on a trolley, despite the fact that they left him penniless. Justice von Minden says that in the future he will not be lenient with those brought before him on a similar charge.

MRS. SARAH VERMEULE DIES IN 76TH YEAR

Former Plainfielder Passes Away at Daughter's Home in the West.

Mrs. Sarah Agnes Vermeule, widow of Daniel D. Vermeule, passed away Tuesday night at her late home in Fort D. A. Russell, Wyoming, after an illness of several years duration. Mrs. Vermuele was born February 25, 1839, when her father, Zachariah Webster, was a prominent citizen of this town, with large business interests and an active member of the Orthodox Society of Friends. Her mother was Agnes Marsh, a lifelong resident of this city also.

Most of Mrs. Vermeule's life was spent in her native town, her father's home on East Front street being a model of Quaker comfort and daintiness, and later on Watchung avenue and at the home of her son, Frank Vermeule, on Orchard street and East Sixth street. For several years past her home has been with her daughter, Margaret, the wife of Captain Samuel B. Pearson, of the Ninth U. S. Cavalry, stationed at Fort D. A. Russell, Wyoming.

Many old friends will recall Mrs. Vermeule's beauty of character, coupled with rare personal beauty. After the passing of the Orthodox—Friends—Meeting-house on East Front street, where she worshipped in her youth, she became an attendant at the First Presbyterian church on East Front street, of which Dr. Herring is now pastor. She is survived by one daughter, in whose home she passed away, and a son, Frank Vermeule, of East Sixth street.

The funeral services will be held at her late home and interment will be at Cheyenne, three miles from the fort.

CHARLES HOOK DIES AT HOME OF SON IN BORO

Charles Hook died at the residence of his son, Harry J. Hook, 73 Pearl street, North Plainfield, yesterday, aged 78 years. The funeral will be held tomorrow afternoon at the late residence at 3 o'clock, in charge of the Rev. George Hauser, of the German Reformed church. Interment will be made in Hillside cemetery.

Mr. Hook was born in Germany, but came to this country in boyhood. He located in New York, where he established a painting business, being by trade a grainer. He had lived in Plainfield and North Plainfield for twenty-seven years, following his trade until three years ago when old age compelled him to retire from active work. He made his home with his son, Harry J. Hook.

A widow and two children survive. They are Harry J., of the H. J. Hook Company, clothiers, of North avenue, and Mrs. A. B. Logan, of Sycamore avenue. He also leaves a brother who resides in Los Angeles. Mr. Hook belonged to a New York lodge of the American Order United Workmen. He attended the German Reformed church.

LOCAL PASTORS' VACATION PLANS

Where and How Plainfield Ministers Will Spend the Next Two Months.

MOUNTAINS OR SHORE

Pulpits Will Be Supplied By Visiting Divines While Regular Pastors Are Recuperating For Fall and Winter —Some Supplies Already Engaged.

Vacation time will take most of the ministers of Plainfield and North Plainfield away from the city during the coming weeks. Some of them will be away for a month or six weeks continuously, others will take week-end trips, remaining at home a part of the time. In the larger churches, where vacations are granted the pastors, supplies have been provided for the Sundays when the regular ministers will be absent.

Rev. Dr. John Sheridan Zelie, pastor of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, has gone to his old home in Maine, where he will remain until September 1. During his absence the Wednesday night prayer meetings will be discontinued, and the pulpit will be occupied by supplies.

Rev. Dr. Charles M. Anderson, pastor of the First Methodist Episcopal church, will spend a part of his vacation at Ocean Grove and a part of it at mountain resorts. He will arrange to be at Ocean Grove the latter part of August when the annual camp meeting is held there. Dr. Anderson has been granted the month of August for his vacation.

Rev. John Baltzly, pastor of All Saints' Unitarian church, will remain in Plainfield most of the time at his home, 917 Madison avenue. He will spend week-ends at various places, his pulpit being occupied by supplies when he is absent.

Point Pleasant will be the address of Rev. Cortlandt Mallery, rector of the Church of the Heavenly Rest, during the month of August.

Rev. Dr. Charles E. Herring, of the

SCOUTS OFFERED USE OF FARM FOR CAMPING

The boy scouts of Troops 15 and 9 spent the week-end at Camp Coriell, situated on the Coriell property on Terrill road. During their stay there they entertained many visitors, among whom was William de La R. Anderson, of Watchung, who gave an instructive talk on the "Indians of This Country."

The owner of the property on which the camp was pitched has kindly donated the use of this ideal spot to the scouts of the city provided they do not molest any of the neighboring farmers. Any troop desiring to make use of this kind offer can obtain full particulars by consulting Mr. Ostens, of Troop 15.

DIED SUDDENLY AFTER AN INDIGESTION ATTACK

Following an attack of acute indigestion which she suffered at 2 o'clock Wednesday morning, Mrs. Anna Elizabeth Carlson, wife of Carl Carlson, died suddenly yesterday afternoon at 3 o'clock at her home, 413 East Sixth street, from apoplexy. While subject to indigestion, Mrs. Carlson had been in perfect health until the latest attack, and her death followed in just thirteen hours. The funeral will be held tomorrow afternonn at 2:30 o'clock at the home and at 3 o'clock at the Swedish Pilgrim church, West Sixth street, with burial in Hillside cemetery.

Mrs. Carlson was in her forty-second year and was born in Sweden, where her parents and several brothers and sister still reside. She leaves in this country, beside a husband, a sister, Mrs. August Anderson, who resides at the East Sixth street address, and a brother, Gustave Anderson, of Brookline, Mass. The couple had been married twelve years and were very devoted. Mrs. Carlson was a member of a Swedish church in New York, and was an attendant at the Swedish Pilgrim church. She was very much interested in church and Sunday-school work.

BROTHER DIES IN BUFFALO.

Joseph Shea, of Buffalo, N. Y., a brother of Daniel Shea, of 108 West Fourth street, died suddenly at his home, this morning. Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Shea will leave this evening for Buffalo to attend the funeral.

Vernal J. Williams, of East Third street, has returned home after spending the week-end in the Catskills.

METHODIST CHURCH STEEPLE SHATTERED

Lightning's Pranks During a Heavy Thirty Minutes Downpour of Rain.

Quite some rain storm? Those who were out in it shortly after 1 o'clock today thought so. Something like a record-breaking fall was noted by Weather Observer John Neagle, who is authority for the statement that one inch of rain fell in thirty minutes. Culverts and gutters were unable to carry off the water fast enough and many of the streets in the western end of the city were flooded. In the low spots the water stood nearly a foot deep, noticeably under the railroad bridges. Central and Madison avenues, were impassable immediately after the rainfall ceased, but Park avenue was not so bad.

One loud clap of thunder following a sharp flash of lightning during the height of the storm led some people to believe that lightning had struck somewhere, which proved to be the case. One of the wooden balls on the tower of the First Methodist Episcopal church was shattered and a piece of the ball was broken off and fell to the street. The face of the town clock in the tower was blackened. No other damage by lightning was reported.

MORGAN IMPROVING, IS ABLE TO BE ABOUT HOUSE

New York, July 8.—It was stated at the office of J. P. Morgan & Co. this morning that Mr. Morgan's condition showed improvement. Mr Morgan was up and around the house the greater part of yesterday afternoon and expects to be around again today. A member of the firm said that Mr. Morgan's condition is excellent.

SMALL FIRE DISCOVERED IN A DILAPIDATED SHED

A small fire, the first in several weeks, occurred in North Plainfield, last night. The blaze was in an empty and dilapidated shed in the rear of the North Plainfield police station, on property owned by Moses Bender, of Plainfield.

Daniel Stello, who keeps a barber shop at 87 Somerset street, discovered the fire, and telephoned an alarm from police headquarters. The department responded and extinguished the blaze with the chemical. The fire was discovered at 8:45 o'clock. Its origin is unknown.

ENUMERATORS CANNOT GIVE OUT INFORMATION

For the benefit of those who may wonder why the census figures have not been made public in Plainfield and nearby towns, it is stated that a heavy penalty is attached by the State authorities to the enumerator disclosing any information concerning the census. All such information is given out officially at Trenton by those authorized to do so.

There is one way by which the population of any city or town can be obtained in advance, however. That is by means of the bills of the enumerators when they are made public by the Board of Freeholders, as each enumerator receives two cents for every name tabulated.

CHAUFFEUR "JOY-RIDER" FINED $10 FOR OFFENSE

Answering to a charge of taking his employer's car without a permit and keeping it over the week-end, Lemuel Donaldson, a chauffeur employed by Fred VanZant, was fined $10 when arraigned before Judge DeMeza in the city court this morning. This sentence, together with his two days' sojourn in the city jail since his arrest by Captain John J. Flynn, Tuesday afternoon, was the price Donaldson paid for a week-end "joy-ride."

In passing sentence Judge DeMeza gave the offender a heart-to-heart talk in which he emphasized the fact that he intended to put a stop to "young snips" taking cars without leave and keeping them until they got good and ready to bring them back.

CRUISER AMALFI TORPEDO VICTIM

Austrian Submarine Sinks Vessel But Nearly All of Crew Are Saved.

ADVANCE AT SOUCHEZ

French Report Taking of Trenches and Prisoners — United States Takes Over Sayville Wireless Plant.

Rome via Paris, July 8—The Italian armored cruiser Amalfi was torpedoed and sunk at dawn Wednesday by an Austrian submarine, while taking part in a reconnaissance in the upper Adriatic, it was officially announced Wednesday night by the Ministry of Marine. Most of the crew were saved.

Standing at attention on the deck of the Amalfi, the officers and crew cheered King Victor Emmanuel and the Italian nation as the vessel was sinking. Not a man moved to save his life until the commander of the cruiser gave the order to jump overboard. Nearly all on board were saved.

The Amalfi had been engaged in scout duty in the Adriatic, accompanied by other Italian war ships. She was relatively a small vessel and for that reason steamed ahead of the scudron seeking Austrian war ships.

The statement says:

"A reconnaissance in force was accomplished last night in the upper Adriatic. The Amalfi, which took part in the reconnaissance, was torpedoed at dawn this morning by an Austrian submarine and soon listed heavily to port.

"The commander before giving orders to the crew to jump overboard cried, 'Long live the King; long live Italy!' The entire crew, drawn up along the stern, echoed the shout, giving a remarkable exhibition of courage and discipline.

"The commander, who was the last to leave the ship, slipped overboard shortly before the Amalfi sunk. Nearly all the officers and crew were saved."

The Amalfi, which was completed in 1908, had a displacement of 9,958 tons. She was 426 feet long. Her complement in time of peace was 684 men and officers.

Washington, July 8—The forecasts of the coming German reply to the second Lusitania note have proved unsatisfactory to the President and he has so informed Ambassador Gerard, this was learned today on unimpeachable authority.

Because of the alleged unneutral use by Germany of the wireless station at Sayville, L. I., the United States Government today, decided to take over the plant and operate it.

Paris, July 8—Official announcement was made today that the new French offensive has been successful in capturing a line of trenches north of Souchez. All the defenders were killed except several who were captured.

The French war statement issued this afternoon follows:

"In the region to the north of Arras numerous infantry actions developed last evening and night, between Angres and Souchez. A German attack which was preceded by violent bombardment was completely repulsed. To north of the Souchez station we made an attack, which permitted us to draw nearer to the village. We captured a line of German trenches after having killed their defenders, and we advanced beyond that point making a few prisoners and taking a cannon.

"Soissons has been bombarded.

"In Argonne rifle and artillery fire was unceasing all night. At daybreak in region of Marie Therese, the Germans attempted to make a sortie but were driven back.

"Between the Meuse and Moselle there was considerable activity during the night."

Rome, July 8—Official statement says the Austrians attacked Passo Campo, but were repulsed. Italian artillery has begun bombarding Lacorte, Taglia and Tresassi, causing heavy damage. On the Carso plateau, Italians are slowly progressing. 15,000 Austrians were taken prisoners in last three days.

Petrograd, July 8—According to report from commandant at Sebas Stopok, five Turkish sailing vessels and four Turkish galleys laden with coal were sunk by Russian warships at Sanguli Dank, Asia Minor.

Berlin, July 8—The bombardment of Arras, France, resulted in the destruction of great British stores there and also prevented the regrouping of the French forces, it was officially announced today.

Berlin, July 8—The German war statement issued today says:

"Western theatre—West of Souchez the French succeeded in pene-

DUNELLEN COUNCIL HAS BUSY SESSION

Routine Matters Occupy the Attention of Borough Fathers.

Routine matters occupied the attention of the Dunellen Council at its adjourned July meeting last night. A petition signed by some twenty-five merchants and residents was presented, requesting the Council to put a stop to the distribution of circulars by out of town concerns. Judge David S. Campbell circulated the petition and spoke in favor of adopting an ordinance prohibiting it.

Councilman Ryman said there was no doubt about the practice being a nuisance and he suggested it be covered by a license. John Fedderman also spoke against the practice.

The petition was referred to the law and ordinance committee, which will probably draw up an ordinance covering it. The report of the firm of George W. Fuller, the engineers in charge of the sewer work, stated that 7 3-10 miles of sewer pipe had been laid to date. This is a little more than 50 per cent. of the total mileage. Current bills aggregating in the neighborhood of $1,200 were ordered paid. A bill for $6,675.84, covering collecting sewerage work, and another bill for $1,171.49, covering joint sewerage work, were also ordered paid. Another disbursement was the bill of the Garafano Construction Company, the constructors of the Madison avenue drain, for $2,249.84.

A number of amendments were made in the contract for the construction of the North avenue drain. These changes were made necessary by the fact that the pipe of this drain is going to be laid in the same trunk with the collecting sewer pipe by the H. K. Corbin Co., the collecting sewer contractors.

Contractor A. H. Burdick was present in connection with the extension of the sanitary sewer pipe some 381 feet along Walnut street, east of Washington avenue. Mr. Burdick stated that he had already commenced to develop the extensive tract of land which he owns there. He is erecting a house facing on Walnut street; is laying a drain to make the tract dry and intends to lay a sidewalk. He said that this wet section had been a menace to all property lying between there and the Whittier School and asked for the co-operation of the Council.

A request made to the Council by Mr. Burdick that they purchase a carload of cinders for him to be used in connection with the construction of this drain was granted. The total cost of these cinders will be $20.

Benjamin Thorn, residing on the corner of Centre street and Fairview avenue, was present in connection with the extension of the sewer system west of Fairview avenue. The sewer committee was empowered to act in this matter. The probabilities are that the system will be extended some 400 feet. Borough Engineer Churchill reported that the Madison avenue and Front street storm sewer are practically completed. Recorder Campbell reported that his department collected $116 in fines last month.

Mr. and Mrs. Nicola Strazza, of North avenue, are entertaining a niece from New York city.

Contractors Kirchner and Vogt have been awarded contracts of erecting two houses at Lincoln. One of these houses will be erected for J. J. Malloy and the other for Frederick Schuller.

William G. Holfon Council will install officers on Tuesday evening.

Mrs. Henry Kirchner, Sr., of Lincoln avenue, has fully recovered from the effects of her recent operation and she is able to be up and around.

The many friends of Jacob Fern, of Whittier avenue, who have been greatly concerned over his present illness, will be glad to know that he was better yesterday.

Mrs. George M. Miller and child, of Plainfield, spent the Fourth in the borough the guests of Mrs. Miller's parents, Mr. and Mrs. M. L. Frescolm, of New Market road.

Edward Maurer, Jr., of Mountainview Terrace, who is spending the summer with his folks at Lake Hopatcong, was a visitor here on the Fourth.

Frank Kellogg, of Plainfield, has rented the Terrence Quinn house on Prospect avenue, through the John Fedderman agency. Mr. Kellogg expects to take possession either today or tomorrow.

Over $250 was cleared on the Fourth at the picnic given in the woods on Columbia street by the Hungarians of this place, for the benefit of the widows and orphans of Austria-Hungary.

The next street to be tackled by the sewer contractors will be Grove street. The force of Engineer Churchill gave line and grade for the pipe to be laid along this thoroughfare yesterday.

The residence of John Mann, on Grove street, is being re-painted.

JUNIORS WILL INSTALL AND INITIATE A CLASS

The regular meeting of the P. O. S. of A. to be held in W. G. Holton Hall tonight, will be featured by the installation of officers. The officers to be installed are Elwood Gary, past president; Clifford Fenner, president; Emile Vogel, vice-president; Edward VanBenschoten, master of forms; Cornelius Ryno, recording secretary; Fred Gary, conductor; Allen Frederick, inside sentinel; Harry Opdycke, outside sentinel; Melvin Fritts, trustee, and Edward Shively, Elwood Gary and James Teeling, representatives to the State camp, which meets in Elizabeth this time.

The meeting will also be featured by the initiation of a class of 15. Ten of these fifteen are local candidates. The remaining five are from New Brunswick and will be initiated into the order for the camp there. Lots of visitors are expected to be present from New Brunswick. After the transaction of the business and the completion of the ceremonies refreshments will be served and a social hour enjoyed.

Assessor and Mrs. J. H. L. Peters recently entertained Fred Russell, of Roseville, and Herman Peters and family, of New York city.

Miss Lilla R. Stites, daughter of Tax Collector and Mrs. Isaac J. Stites, has returned from a visit at Pleasant Plains, S. I., where she has an aunt, Mrs. Frances Leggett.

C. B. LAKE IMPROVED.

Charles B. Lake, of Jersey City, a former resident, who has been suffering from larnygitis for the past month, the latter two weeks of which he has been spending in the borough, has been greatly benefitted by the change and he left yesterday for Yonkers, N. Y., where he will visit his parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Lake. He will probably return to the borough and spend the greater portion of the summer here.

RETURNS FROM VACATION.

Captain B. A. Cole, of Washington avenue, who has been enjoying a ten days' vacation from his duties as pilot on one of the ferryboats of the New Jersey Central, has returned from a week's trip through Pennsylvania. Among the places he visited were Tamaqua, Wilkes-Barre, Scranton and Bethlehem. The captain called his trip a bachelor's excursion and he said he had one fine time. He took many beautiful photographs of scenic Pennsylvania.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Johnson of 320 New Market road, have been entertaining Mr. Johnson's parents from Baltimore, Md.

FOURTH VICTIM IMPROVING.

Frank Penrose, of New Market, who was accidently shot in the palm of his hand on the Fourth while in the act of removing from his revolver blank cartridge shells, all of which he believed to have been fired off, is doing nicely. It was at first thought that tetanus would develop, but it is believed that all danger from that source has been passed. Dr. M. J. Whitford has been attending the young man.

'Plains & Fanwood.

Mrs. J. C. Briggs, who makes her home with her daughter, Mrs. Frederick Sherwood, of Martine avenue, has left on an extended trip to Portland, Oregon.

Mrs. George Kyte, of Martine avenue, left yesterday on a trip to Denver, Col., where she will spend some time.

The Boy Scouts of the 'Plains are now sure that they will go camping during the last two weeks in August. A hike will open the pleasure trip, with Forest Hill Lakes, near Dover, as the objective point, where camp will be pitched. Although the proceeds from the recent entertainment netted in the vicinity of $35, the boys are preparing to conduct an ice cream and candy booth at the "community picnic" to help swell the camping fund. It has been decided to give an exhibition of tower building, wireless telegraphy, and other stunts at the picnic, which will be on August 11.

It has been practically decided to hold the "community picnic" along the banks of Green brook in the rear of the Johnson property. This, with the announcement of August 11 as the date and Governor Fielder as the speaker, completes the more important details.

Florence O'Sullivan, the new officer in the 'Plains, will also occupy the role of truant officer for the township schools, but will not be called upon to fill the duties of his office until the middle of September.

With the progress of work on the trunk line sewer for Plainfield and several other nearby towns agitation is again rife in both the 'Plains and borough for the extending of the lines so as to include the two local towns. Borough residents seem to be more interested in the improvement and have gone more deeply into the matter with the view of obtaining the approximate cost of such a move. It has been considered by the Borough Council, where someone advanced the information that it would mean $12,000 to connect with the trunk line at the Plainfield boundary. Nothing can be done about the matter until Plainfield finishes up to the Terrill road line, and then the local governing bodies will undoubtedly take action.

Following the plan of many other Methodist churches, the hours of worship at the Scotch Plains Methodist church have been changed in several instances. Instead of meeting in the afternoon, Sunday-school will be in the morning at 9:45, while the morning service will be at 11 o'clock. The changes become effective on Sunday.

A missionary meeting of the Sunshine Weavers will be held tonight.

German Valley. and Chester

Mr. and Mrs. Warren Newkirk, of Riverdale, are guests of Mr. and Mrs. John W. Jarvis.

Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Hoffman, of Mendham, have ended a visit to Mr. Hoffman's brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. William Apgar.

Mrs. George E. Volk returned Tuesday, to her home in Plainfield, after visiting Mrs. Margaret C. Miller.

The Lutheran church is closed for three weeks. The pastor, Rev. William S. Delp, is on his vacation. Mr. Delp and family left yesterday for western Pennsylvania.

Miss Carrie A. Wiley, a teacher in the High School, returned yesterday from Memorial Hospital, Morristown, where she underwent an operation for appendicitis.

A son was born Tuesday to Mr. and Mrs. George Cressman.

James Mattison returned Tuesday to Washington, after a short stay at his summer home here.

Miss Mildred S. Hoyt, teacher of the third, fourth and fifth grades in the local school last year, has taken a position in Essex county for the coming school term.

PASTORS' VACATION PLANS

First Presbyterian church, has a cottage at Spring Lake where he spends every summer, and will be found there this year.

While the pulpit of Grace Episcopal church will be supplied during a part of the summer, the rector, Rev. E. Vicars Stevenson, will remain in Plainfield during the next two months.

No definite plans have been made for the summer by Rev. Edward Ralston, pastor of the Netherwood Reformed church. He expects to be out of town for a Sunday or two during July or August, but he will take no regular summer vacation.

Rev. Dr. Birney S. Hudson, pastor of the Park Avenue Baptist church, and family, will spend the month of August, which time the church has granted him as a vacation, in Vermont. The pulpit will be supplied by good preachers during his absence.

The General Conference of his denomination at Milton, Wisconsin, the last week in August, will take Rev. Edwin Shaw, pastor of the Seventh-Day Baptist church, to that place. Mr. Shaw's parents reside there and he will spend a good part of the month of August in Milton. He will be accompanied by his family. During the first weeks in August, while Mr. Shaw is away, the pulpit of his church will be occupied by Rev. Dr. T. S. Gardiner, editor of the Sabbath Recorder, while Rev. F. J. Bakker, of Plainfield, will preach the last Sabbath. Mr. Bakker is a retired missionary of the Seventh-Day Baptist denomination from Holland.

Rev. J. O. McKelvey, pastor of Warren chapel, and family, will leave August 2 for the Thousand Islands, in the St. Lawrence River, to remain away until September 1.

Rev. John Y. Broek, pastor of Trinity Reformed church, will be away for the month of August. All the Sundays in that month have not been provided for in the way of supplies, but Rev. Frank Fletcher, of North Plainfield, and Rev. Edward S. Ralston, of the Netherwood Reformed church, will be heard two Sundays.

No definite plans for the summer have been made by Rev Dr. Philip B. Strong, pastor of the First Baptist church. He has been granted leave of absence for the month of August, during which time the pulpit will be supplied.

Rev. Frederic L. Greene, of Hope chapel, is spending his vacation in New York State.

TELEGRAM FOR DR. STRONG.

The weekly prayer meeting at the First Baptist church last night was led by Deacon Edward L. Bonny, and was well attended. The pastor, Rev. Dr. Philip B. Strong, is representing the church at the Anti-Saloon League convention which is meeting this week at Atlantic City, and a telegram from him was read at last night's meeting which stated that the convention was surpassing all expectations as to enthusiasm and attendance. Dr. Strong expects to be back in time to occupy his pulpit Sunday morning.

BAPTIST C. E. PICNIC.

The members of the Christian Endeavor Society of the First Baptist church will picnic Saturday afternoon at the Christian Endeavor Camp at Scotch Plains. The Endeavorers will meet at the church at 3 o'clock, and either walk or trolley to Scotch Plains, as they elect later on. Each member will be expected to provide his or her own luncheon.

BOUNDARY LINE STILL DISPUTED

Question of Street Repairs Raised at July Meeting of Fanwood Council.

COMMITTEE WILL ACT

Arc Lights to Be Installed at Martine and North Avenues—Junk Dealers' Ordinance Passed on Final Reading—Bills Ordered Paid.

The question of the legality of boundary lines between the borough and township was discussed at some length at the July meeting of the Fanwood Borough Council last night. This point was raised because there has been a dispute as to which municipality should stand the expense of repairing Westfield road, King street and Summit avenue these thoroughfares being involved in the boundary lines as shown on the maps.

It was claimed that these streets are in the township. Acting upon the advice of counsel, the Borough Council declared it to be illegal to have boundary lines running at the side of a thoroughfare, the contention being that they should be in the middle of the street. Because of the controversy repairs have not been made and it is said that the streets have become dangerous to traffic.

The street committee was authorized to try and settle the dispute, for if the borough is responsible for half of the upkeep of these streets, it will mean a larger street appropriation and in addition the maps will have to be changed.

It is probable that a large arc light will be placed at the intersection of Martine and North avenues to minimize the danger of accidents at that point. The plan of swinging the light in the centre of the intersecting streets is favored and this would do away with two smaller lights now in use there.

The junk dealers' ordinance was passed on third reading. This will govern hawkers, peddlers, circus exhibitions, etc., by providing for a nominal fee as a license.

The installation of the police alarm system which has been held up owing to a delay in signing contracts, will be completed within the next two weeks. It will consist of a telephone and electric light to be placed at a central point and will increase the police efficiency at a cost of $70 per annum. It was reported that water connection has been made with the Borough Hall as authorized.

F. C. Mahnekin, of lower Martine avenue, petitioned to have a street light changed so as to have one located in front of his residence. It was decided that to grant the request would mean considerable expense, but it was thought possible that two more lights could be located on Martine avenue, thus completing the circuit to the boundary line. The proper committee was given power to act in the matter. The street committee reported that work would soon be started macadamizing lower Farley avenue. The amount of cash on hand was reported to be $260.26 and bills amounting to $864.32 were ordered paid.

IONA COUNCIL PLANS SOCIABLE FOR FALL

At a meeting of the Past Chiefs' Association of Iona Council, No. 14, D. of P., last night, at the home of Mrs. Edward Bowman, West Second street, plans were made for holding a series of sociables during the fall and winter, the first one to take place on the first meeting night of Iona Council in September.

The sociables will be given primarily to raise money with which to pay the expenses of the past chiefs of Iona Council to the annual convention of the order, which is to be held at Atlantic City in October. There are twenty-five past chiefs.

Officers of Iona Council, recently elected, will be installed next Thursday night. Cranford Council has been invited to be present, and a good time is expected.

BIBLE CLASS MEETING.

The Y. W. C. A. Bible class will hold a meeting this evening at which refreshments will be served. A meeting was scheduled to be held on the lawn of Mrs. Mead's residence on East Front street, this afternoon, but owing to the showers the Y. W. C. A. veranda may be the scene of the gathering.

CONSECRATION MEETING.

The monthly consecration meeting is to be held by the Trinity Christian Endeavor Society, Sunday evening at 6:45 o'clock. On Monday evening the monthly business meeting will be held. It is hoped that all the Endeavorers will attend, if possible.

YOUNG PEOPLE TO MEET.

The Young People's Society of St. Peter's Lutheran church will meet at the home of Miss Emily Eckhardt, on Regent street, tomorrow night at 8 o'clock.

Because it has had some use, and is, therefore, "second-hand," may not greatly impair its usefulness to you. So watch the 'For Sale' ads.

THRONG LEAVES CITY ON FIRST EXCURSION

Thirteen Hundred Plainfielders go to "the Town Without a Frown."

Threatening clouds, bearing out every indication that rain would fall before noon, had little effect on the plans for the first Sunday-school excursion of the year which left for Asbury Park this morning, 1,300 people filling the two sections of twenty-three cars. Representative delegations from the First M. E., Grace M. E., Dunellen M. E. and Monroe Avenue M. E. churches, together with the usual gathering of excursion clans, made up the throng. When the train pulled into the "Town without a frown" shortly after 10:30 this forenoon the Methodists and their guests were greeted by Old Sol, who had just started to poke his head through the clouds. The atmosphere immediately changed from one of gloom to sunshine and merriment and the trip to the beach assured the recreation seekers that the surf was at its best.

The trip to the shore was made without incident, a committee headed by Samuel Bingaman, looking after the comforts of the party between Plainfield and Asbury Park. The return trip will start at 7 o'clock, the first section arriving in this city about 9 o'clock.

FORMER PASTOR HERE.

Rev. G. Kennedy Newell, former pastor of Hope chapel, preaching at that institution from 1891 to 1901 but at present pastor of the Sixth Presbyterian church, of Chicago, will occupy the pulpit of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, Sunday morning, August 22. It is also planned to have Mr. Newell occupy his former pulpit at the evening service.

In "the Game of Life" generally, as well as in want advertising, persistence wins in nine cases out of ten.

BUTTER

We don't want to bore you with our talk on butter, but we want to impress on your mind the fact that our butter is of the highest possible quality and cannot be surpassed at any price. You will find our quotations from three to five cents per pound lower than most dealers.

33c PER POUND.

"24-HOUR" EGGS

The satisfaction of knowing positively that the eggs you are eating are strictly fresh is worth a great deal. These eggs of ours are brought in to us every day by Mr. Sims, the producer, from his henneries on Clinton avenue. Sometimes we have to wait for the hens to lay them. Last Saturday we sent eggs out of our store at three in the afternoon that were taken out of the nest at noon. Can't beat that very much, can you?

38c PER DOZEN

NEW POTATOES

The potatoes are still coming very freely and are of fine quality. We have another fine lot for Friday and Saturday and we are going to make you a lower price even than last week, and we thought that was almost giving them away. This undoubtedly will be the lowest price you will hear of this season:

COFFEE

Last week we gave you a special price on Yacht Club Coffee to get you to give it a trial. We are going to make you that same offer again this week. Up to last week this coffee has never been sold at less than 35 cents. It makes a good smooth cup of coffee with some body to it. In fact it is blended with one purpose only in view and that is: Cup Quality.

Food Value

THESE eminent authorities for years, in advocating beer instead of medicines in cases of poor nerves, poor blood, bad digestion, malnutrition and the like, say:—

Prof. Adolph Cluss, Royal College, Vienna:—
"It makes good the waste of human tissue, due to excessive mental or physical activity."

Prof. Jos. Zeisler, Northwestern University:—
"The small percentage of alcohol in beer induces medical men to favor it—it does not make drunkards."

Prof. Willis King, Kansas City, Mo.:—
"I have prescribed beer for forty years in many cases and always found direct and beneficial results."

Dr. Henry Davy, Pres. British Medical Society, London, Eng.:
"Beer, bread and cheese for a meal is infinitely more scientific than the American meal of bread, tea and jam.

The World's Greatest Scientists Assert:

The proper use of Pure Beer is beneficial as a food drink because it has great properties for building up the system. Good beer makes good blood, because it contains iron; it makes solid, healthy flesh, because its proteids are almost instantly assimilated. Pure beer is the best drink—for man and woman—because it is mildly exhilarating, wholesomely tonic in its effect, conserves human energy, aids digestion and steadies the nerves.

When, therefore, we find that renowned scientists the world over indorse the food value of beer, we should feel no hesitancy in using Pure Beer in our daily life.

PROCTOR'S THEATRE

Don't fail to see Edward Abeles at Proctor's Theatre tonight, in that most exciting and romantic farce of Henry W. Savage, "The Million." Certainly a thrilling mystery with as many laughs as the title. This is among the best pictures of its kind to be seen on the screen, being a Paramount production.

For tomorrow afternoon and evening, "The Devil's Daughter" is scheduled, this being a Fox five-part production, and is worthy of special effort to see. A play of mystery, sensation, love and thrills, all put into one.

"Elaine's Romance" is also to be shown tomorrow, and those who have been following this serial photo-play should not miss this week's installment. Another episode of the serial, pronounced by all critics as "the serial beautiful," will be shown on Saturday, both afternoon and evening.

"O-18" or "A Message from the Sky," a four-act production, is on the books for Saturday, this play featuring Jane Gail as "O-18." A masterful drama of secret service and a foreign government. A series of episodes never to be forgotten.

Plainfield, N. J., July 8, 1915.

THE GAS RATE APPEAL.

As one of the cities affected by the decision of the New Jersey courts in the 90 cent gas rate case, Plainfield is much interested in the appeal to the United States Supreme Court. If the usual rapidity with which that court works is evidenced in this case, we will know in the course of three or four years what that body thinks of the proposition that the price of gas should be a factor in fixing the value of a franchise, and the increased value of the franchise must be taken into consideration and used as a reason for raising the price of gas.

A majority of our own Court of Errors and Appeals refused to endorse such reasoning; nor would it consent that four members of the court should be permitted to make a ruling that was directly opposed to the views held by ten or eleven of the sixteen members of the same court. The right of Judge Heppenheimer to sit in a case in the outcome of which he is interested, is not likely to be raised in the highest court.

Be careful about signing petitions. There is one in circulation now in this city pleading for clemency for a man who has been convicted of a heinous crime, a crime which can have no extenuating circumstances. While the petition is in circulation the court has been persuaded to postpone sentence of the man in the case. The details of the trial and conviction were so revolting that the local newspapers were compelled to print only the vague statement that conviction had been procured. Every father, brother, or other person who may have the real welfare of the community at heart should thoroughly acquaint themselves with all the details of the case and refuse to sign this petition. The man was convicted after a thorough trial, by a jury well above the average, and his case lacks any feature that calls for the slightest clemency.

There is no indication that times are hard in the report made by Motor Vehicle Commissioner William L. Dill for the first six months of 1915. The receipts of the department for that time were $857,154.30, as compared with a total for the entire year of 1914 of $814,535.30, an increase over the preceding twelve months of $42,619. Probably the best evidence that hundreds of new owners are buying cars is given in the statement that during June all records for drivers' examinations were broken, 6,249 seeking the privilge of whom 483 were refused.

The cub reporter rises to ask "when is a fire engine not a fire engine?" and the staff with one accord reply "When it is a Nott!" Let's see, how long has that machine been garaged at the city's expense in the Netherwood house? It should either be refused, or the city father's should insist upon it being delivered at a substantial reduction over the contract price. First thing we know a year will have passed without it being put into service.

The press agent at Atlantic Highlands has gone the sea serpent story one better. He assures the world in all solemnity that the crowds at that resort were so great over July Fourth that the people were compelled to sleep on the beach. Just as if anyone thinks enough of Atlantic Highlands to do that!

Senator Martine having returned from his Hawaiian trip, the Camden Post Telegram suggests that a statement from our distinguished fellow citizen on the comparative virtues of Hawaiian pineapple juice and Jersey applejack as a beverage would not be out of order. What about it, Senator?

A general reduction of telephone rates has gone into effect in New York State, but there does not seem to be any evidence of one being made in this neck of the woods. Oh! for a regular investigation of the rates by the Public Utility Commission!

In his monthly report to the Common Council on Monday night Overseer of the Poor Dunham stated among other things that the "potatoes at the poor farm were looking good." Indicating that the city's tubers are possessed of optics of unusual ability.

One of the city's well known residents from whom we seldom are able to print a direct message will be the contributing editor for Saturday. He will tell about a recent trip which he took, and we know that everyone will be interested in what he has to say.

Abe Martin has all the men with him, when he says that he cannot understand why it is that men can wear the same dress suit for twenty-five years, and the women cannot find a gown that they can wear on two or three occasions.

The greatest service that Frank Holt, the man who shot J. Pierpont Morgan, did for the rest of mankind was performed when he committed suicide and relieved New York State of supporting him indefinitely in an asylum.

We had a very mild winter. Is it to be followed by a cool summer? Certainly thus far the weather has been all that could be desired, and Plainfield has proven an ideal summer resort.

'Tis a merry little theatrical war that now interests the movie fans in Plainfield. Pretty soon one of the houses will be offering a cash prize to anyone that will come to see their show.

trating our outer trenches on a front of 80 yards, but were driven out by a counter attack. Two attacks by the enemy on positions we captured west of Apremont forest lasted during the day and night. They were unsuccessful. On the entire front there were lively artillery battles.

"Eastern theatre—An attack from the direction of Kovno was repulsed with heavy losses to the enemy. At Steuga a few Russian trenches were taken and retained. Our opponents failed in efforts to take away from us Hill No. 95, which we captured yesterday.

"Southeastern theatre—Situation between Dneister and upper Vistula unchanged. West of the upper Vistula a number of positions of the enemy were taken."

New York, July 8 — A cable from Rome to the Evening Sun says that it is learned there that at a conference in Vienna on Sunday between Herr Von Bethmann-Hollweg, Von Jagow, Count Burian, Count Tisza and M. Maporescu, ex-premier of Roumania, the Teutonic allies offered the cession of Bukowina and Bessarabia as compensation for Roumania's neutrality until the end of the war. The Roumanian envoys are said to have rejected the proffer as insufficient but it was said the offer will be increased by partial concessions in Transsylvania.

DENIES POLITICAL MOTIVE IN CENSUS

Lucius T. Russell, Democratic Chairman, Repudiates Story in Circulation.

Positive denial of the story that the State Association of Democratic County Chairmen had asked that a roster of Democratic voters be secured through the census enumerators, is made by Lucius T. Russell. Mr. Russell is chairman of this body and also of the Union County Democratic Committee. The report was started by a letter written by State Senator Charles O'Connor Hennessy, chairman of the Bergen County Democratic Committee, which read as follows:

"The State organization of Democratic county chairmen has determined to prepare a list of all the voters of the State and also of the persons over 18 years of age in each voting district in the State and the Democratic county cimmittee in each county is expected to get this list together through the Democratic census enumerators.

"I enclose you some blank sheets with the request that you will endeavor to prepare the list at your earliest convenience and return the same addressed to me at Hackensack.

"I am aware that this is asking you to do for the Democratic party considerable work for which you will receive no special compensation, but as I am informed, that this work is being done by the enumerators in other parts of the State, I assume that the Bergen county enumerators will be willing to do as much for the cause as those in other counties.

"At any rate, I would like to hear from you in the matter."

Mr. Russell, when questioned, asserted that he had never suggested having the census enumerators do such work, and that the State organization had made no such move. James P. Kelly, supervisor of the census in Elizabeth, indignantly denied that the census enumerators in that city were doing any political work.

FROM THIRTY TO FORTY DEAD IN CLOUDBURST

Cincinnati, July 8—Latest estimates of the dead as the result of the cyclone that swept this vicinity last night are 33. A large number of persons were injured. Considerable damage was done to property. Wire service was poor.

Tornadoes starting in the Missouri River valley and accompanied by cloudbursts, hail storms and an eighty-mile-an-hour wind also caused the death of at least seven in the environs of St. Louis and supposedly scores in different parts of Illinois, Indiana and Missouri. The storm extended from Ohio to Nebraska and did more than $2,000,000 damage.

Several hundred persons are missing. Most of these were passengers on board two excursion steamboats plying on the Ohio River. They were caught in the storm, but whether they have been able to make port has not yet been ascertained. Wires are down everywhere and it is impossible to communicate with other places.

It was ascertained definitely today that a special train on the Pennsylvania, carrying race horses from the recently ended meeting at Latonia to the Eastern tracks was wrecked at Terrace Park, a short distance from this city..

Nineteen of what are considered the best horses that raced at the Latonia meeting were killed.

It was also reported that two caretakers were killed and nineteen others injured, including several jockeys.

The large racing stable of E. R. Bradley was on this train.

The terrific wind blew over houses, wrecked several churches, overturned freight and passenger cars, uprooted trees, injured thousands of acres of wheat and rye and hay, lifted pedestrians bodily and crushed them against houses or trees and snapped off telephone and telegraph poles as though they were match sticks.

PROGRESS REPORTED IN SECURING RIGHT-OF-WAY

The committee on right-of-way from the Joint Sanitary Sewage Commission, together with J. Edward Ashmead, representing the firm of Lindabury, Depue & Faulks, counsel, met about twenty property-owners at the school house, Greenbrook, last night in an effort to complete its work of securing the necessary rights of way for the trunk sewer. The meeting was a harmonious one and some progress was made. This committee will make its report to the Somerset County Court on July 15 in connection with the condemnation proceedings.

The commissioners for Middlesex county met all but one of the affected property owners at the borough hall, Lincoln, today, and also made considerable progress. The joint commission will meet again on July 16.

STATE DEPARTMENT HEADS WILL MEET

Gov. Fielder Calls Conference at Trenton to Discuss Efficiency Plans.

Trenton, July 8.—Governor Fielder issued a formal call today for a conference of the heads of certain State departments to be held in his office at the State House next Tuesday, July 13, at 11 o'clock a. m. The object of the gathering will be to put into effect the provisions of Chapter 190, of the Laws of 1915, which is an act "to promote co-operation and efficiency in the engineering work of the State." It is one of the laws providing for the general system of economy and efficiency in State government.

The act provides that certain State departments enumerated there in shall be represented at a monthly meeting to be held for the purpose of discussing methods of co-operation and co-ordination in the engineering work of the State to promote efficiency and avoid duplication. It is provided that the Governor shall call the first meeting, he to be ex-officio a member and chairman of the meeting. A secretary is to be elected, who shall call subsequent meetings.

REMBRANDT'S CAREER.

It Is a Sermon on the Fickleness of Popular Approval.

The career of Rembrandt, now generally acknowledged to be one of the very greatest of painters, is an illustration of the fickleness of popular approval. During the last twenty-three years of his life he disappeared "in a shadow like that which envelops the mystery of his painting."

In "Sketches of Great Painters," a book by Edwin Watts Chubb, there is an interesting paragraph—interesting alike to the philosopher and to the lover of art. "A generation after the death of Rembrandt his great-nephew observed that 'a short time ago the ignorance of reputed connoisseurs was so gross with regard to the work of the mighty Rembrandt that it was possible to buy one of his portraits for sixpence.'

"Two centuries later an American millionaire, according to current reports, paid $600,000 for one production, 'The Mill.' When he died 13 florins were spent on his funeral; in 1906, when celebrating his tercentenary, Leyden and Amsterdam spent thousands in his honor. When he lived his house, Saskia's home, was sold under the hammer of the sheriff; now the municipality has purchased the property, which has become the shrine of worshipful admirers, who come from all parts of the earth to see the place where once lived Rembrandt. Within a generation of his work criticism believed that 'the vulgar and prosaic aspects of a subject were the only ones he was capable of noting' and that his was a 'manner founded on delusion.'

"Today we say that Rembrandt was universal in his sympathy, seeing where others were blind; that the rat-catcher as well as the saint, the aged beggar as well as the prince, the wrinkled old Dutch vrouw as well as Cupid, were seen as worthy of the interpreting brush of the painter or needle of the etcher; that he is of the race of Michelangelo and Velasquez, of Titian and Raphael, of Leonardo and Rubens."

THE STRAIN ON OUR EYES.

Modern Conditions, Not Poorer Vision, Necessitate Glasses.

The question, "Are our eyes weaker?" is frequently asked by people who observe closely and who are dismayed by the remarkably large number of people who wear glasses today as compared with a generation or so ago. Our eyes are not degenerating. The eyes of the present generation are in no wise poorer, weaker or inferior to those of our ancestors, notwithstanding the fact that a far greater percentage wear glasses than formerly.

The probabilities are that the eyes of the human race are neither weaker nor stronger today than were those of our forefathers, unless it can be proved that the whole physique of the race today is weaker or stronger. As is the whole physical body, so are the eyes.

But much more is required of our eyes now than was ever required of our ancestors. The strenuous struggle for existence today, the ever increasing complexity of our modern civilized life, the multiplying knowledge of the world in all lines of human endeavor, knowledge that must be mastered if we would rise and achieve success, put far greater strain on the eyes of this generation than on those that have gone before.

Our schools are far more exacting and severe, the business and scientific world require closer application and more painstaking care than ever before. Electricity has turned night into day, and much more work is now done by artificial illumination than in the past. Sharp competition in every line makes it necessary to have the best vision obtainable.

Because of these exacting demands on our eyes, latent imperfections, errors of refraction, causing eye strain, are brought out and made manifest by symptoms of discomfort and distress, compelling us to seek the improvement of vision and the comfort afforded by properly fitting lenses.—Journal of the American Medical Association.

IN LILAC TIME.

Just such a day as this, perhaps,
Of mist and driving rain,
A hundred years ago they stood
By this old window pane:
Two lovers leaning here to gaze
Together at the rain.

Perhaps it was the lilac storm
As now. Look! Do you see
The lilac branches toss and wave
Their plumes on every tree?
Whom are they beckoning? Two ghosts
Unseen by you and me.

I think the fire blazed on the hearth
As now, right cheerily,
Fon portraits on the wall, then fresh
Looked down benignantly;
And then, I think, she raised her eyes
To his quite suddenly.

Two lovers leaning here to look
Out of the self-same pane
Down the broad old gravel walk,
Splashed with the drops of rain
That dripped from off the lilacs,
Or dashed against the pane.

And when they dropped, as suddenly,
Upon the window pane,
His heart began to beat so fast
He could not hear the rain,
Or see the purple lilacs brush
Against the window pane.

There, drop the curtain, dear! We have
No right to look again
At those old lovers leaning there
Forgetful of the rain.
Yet, see! Two names—and here's a date
Scratched on the window-pane.

ELUSIVE LIGHTNING.

One of Nature's Greatest and Most Effective Dramatic Actors.

During a thunder storm we get an inkling of how fearfully and wonderfully the universe in which we live is made and what energy and activity its apparent passivity and opacity mark. A flash of lightning out of a storm cloud seems instantly to transform the whole passive universe into a terrible living power.

If we were to see and hear it for the first time, would we not think that the judgment day had really come? That the great seals of the book of fate were being broken?

What an awakening it is! What a revelation! What a fearfully dramatic actor suddenly leaps upon the stage! Had we been permitted to look behind the scenes, we could not have found him; he was not there, except, potentially; he was born and equipped in a twinkling. One stride, and one word which shakes the house, and he is gone; gone as quickly as he came. Look behind the curtain and he is not there.

He has vanished more completely than any stage ghost ever vanished—he has withdrawn into the innermost recesses of the atomic structure of matter, and is diffused through the clouds, to be called back again, as the elemental drama proceeds, as suddenly as before.

All matter is charged with electricity, either actual or potential; the sun is hot with it, and doubtless our own heartbeats, our own thinking brains, are intimately related to it; yet it is palpable and visible only in this sudden and extraordinary way. It defies our analysis, it defies our definitions; it is inscrutable and imponderable, yet it will do our errands, light our houses, cook our dinners and pull our loads.

How humdrum and constant and prosaic the other forces—gravity, cohesion, chemical affinity and capillary attraction—seem when compared with this force of forces, electricity. How deeply and quietly it slumbers at one time, how terribly active it becomes at another, bellowing through the heavens like an infuriated and destroying god! —John Burroughs in Harper's Magazine.

USE SENSE IN EATING.

A Person May Be Fat and Still Lack Proper Nourishment.

The majority of people do not understand that a person may be fat, excessively fat, and still be underfed and weak from lack of proper nourishment.

One may eat to excess of starch foods, hot breads, oils and sweets and as a result be rolling in fat and at the same time show a severe case of malnutrition, evidenced by lack of strength in muscular effort or mental concentration.

The system needs these foods, for they are known as the "fuel foods" because they furnish the body heat, but the system also needs an abundance of the very elements of which the body or, rather, the muscular fiber is composed. These muscle making foods are fresh meat, eggs and milk, fresh vegetables and fruits.

If one is in the habit of eating rather heartily of mixed diet and is growing fat upon it, then reduce the amount of sweets, starches and fats, and you will find plenty of nourishment in the muscle building foods.

In addition to attention to diet, however, attention must be paid to the need of fresh air and exercise if one would keep from becoming too fat. If you would have a good figure practice deep breathing and exercise in addition to cutting down on your diet.

The greatest problem of conservation relates not to forests or mines, but to national vitality, and to conserve the latter we must begin by conserving the child. Detroit Times.

Infant Mortality.

According to American Medicine, "the real reason why there are 300,000 unnecessary deaths every year among our babies is that the fathers cannot make enough money to keep them alive. One in every eight born is foredoomed to early death for this reason and no other. It is not necessarily straight starvation, but precious near it, as well as deprivation of comforts which are necessities for a baby. If the father makes more than $25 a week the death rate of his infants is less than eighty-four per thousand; if he makes less than $10 they die at the rate of over 256!

Remedied.

A stranded but haughty "leading lady" was obliged to put up at a dilapidated country hotel. She glanced frowningly about the office, reluctantly signed the register and took the brass key from the proprietress.

Easy to Be Prosperous

Do you want to make Plainfield the most prosperous city of its size in the nation? Of course you do for it is to your benefit to do so. And it is not difficult, it is easy. All that is necessary is that you buy in Plainfield stores at every opportunity. The results will be astounding and in a short time will be felt by every one in the city.

Plainfield Merchants, craftsmen and mechanics are the foundation upon which the prosperity of this community is erected. If they prosper and succeed then our city as a whole must prosper and succeed.

It is not as though you were being urged to buy inferior merchandise, for you are not. You get just as good value for your money when you buy at Plainfield Stores as when you purchase goods elsewhere, and oftentimes better value, and you are doing your community a great deal of good every time that you do so.

Let's get the habit "Try Plainfield First."

Scattered Sport Gleanings

Judging from the appearances of certain City League moguls when they emerged from that weekly meeting Tuesday night there certainly must have been something doing. No healthy baseball league can weather the present day strife unless it stages some feather ruffling sessions now and then and we're glad to see that the local bushers are trailing the right path.

Kiddom again reigns supreme at Parker Field. There's plenty doing for the youngsters on the Randolph road lot and from now on fond mothers need only visit the playground diamonds to locate missing cherubs.

If there's one class of athlete who makes a sporting editor weary it's the guy who is continually scouting around for newspaper notoriety when he happens to cop a reward. If you happen to be worth all you think you are you'll get all the boosts your hat-band will carry in time.

Interest of local sportdom now centers around the activity of our friend Marty O'Loughlin in the metropolitan tourney. Marty is about due to come across this trip.

Paul Collier bears every resemblance to the genuine article as a comeback in that city tennis title tourney. "Snort" was a leader with the racquet in the days of yore and his work in Saturday's competition demonstrated the fact that he is about to return to the running.

They tell us Cliff Randolph has signed to twirl for the Hope Chapelites in the City League. Wonder if they are trying to get him to come back to Sunday school or to really pastime with a ball team?

"Midge" Kline has made the announcement that the All Stars will cease to shine after his proteges get a second wallop at them. Aside from the fact that his pitcher was on the sick list, his catcher thought the game had been postponed, and several other minor difficulties Kline had a regular ball nine on the field last week.

Having previously stated that Britt Martin had grabbed the honor of being the Bill Stallings of the City League we rise to remark that Jim Moynihan strongly resembles one Johnny McGraw. Moynihan certainly employed some of "Muggy's" tactics in that last City League session.

We've been asked to explain that the cause of the spirited indoor sessions of the local league is not due to the lack of "pep" on the playing field. Gotcha, Steven!

Now that VanDeventer, our local entry in that Rahway night tennis tourney, has been eliminated we can rest easily once more. It would be a terrible shock for us to hear of any Queen Cityite advancing further than the semi-final round in a court event.

AMATEUR BALL JINGLES

With the addition of Ralph Smalley, Wren Townley and Ashley Burner, the Baptist outfit ought to annex its first win next Saturday in that City League.

It is a matter of opinion as to who is the star twirler of the City League, but it is generally acknowledged that the title rests between Tone Denny, of the Tabs and Dick Schott, of the Hopes. Gleason comes in for consideration, too.

The umpiring in the league encounters to date has been up to par, Malanga and Coriell being two fine officials.

The Hope-Tab melee, carded for Saturday, will be played on Hope field and is bound to attract a big crowd. Tone Denny and Dick Schott, the league's leading pitchers, will be the opposing slabmen and a stirring battle between the two can be expected.

Johnny Dixon was used at first in the Saurer-Hope argument, and although Johnnie is a light man for the position, he held the job in excellent style, scooping up the low throws like a veteran.

KRAMER A VICTIM.

It was a great cleanup for the Australians in the bicycle racing events at the Newark Velodrome, last night. Practically all the honors of the professional class went to the pedallers from the Antipodes. First in importance, possibly, was the success which Alfred Goullet and Alfred Grenda met in leading Champion Frank Louis Kramer home in the half mile championship event. Grenda's recently acquired finishing sprint was very much in working order and, though Goullet had a lead at the finish, the Tasmanian was able to hold Kramer in check, the latter finishing third.

FIGHTERS HAVE A "SOCK-FULL."

Battling Nelson owns most of Hegewisch, Ill. Billy Papke had $100,000 saved up when he quit the ring. He has it yet—and more. Packy McFarland took $150,000 with him when he qut and is now reading law. Leach Cross is a dentist with a nest egg of the same amount. Tommy Murphy is an architect and builder in Brooklyn. He got his financial start in the prize ring.

SPORTS PREVAILED.

The meeting of the Wednesday night swimming class was held last night in the Plainfield High School. Indoor tennis, basketball and other sports were features of the evening's activities.

LOOKS LIKE A COMER.

The Nonpareil A. C. will probably enter the Senior League at Parker Field. To date this aggregation has played but one game and that was with a Cranford team and resulted in a victory for the local clan. Since that time it has remained idle. The club, which is made up of colored fellows of this city and vicinity, has a house in the East End of the city and numbers among its members such stars of both track and diamond as Bill Daniels and Jim Greene. Venable, Butler, Maiden, Clay, McCrea, Saunders and Cox are several of the team's most promising performers.

GAMES WANTED.

The Plainfield Juniors would like to arrange games with the K. O. K. A., of Somerville; the Westfield Cubs, the Bound Brook A. C., and teams of like strength. The Juniors have an aggregation ranging in age from sixteen to eighteen years. They prefer to play away from home, although they might stage one or two contests here. All communications should be addressed to Samuel Semer, 903 West Third street.

TEAMS ARE WANTED.

There is still plenty of room for teams in the Parker Field leagues, there being at present only three teams in the Junior League; one in the Middle League and as yet none in the Senior circuit. George W. Wriston, the supervisor, desires to hear from the managers of local outfits in regards to entering their teams in the league races.

READY TO TAKE ENTRIES FOR NATIONAL TOURNEY

Announcement was made yesterday that the entries for the national singles lawn tennis championship of the United States will close on August 20. This is ten days before the opening of the tournament at the West Side Tennis Club, Forest Hills, L. I. An innovation in the form of entry requirements is that all entrants must make formal entry through the secretary of the Entrants' Club. This means that no entry will be accepted direct from a player. The entry fee has been set at $5 instead of the $3 fee of former years.

Members of all clubs belonging to the United States National Lawn Tennis Association will be given the preference in the allotment of season tickets, as well as the privilege of subscribing at the reduced rate of $5, including admission and granstand seats for the entire tournament.

Such applications must be made through the applicant's club secretary. The grandstand at the West Side Club will accommodate about 7,000 persons. If there are any surplus tickets they will be sold to the general public at the rate of $7. Tickets for single days will not be put on sale until the beginning of the tournament, Monday, August 30.

Today's Game.

Princeton vs. Eagle A. C.

Baseball competition in the Parker Feld Junior League began yesterday, the Princeton Tigers handing the Yale players a 12 to 6 trimming. Thirteen hits were garnered from the offerings of the Eli slabman, while the Tiger box artists allowed only seven safe taps, all of which were widely distributed. Bill Reasoner and Mundy were the clouters for the winning combination, each getting three hits while Poling nicked McDonough and Mundy for four of the seven bingles they allowed. Bob Lee, catching for the winners, handled the most chances in the field without slipping, being credited with eight putouts and two assists. The pitchers struck out fifteen men.

The Princeton team and the Eagle A. C. are scheduled to clash today.

P. C. C. GOLFERS TOOK 80 TO COVER COURSE

O'Loughlin and Glenney do Poorly on the Fox Hills Course.

Competing in the competition preliminary to the open championship of the Metropolitan Golf Association which begins today, Marty O'Loughlin and W. T. Glenney, the Plainfield Country Club's professional and amateur representatives, returned a card of 39-41-80 over the links of the Fox Hills Golf Club yesterday afternoon. K. D. Basset and Louis Tellier, the latter being the player who was teamed with Wilfred Reid against Marty O'Loughlin and Jack Hobens in a match on the local links several weeks ago, made a best ball of sixty-eight strokes. Playing in brilliant form, Tellier himself, made a score of 70, going out in 34 and coming back in 36. In consequence of a poor drive and a missed putt the one-time French open champion took six strokes for the fourth hole, but his partner came to the rescue, and at the ninth hole, when Tellier took five shots to get down, the amateur made a four.

Four additions have been made to the published entry list and it is now certain that the championship will be one of the best ever played under the auspices of the Metropolitan Golf Association. M. J. Brady, of Wollaston, Mass., and "Bobby" Andrew, the one time Scottish amateur, are the outstanding among the last quartet to send in their names. Brady played in the amateur-professional competition, but Andrew had to be content to take a little practice with some of the other professionals.

HIRSCH, IT IS REPORTED, MAY PLAY WITH SAURER

Aaron Hirsch, the ex-P. H. S.-N. P. H. S. player, whose name was placed on the roster of the Netherwood A. C. at the last meeting of the City League, it is said intends playing with the Saurer team of the same league. When questioned concerning this, Manager Britt Martin, of the Saurer forces, said that he had heard such a report, but wished it understood that he would take no step in the matter without fully consulting Manager Coughlin, of the Netherwood clan.

Of course under the two weeks' notice clause adopted by the league officials, Hirsch cannot play with the East End aggregation until July 17 when the two teams that are concerned will clash. While Martin admits that the addition of Hirsch to the Saurer forces would add great strength to the team, he is perfectly willing to abide by the decision of the league authorities. Furthermore, Hirsch's name has not been placed on the Saurer list.

PRINCETON TIGERS ARE DEFEATED BY EAGLE A. C.

The Engle A. C. opened its season in the Parker Field Junior League, this morning, with a 12 to 7 victory over the Princeton Tigers, who got only six hits off Kennedy, the Eagle twirler. The winners rapped out nine clouts for a total of twelve runs. All told sixteen bases were stolen by members of both teams.

COMMISSION GETS JULY 30 AND 31 AS DATES FOR ANNUAL CANOE TITLE MATCHES AT DEAL

Asbury Park, July 8.—Announcement was made here last night by John W. Aymar, president of the Carnival Commission, that the Atlantic Coast and New Jersey State Canoe Championships would be paddled over the half-mile straight-way course on Deal Lake, Asbury Park, on Friday and Saturday, July 30 and 31. The Commission sanctioned the expenditure of $500 for prizes and entertainment for the visiting canoeists.

Gold, silver and bronze championship medals will be awarded in each of the fourteen events. There will be four races for Class A or cedar canoe paddlers of the American Canoe Association, and a like number for the Class B or canvas covered canoe division. These eight events will constitute the Atlantic Coast Championships, and trophies will be awarded to the clubs scoring the most points on a 6, 4, 2 and 1 basis.

It is expected that these events will bring together the rival crews represented in the Associated Canoe Clubs of the Hudson and the Associated Canoe Clubs of the Delaware. The New Jersey State Championships, closed to clubs of that State are in the second running, the first leg on the trophy having been won last year by the Asbury Park Canoe Club. A list of races is now being prepared for all three divisions. There will be two special races; one for crews of two women and an endurance race for crews of four men, using single blades and canvas boats. Oscar A. Morgan has been appointed director of the races.

JOHNSON AND ORTLIEB HELP HOPEWELL TO LEAD THE VAN

Hopewell won the first of the series of games from Pennington for the championship of the Hopewell Valley, after an exciting contest yesterday at Hopewell, the final score being 6 to 5. The victors numbered among their players two men well known locally, Carl Johnson, the former local manual training teacher, who covered third, and George Ortlieb, Westfield resident and former slabman for the now extinct Plainfield Pets, who adorned the mound.

George allowed his victims only six hits, half of which were made by the Pennington left fielder. However, the big blonde was generous with his free trips and issued five of this sort, although he made up for the useless generosity by making seven of the losers bite the dust.

GAME LAWS CHART NOW READY FOR DISTRIBUTION

Union County Game Warden William Hoblitzer, of Rahway, has received from the Board of New Jersey Fish and Game Commissioners a chart of the open and closed seasons for game and fish and a compendium of the laws governing the sport. All hunters who wish copies can have them by calling for them.

The chart is a very complete one and gives at a glance the information to guide the hunter and fisherman in keeping within the law. The compendium of directions, suggestions and laws is admirably clear and compact. Sportsmen are particularly warned against accidental forest fires. The season for salmon and rainbow trout closes July 15. The season for other fish continues all summer till November.

AN ORDINANCE

A Further Supplement to An Ordinance Entitled "An Ordinance For the Assessment of Taxes For the Year, 1915," Approved June 7, 1915.

WHEREAS, the Board of Education of the City of Plainfield, in the County of Union, did decide that it is necessary to raise money for the purchase of lands for school purposes in the public school district comprising said City, and did fix and determine the amount of money estimated to be necessary for such purpose to be the sum of Six Thousand Dollars, and pursuant to such determination did prepare and deliver to each member of the Board of Estimate of said City a statement of said determination and did call a meeting of the said Board of School Estimate to vote upon a resolution fixing and determining the amount necessary for said purpose and certifying the same to the aforesaid Board of Education and to the Common Council of said City as required by law;

AND, WHEREAS, on the 29th day of June, A. D. 1915, the said Board of School Estimate did accordingly meet and vote and did make its two certificates in writing signed by each member of said Board of School Estimate, one whereof was duly delivered to said Board of Education and the other whereof was delivered to the said Common Council and received by it on the sixth day of July, 1915, and which said certificates are substantially as follows, to wit:

"The Board of School Estimate of the City School District of Plainfield, N. J., hereby certifies that it has this day fixed and determined and hereby fixes and determines the sum of $6,000.00 as the amount of money necessary to be appropriated for the purchase of lands for school purposes in the City School District of Plainfield, N. J., and hereby makes two certificates of said amount signed by at least three members of said Board of School Estimate; of which certificates one shall be delivered to the Board of Education of the City School District of Plainfield, N. J., and the other to the Common Council of the City of Plainfield, N. J."

AND, WHEREAS, the Common Council of the City of Plainfield had determined and doth hereby determine that it is for the best interests of all concerned rather than to issue bonds therefor to appropriate the said sum for such purpose in the same manner as other appropriations are made by it, and that said sum of Six Thousand Dollars be raised, assessed, levied and collected at the same time and in the same manner as other moneys appropriated for other purposes in said City of Plainfield are raised, assessed, levied and collected; Now, therefore,

The inhabitants of the City of Plainfield, by their Common Council, do enact as follows:

Section 1. That pursuant to the act of the Legislature of the State of New Jersey, entitled "An Act to establish a thorough and efficient system of free public schools and to provide for the maintenance, support and management thereof," approved October 19th, 1903, and the acts amendatory thereof and supplemental thereto, the sum of Six Thousand Dollars (additional to any sum or sums heretofore appropriated or provided for pursuant to said acts) be and the same is hereby appropriated for the purpose aforesaid, viz: For the purchase of lands for school purposes in the school district comprising the City of Plainfield, as other appropriations are made by this Common Council and that said amount shall be raised, assessed, levied and collected for the year Nineteen Hundred and Fifteen in the same manner as moneys appropriated for other purposes in this City are raised, assessed, levied and collected.

SAURER AND NETHERWOOD TO MEET AT PARKER FIELD

Manager Britt Martin, of the Saurer team of the City Amateur Baseball League, made arrangements today whereby his aggregation will meet the Clinton A. C. on Parker Field, Saturday afternoon. This change was made because of the fact that the "Tabs" will play Hope Chapel on the latter's grounds, a slight change being made in the schedule. With this arrangement both games as well as the one between the First Baptist and Netherwood teams should all draw large crowds.

A PINCH HITTING PITCHER.

New York Americans' Hurler Best Batting Twirler In Game Today.

Who said that a pitcher couldn't hit? Raymond B. Caldwell, the star heaver of the Yankee pitching staff, established a modern record by accumulating three home runs in four times at bat. At the same time he set a new pinch hitting mark when he hit for a homer twice in succession while enacting the role of a substitute hitter. These three circuit wallops scored seven runs.

Caldwell always has been a good hitter. Slim is really a great ball player, and if he would only take the game a little more seriously there is not the least doubt he would be one of Cobb's hottest rivals. He is a big, good natured, careless fellow, more interested in pleasure than work. Baseball is somewhat of a joke to Ray.

However, this year seems to be attracting his attention more than usual, for his pitching as well as his batting has improved, and by the end of the season the lanky one promises to be the surprise of the year.

Three home runs in four times at bat is not the record. Back in the old days of heavy sluggers, when they used to bunt 'em over the fences (so they say), Caldwell's mark was bettered on three different occasions by three different men. Dan Brouthers, Jimmy Lowe and the famous Ed Delehanty all succeeded in driving out four homers in five times at bat—and in a single game too.

the brand of ball that made him famous. Last season he fell off somewhat in his playing at the initial station.

But since the start of the 1915 campaign he has been covering his position in masterly style and hitting the ball in great shape.

Cobb Jealous of His Laurels.

Three years ago a Cleveland fan told Ty Cobb, "Joe Jackson says he is going to hit .400 this year." Cobb smiled and retorted, "If he does I'll hit .450." That year Jackson hit close to .400 and Ty slammed away at .427. This year they told Cobb, "Maisel is the fastest man in baseball." Just to prove them wrong Ty is leading his league in both base stealing and runs scored.

Becker's Stick In Evidence.

The batting experience of Beals Becker this year is out of the ordinary. He is now hitting the ball as strong as the best.

SAURER AT NEW BRUNSWICK.

The Saurer baseball team will play St. Peter's nine, of New Brunswick, at the latter place on Sunday afternoon.

MULLIN AT ELIZABETH.

The Franklins, of Perth Amboy, with whom Tommy Mullin, the local boy plays, will oppose the South Elizabeth team at South Elizabeth, next Sunday.

The "thrift-instinct" in people makes the "For Sale" ads interesting to them.

WILL HISTORY REPEAT ITSELF?

Showing of Sox and Cubs Leads Chicago Fans to Wonder.

ARE PLAYING GREAT BALL.

Both Clubs Putting Up Brilliant Game In All Departments—Memories of Famous Meeting Nine Years Ago Still Cling to the Fans.

The recent showing of the two Chicago major league baseball clubs has led to speculation as to whether history is to repeat itself and the Cubs and White Sox meet again in world's series play.

While the pennant clinching days in the American and National leagues are still afar off, there is no denying that the two Chicago clubs have exhibited a sterling brand of ball this spring. Western fans recall the series of 1906, when the play of that year was confined strictly to Chicago, with the White Sox, under the leadership of Fielder Jones, defeating Frank Chance's Cubs four games to two.

Nine years have elapsed since the first and only world's series between two clubs representing the same city, and not one of the White Sox of 1906 and only two of the Cubs of the same season remain actively engaged in major league baseball.

Ed Walsh still is a member of the White Sox team, which he did so much to make famous, but for the last two seasons his efforts have been directed almost exclusively to trying to rehabilitate the good right arm which he so nearly pitched off during the active years of his sensational career.

PITCHER ED CICOTTE, WHOSE WORK IN BOX IS DOING MUCH TO KEEP SOX UP IN RACE.

Frank Schulte still is an active factor, occupying a regular berth with the Cubs, and Evers, although recovering from another smashed ankle, is expected to prove himself to be still a live one as soon as the bum wheel will permit. He is now with the Boston Braves.

The others have disappeared from the arenas that once rang with plaudits for their feats.

Of the 1906 White Sox Callahan remains with the club in the capacity of business manager, after three years of active management of the team. Jones returned to the ball field to manage the St. Louis Federals after a period in retirement, during which he bossed the Northwestern league.

Among the veterans from whom Jones turned out a world's champion team those who are known to be actively participating in the game this season are Sullivan, who is catching for Joe Cantillon in Minneapolis; Tannehill, who is infielding for Isabell in Des Moines, and Smith, who is hurling for the Baltimore Federal league team. Patterson was to have managed a Canadian team if its league had not closed up shop. Davis is in business in New York.

Donahue and Green are dead.

Four members of the Cub team of 1906 cast their lots with the Federal league when it expanded last season. Tinker became manager of the Chicago team and still is it. Brown took the management of the St. Louis Feds, but gave way to Jones and now flings them with much of his old time skill for the Chicago Whales. Hofman joined Brooklyn in the independent league and would have been manager this year if the Wards had not got their signals crossed with Lee Magee. Reulbach is giving bases on balls from the Newark slab.

Frank Chance has retired to the shade of his own orange grove in California after a tempestuous two years of trying to handle the New York Yankees to suit both the club owners and the rooters. Kling had a season of managing the Boston team before its players were called "Braves" and is now looking after his own game—pocket and three cushion billiards in Kansas City. Frank Pfeffer is not pitching. McCarthy and Slagle are in business in Chicago, and Casey drops in to fan with the American league players occasionally in Detroit.

"Buttons" Briggs is dead.

You need not keep "on your hands," to your present disadvantage, any real estate that is "good enough to advertise."

CHAPTER XXIII.

Over the Fence.

IN no mood to approve of anything introduced by Fanchon she had scornfully refused from the first to dance the new "step" and because of its bonfire popularity found herself neglected in a society where she had reigned as beauty and belle. Faithless Penrod, dazed by the sweeping Fanchon, had utterly forgotten the amber curls. He had not once asked Marjorie to dance. All afternoon the light of indignation had been growing brighter in her eyes, though Maurice Levy's defection to the lady from New York had not fanned this flame. From the moment Fanchon had whispered familiarly in Penrod's ear and Penrod had blushed Marjorie had been occupied exclusively with resentment against that guilty pair. It seemed to her that Penrod had no right to allow a strange girl to whisper in his ear, that his blushing when the strange girl did it was atrocious and that the strange girl herself ought to be arrested.

Forgotten by the merrymakers, Marjorie stood alone upon the lawn, clinching her small fists, watching the new dance at its high tide and hating it with a hatred that made every inch of her tremble. And, perhaps because jealousy is a great awakener of the virtues, she had a perception of something in it worse than lack of dignity—something vaguely but outrageously reprehensible. Finally when Penrod brushed by her, touched her with his elbow and did not even see her, Marjorie's state of mind (not unmingled with emotion) became dangerous. In fact, a trained nurse chancing to observe her at this juncture would probably have advised that she be taken home and put to bed. Marjorie was on the verge of hysterics.

She saw Fanchon and Penrod assume the double embrace required by the dance. The "Slingo Sligo Slide" burst from the orchestra like the lunatic shriek of a gin maddened negro, and all the little couples began to bob and dip and sway.

Marjorie made a scene. She sprang upon the platform and stamped her foot.

"Penrod Schofield!" she shouted. "You BEHAVE yourself!"

The remarkable girl took Penrod by the ear. By his ear she swung him away from Fanchon and faced him toward the lawn.

"You march straight out of here!" she commanded.

Penrod marched.

He was stunned; obeyed automatically without question and had very little realization of what was happening to him. Altogether and without reason he was in precisely the condition of an elderly spouse detected in flagrant misbehavior. Marjorie similarly was in precisely the condition of the party who detects such misbehavior. It may be added that she had acted with a promptness, a decision and a disregard of social consequences all to be commended to the attention of ladies in like predicament.

"You ought to be ashamed of yourself!" she raged when they reached the lawn. "Aren't you ashamed of yourself?"

"What for?" he inquired helplessly.

"You be quiet!"

"But what'd I do, Marjorie? I haven't done anything to you," he pleaded. "I haven't even seen you all aftern"—

"You be quiet!" she cried, tears filling her eyes. "Keep still, you ugly boy! Shut up!"

She slapped him.

He should have understood from this how much she cared for him, but he rubbed his cheek and declared ruefully:

"I'll never speak to you again!"

"You will, too!" she sobbed passionately.

"I will not!"

He turned to leave her, but paused.

His mother, his sister Margaret and their grownup friends had finished their tea and were approaching from the house. Other parents and guardians were with them, coming for their children, and there were carriages and automobiles waiting in the street. But the "Slingo Slide" went on regardless.

The group of grown up people hesitated and came to a halt, gazing at the pavilion.

"What are they doing?" gasped Mrs. Williams, blushing deeply. "What is it? What is it?"

"What is it?" Mrs. Gelbraith echoed in a frightened whisper. "What"—

"They're tangoing!" cried Margaret Schofield, "or bunny hugging or grizzly bearing or"—

"They're only turkey trotting," said Robert Williams.

With fearful outcries the mothers, aunts and sisters rushed upon the pavilion.

"Of course it was dreadful," said Mrs. Schofield an hour later, rendering her lord an account of the day, "but it was every bit the fault of that one extraordinary child. And of all the quiet, demure little things—that is, I mean when she first came. We all spoke of how exquisite she seemed—so well trained, so finished! Eleven years old! I never saw anything like her in my life!"

"I suppose it's the New Child," her husband grunted.

"And to think of her saying there ought to have been champagne in the lemonade!"

"Probably she'd forgotten to bring her pocket flask," he suggested mustingly.

"But aren't you proud of Penrod?" cried Penrod's mother. "It was just as I told you. He was standing clear outside the pavilion"—

"I never thought to see the day When Penrod was the only boy not doing it, the only one to refuse. All the others were"—

"Every one!" she returned triumphantly. "Even Georgie Bassett!"

"Well," said Mr. Schofield, patting her on the shoulder, "I guess we can hold up our heads at last."

Penrod was out in the yard staring at the empty marquee. The sun was on the horizon line, so far behind the back fence, and a western window of the house blazed in gold unbearable to the eye. His day was nearly over. He sighed and took from the inside pocket of his new jacket the "slingshot" Aunt Sarah Crim had given him that morning.

He snapped the rubbers absently. They held fast, and his next impulse was entirely irresistible. He found a shapely stone, fitted it to the leather and drew back the ancient catapult for a shot. A sparrow hopped upon a branch between him and the house, and he aimed at the sparrow, but the reflection from the dazzling window struck in his eyes as he loosed the leather.

He missed the sparrow, but not the window. There was a loud crash, and to his horror he caught a glimpse of his father, stricken in midshaving, ducking a shower of broken glass, glittering razor flourishing wildly. Words crashed with the glass, stentorian words, fragmentary, but collossal.

Penrod stood petrified, a broken sling in his hand. He could hear his parent's booming descent of the back stairs, instant and furious, and then,

He Missed the Sparrow, but Not the Window.

red hot above white lather, Mr. Schofield burst out of the kitchen door and hurled forth upon his son.

"What do you mean?" he demanded, shaking Penrod by the shoulder. "Ten minutes ago, for the very first time in our lives, your mother and I were saying we were proud of you, and here you go and throw a rock at me through the window when I'm shaving for dinner!"

"I didn't!" Penrod quavered. "I was shooting at a sparrow, and the sun got in my eyes, and the sling broke"—

"What sling?"

"This'n."

"Where'd you get that devilish thing? Don't you know I've forbidden you a thousand times"—

"It ain't mine," said Penrod. "It's yours."

"What?"

"Yes, sir," said the boy meekly. "Aunt Sarah Crim gave it to me this morning and told me to give it back to you. She said she took it away from you thirty-five years ago. You killed her hen, she said. She told me some more to tell you, but I've forgotten."

"Oh!" said Mr. Schofield.

He took the broken sling in his hand, looked at it long and thoughtfully, and he looked longer, and quite as thoughtfully, at Penrod. Then he turned away and walked toward the house.

"I'm sorry, papa," said Penrod.

Mr. Schofield coughed, and as he reached the door called back, but without turning his head.

"Never mind, little boy. A broken window isn't much harm."

When he had gone in Penrod wandered down the yard to the back fence, climbed upon it and sat in reverie there.

A slight figure appeared, likewise upon a fence, beyond two neighboring yards.

"Yay, Penrod!" called comrade Sam Williams.

"Yay!" returned Penrod mechanically.

"I caught Billy Blue Hill!" shouted Sam, describing retribution in a manner perfectly clear to his friend. "You were mighty lucky to get out of it."

"I know that!"

"You wouldn't of, if it hadn't been for Marjorie."

"Well, don't I know that?" Penrod shouted, with heat.

"Well, so long!" called Sam, dropping from his fence, and the friendly voice came then, more faintly, "Many happy returns of the day, Penrod!"

And now a plaintive little whine sounded from below Penrod's feet, and, looking down, he saw that Duke, his wistful, old, scraggly dog, sat in the grass, gazing seekingly up at him.

The last shaft of sunshine of that day fell graciously and like a blessing upon the boy sitting on the fence. Years afterward a quiet sunset would recall to him sometimes the gentle evening of his twelfth birthday and bring him the picture of his boy self sitting in rosy life upon the fence, gazing pensively down upon his wistful, scraggly, little old dog Duke. But something else, surpassing, he would remember of that hour, for in the side street close by a pink skirt flickered from behind a shade tree to the shelter of the fence. There was a gleam of amber curls, and Penrod started as something like a tiny white wing fluttered by his head, and there came to his ears the sound of a light laugh and of light footsteps departing, the laughter tremulous, the footsteps fleet.

In the grass between Duke's forepaws there lay a white note folded in the shape of a cocked hat, and the sun sent forth a final amazing glory as Penrod opened it and read, "Your my bow."

IMMIGRANT MOTHERHOOD.

(Madeline Sweeny Miller.)

Down yonder she sits in the half-open door,
'Tis plain she has never had time to before;
Her first little child sleeping there on her breast,
Poor soul, how she feasts on this banquet of rest.
But all is so strange to her, people don't care,
They just pass her by with a questioning stare.

How youthful and brave is this firm-moulded face,
Still fresh with the blood of her farm-dwelling race.
But, oh, the great pain as she sees in her child
A trait of some kinsman at home in the wild.
For here all is strange, and these people don't care
How nearly she's starving for those over there.

Too soon she must leave the wee son of her youth
To toil in the shop with the bold and uncouth
To roll fat cigars or to tie willow plumes,
Or stand the day long by the thundering looms,
Where no one is strange and the bosses don't care,
But all pass her by with a growl or a glare.

Yet courage to you, little mother of men,
Some day the whole land will protect you, and then
Your pure young blood will freshen our race,
Renewing our life, setting hope in our face:
You'll then find it strange, how all of us care
Who once passed you by with contempt in our stare.

MUSIC.

What of your daughter's musical taste? She's in the parlor now, entertaining a caller, with the latest rag-time songs. There's a strange lilt to that rag-time stuff, but forget the tune and catch the words: "Honeyman, I sigh for you, with my lips to yours, I could die for you. Wait 'till I get you all alone in the dark, in a nice little shady corner of the park." How much of the doggerel does she understand? Parents, you are responsible for what your daughter knows or does not know; it is time you woke up; if you don't believe this, fathers, stop reading your paper on your trolley trips and listen to what the young people are discussing. Linger in the back of moving picture houses, near soda fountains and postal card booths. Mothers, listen to the conversation of young girls from fifteen to eighteen with young men who cannot yet boast twenty years? What of your own daughter?

CHILDREN'S GARDENS.

Erasmus Schwab, the founder of the school garden movement, in Austria, wrote: "A hundred years hence it will seem inexplicable that for centuries there could exist among cultured nations, public schools without school gardens, and that in the nineteenth century communities and nations in generous emulation could furnish the school with all things dictated by common sense and profit and care, except in thousands of cases, an educational medium that should suggest itself to the mind of even the common man.

"The school garden will exert a powerful influence upon the heart of the child and upon his character; it will plant in the child the love of nature, inculcate for others and a wholesome esthetic sense. The school gardens as Austria is carrying it out, is a nursery for practical knowledge and a noble enjoyment of home nature, for the culture of the understanding, for better morals and higher prosperity of the people; it is an ideal thought but united with realism and aiming at full life in all its relations."

C. F. Hodge says: "Cultivation of the soil is basal to civilized life. To educate children without it is to relapse to barbarism. To have every child during ten years own and care for a garden, however small, would do more than anything else to empty our prisons."

Daddy's Bedtime Story — The Sand That Wanted to Be Useful.

The Children Played In the Sand.

"THIS is a funny little story, Jack and Evelyn," said daddy. "You know everybody and everything in the world ought to be useful, but this is not always so. So this is a story about some sand which mourned because it was not useful.

"This sand lay in great golden heaps upon an ocean beach. It chanced to lie upon a part of the shore where nobody came—that is, hardly ever—and this sand grew tired of just lying there and being lonely.

"So one day while the sea breeze was blowing and the gulls were flying over the ocean and the white clouds were sailing like ships over the blue sky the sand voiced its troubles.

"'What good are we?' complained the sands, speaking all together, for the reason that there were so many particles—oh, millions and millions of them, more than you could ever count. 'All we are good for is just to lie here without being in the least useful to anybody or anything and let the waves drum on us. We are tired of having the waves roll in on us and then go away and in a few hours come back again. It's true they bring in pretty shells and seaweed and other curious things, but what good does that do? Nobody ever comes to notice them any more than to appreciate us. We are very unhappy.'

"So these deserted sands continued to pity themselves because they were not useful. But the sea wind, listening, rather smiled to itself, for it had heard something farther down the coast that these complaining sands did not know.

"You see, children, the reason that these sands were not visited more was because there were no railroads in that particular section, and it was not easy to reach them. But it was a lovely place for a bathing beach, and some men had found it out, and they were busy with plans.

"So, presto! first thing you know there was a railroad built right out to those sands and some great hotels and funny little cottages and bathhouses built. And then maybe those sands weren't busy and useful!

"Why, you wouldn't have known them for the same sands. They lay, great golden heaps, ready for the people they had wanted so hard to visit them.

"The children played in the sands and built strange castles and mansions and dug caves and had a glorious time. The beach resounded with laughter. Every one was glad to be there, and the sands, now useful, were much happier than they had been before."

U. S. ASTOR THEATRE

Miss Vera Fuller Mellish, the accomplished daughter of Fuller Mellish, the famous actor recalled for his famous work as the Pope in "The Eternal City," recently exhibited at the Astor Theatre, will appear as the star of "The Bond Woman," a photodrama of powerful theme at the U. S. Astor Theatre this afternoon and tonight.

Miss Mellish lives up to the high dramatic standard set by her famous parent after many years before the footlights. She has appeared in dramas since she was four years old and gives a splendid portrayal of the leading character in this remarkable photoply.

As an example of able photography and direction this picture is almost in a class by itself, as it contains some of the finest touches it has been our pleasure to witness. This is especially true in the early scenes. The director had conclusively proven his versatility, for he has been forced to use almost every style of setting known to the director in this offering and he has done it in a manner in conformity with the best known methods of picture production.

William H. Crane, always a favorite with Plainfield theatregoers, will appear at the Asfor Theatre tomorrow afternoon and evening as star in that refreshing comedy of rural life, "David Harum," in which he is given full opportunity to put all his quaint comic mannerisms into effect. And the snappy subtitles also lend to this splendid feature much humor. In almost every scene there is something which Mr. Crane may move the audience to laughter. There is nothing of the low comedy one expects in Chaplin films. Mr. Crane doesn't resort to slap stick methods. When he winks his eye, the audience laughs. When he runs the audience laughs. It's a long, mirthful laugh for the audience that views "David Harum." No motion picture devotee in Plainfield who admires the quaint humor of Mr. Crane in the legitimate should fail to see him in this remarkable comedy of country life. Saturday "The Secretary of Frivolous Affairs" will be the feature film.

DAINTY VACATION DRESS.

No. 8910.

Flowered linen and cotton goods have enjoyed such unprecedented popularity this season, that one cannot travel anywhere without encountering them. The encounter, however, is always aesthetically satisfying and refreshing, for it cannot be gainsaid that flowered materials are not only dainty, but pre-eminently suited to full skirts. The above empire dress, Ladies' Home Journal Pattern No. 8910, consists of a waist opening in front and having chemisette perforated for V-neck and standing collar, full-length sleeves and circular cuffs perforated for shorter length with turned-back cuffs, a bolero with fancy collar and applied trimming sections. Skirt made in three gores. Sizes 14, 16, 18, 20, size 18 requiring 6½ yards 36-inch, ½ yard 10-inch lace, 3-8 yard 30-inch silk for belt.

Patterns may be obtained at the store of A. E. Force & Company.

CHANGES OFFICE.

Manning F. Gano, who has conducted a real estate office at the Babcock building for several years, has moved his place of business to 173 East Front street, occupying the same offices as U. B. Crane. Mr. Gano is the president of the S. P. Q. R. development of Dunellen.

Household Hints

FOURTH OF JULY LEMONADE

The best lemonade is made with boiling water. Three lemons make a quart of lemonade.

Scrub and rinse lemons thoroughly. Chip off the thin outer skin of some of the lemons and steep for ten minutes in a little boiling water. Cut two thin slices from the center of each lemon and lay to one side.

Press juice from the lemons, using corrugated glass or lemon squeezer. Add to the juice sugar to make as sweet as desired, then pour on the proper amount of boiling water together with the strained water from the chipped yellow peel. Let stand until cold, then if not ready to use, stand in the icebox until needed.

Serve with slices of lemon, a couple to each glass.

Fourth of July lemonade takes on a more festive appearance by the addition of a little pink coloring matter, such as comes with some packages of gelatine, or a little currant, strawberry or red raspberry juice, slices of banana, strawberries cut in quarters, raspberries or pitted cherries.

REMOVES FRUIT STAINS

To remove fruit stains from white goods, place two tablespoons of sulphur and one teaspoon of alcohol in a plate and ignite, covering a funnel, small end up, over the blaze to concentrate the fumes. Pass stained goods back and forth over the funnel, allowing the fumes to come in contact with the part stained.

Rinse immediately, and launder in the usual way.

THE TABLE

Baked Rice and Codfish—One and one-half cups rice, one cup water, four cups milk. Add water and milk gradually to rice while cooking and cook half an hour. Glimpses of Married Life

BY MRS. EVA LEONARD

"What do you say to going down to Dr. Brand's church this morning? I haven't heard anything deserving the name of a sermon since we left Detroit, to go to Kansas," said Dick as they rose from the breakfast table.

"All right, let us be sure to go early enough for the organ recital; they are as good as concerts."

"They are concerts. That organist is one of the finest in the country. Will your mother take care of baby?"

"I'll ask her; she has been so good I've hardly realized I had a baby since I came here."

"We're going around by the dear old home, mother," called Nell, as they started off to church, "so we'll be a little later than usual."

"They may say what they please about the 'dim religious light,' it helps one to enjoy the service; the soft yellows and browns of the walls harmonize so beautifully with the dark woodwork."

"Hush!" breathed Nell, as the haunting melody of Debussy quivered through the church, "he's beginning." They exchanged glances of delighted appreciation and settled back to enjoy the music. Two women came in and settled themselves with multitudinous rustlings in the seat behind them just as the dreamy tones were the most delicate.

"That's a beautiful thing that he's playing," said one in a low conversational tone. "I love music," and she proceeded to demonstrate the truth of her remark by sliding the whisperings. Her companion hissed the letter "s" in her words in a nerve-wrecking manner.

Then two girls in the seat in front began.

"Look at Mrs. Blank's ostrich plume; this damp snow has made it look like a chicken's tail after a rain."

The other giggled appreciatively.

"It's all right to wear ostrich plumes a day like this if you can ride in a limousine, but it looks silly for people who walk," continued the first speaker. "I'm glad I have this walking hat; it's just the thing for this damp weather."

"How do you like Angie Smith's hat?"

"Queer that milliners will sell anything so unbecoming. I should think it would hurt their trade."

Nell glanced at Dick. He was glaring at the girls so fiercely she was afraid the usher would notice it. The sybillant whispering continued behind them in spite of occasional discouraging glances over his shoulder.

"I suppose they think that is his natural expression," reflected Nell uneasily.

She was relieved when the service began and Dick's face gradually cleared. He was entirely good natured as they filed out. When they left the car and started up the old familiar road, Nell said:

"Does it seem possible that it lack two months of being a year since w left Detroit; left this little nest w had learned to love so much?"

"Artists say that the way to produce the effect of distance is to ha the surface of the picture broke with many lines. I suppose a yea in which so much has happened bound to seem long," replied Dick.

"That's why it seems ages since we were married. It positively seems as if I'd been married always. I can hardly remember what I used to do or how I used to feel." Nell smiled up into Dick's face.

"We were only partly alive then, had hardly begun to live." Dick

SCOOP, THE CUB REPORTER — OH YOU "STREET OF SMILES" — BY "HOP"

THE WOMAN'S COLUMN

New York—The Maharajah of Kapurthala, who, with Princess Prem Kaur, the most popular of his household of four wives, has been touring America, has planned to sail for Europe on Saturday. Two months ago the Maharajah arrived from India, and within a few days of his arrival here he made the ladies of America sit up and take notice by declaring he had not seen a pretty woman here. Now the Indian prince has traveled far and wide, and should, by the law of experience, be an authority on beauty. But he declared our girls are ugly and he will be unforgiven when he embarks. The Maharajah and his pretty Spanish wife, who was a dancer in Madrid when the Indian prince came to Alphonso's wedding and fell in love with her, have taken in all the sights in America. The princess is charming, and is able to hold the centre of the domestic affairs of her husband, who has placed the other three wives in separate establishments. She is able to maintain the good will of her discarded rivals by entertaining them at her royal palace a few times a year.

Chicago—The women of twelve States can vote for the next President. These States are Wyoming, Colorado, Utah, Idaho, Washington, California, Oregon, Arizona, Kansas, Illinois Nevada and Montana. The number of women who will be eligible to cast their votes is estimated at four millions.

Philadelphia—Miss Margaret Foley, of Boston, mill worker, professional swimmer, magazine writer, social worker and Suffragist spellbinder, electrified the baseball fans here yesterday by a speech from the center of the baseball diamond. She added laurels to her long career in the Suffragist cause, wherein she defeated political gangsters in her home State, put the president of the Massachusetts State Senate out of office by campaigning against him in his own town and stumped through Nevada last year.

Seattle, Wash.—Miss Edna G. Thorne, of Napa, Cal., the first woman president of the United Amateur Press Association, is presiding today at the nineteenth annual convention of the amateur journalists. The organization has members in thirty-six States.

Detroit—The "Bersaglicre" is to be the very last word in headgear for the fashionable woman of America, according to the millinery jobbers who held a convention here last week. While the name looks formidable, it means nothing more strange than the feathers of the common barn-yard rooster. Italy's jump into the European war is responsible for the expected popularity of the new millinery creation. The "Bersagliere" is the name of that oval crowned, medium brimmed black hat worn by the Italian soldiers with a large bunch of jet black rooster feathers trailing over the right side of the brim. The varied hues produced as the light plays upon it is an effect that the millinery savants are quick to bring before the American public. The creation will be inexpensive.

New York—Anna Pavlowa, the famous Russian dancer, with her large troupe of ballet dancers, is on her way to California, where she will pose for the "movies," with her wonderful ballet. She has broken the contract record, for she is to receive $150,000 in cash and large royalties for her six weeks' before the cameras.

Boston—Mrs. Felipe Angeles, who fled Mexico two years ago, and may yet be the first day of Mexico when the strife is quelled, has been living quietly in Boston, with her beautiful daughter, Isabelle. She is the wife of General Angeles, the famous aide of Villa, who some think may be the man selected to head the reconstruction government in the war-swept land. Mrs. Angeles and her daughter speak excellent English. They escaped from Mexico at a critical time, and are now hopeful of an early return.

San Diego, Cal.—A modern Enoch Arden, returning home after twenty-five years to find his wife again married and his name registered as legally dead, has been put to the extreme predicament of proving his identity. Anselmo Sosa, a real estate dealer of Santa Ana, is the returning husband, and his former wife is now Mrs. Mary Bruce, and lives in Berkeley. His former wife refuses to come to identify Sosa. It was to reclaim a lot of land that he owned that he appeared in the local court.

BABY'S RIDE ON WINGS OF GALE

Infant in Carriage Carried Three-quarters of a Mile at Bound Brook.

STORM DAMAGE GREAT

Plainfield Hit by Tail-End of Miniature Cyclone—Deluge Here Flooded the Streets, but Did Comparatively Little Destruction.

Reports from surrounding districts regarding the ravages of yesterday's wind and rain storm indicate that Plainfield was fortunate in escaping with a minimum amount of damage. In nearby towns trees were uprooted, houses unroofed, wires torn down, cellars flooded, traffic blocked, and at South Bound Brook a baby and its carriage were swept high in the air, landing safely nearly a mile away. The deluge brought with it a high wind that left in its wake damage estimated to reach several thousands of dollars. A high sea accompanied the rain at Atlantic coast resorts and the greater amount of destruction was confined to the district where the summer activity is now at its heighth. The suddenness with which the cyclonic visitor came upon the populace afforded the "away-from-homes" little opportunity to seek shelter and as a result many were caught in the deluge.

The streets under the Central Railroad bridges in Plainfield were flooded from curb to curb and automobiles and other vehicles waded through up to the hubs. One enterprising auto salesman took occasion to give a demonstration of the make of car they use in all good jokes nowadays, by running at high speed through the temporary rivers, exhibiting the durability of the machine in fording streams. For a time trolley traffic was blocked but the regular schedule in this city was resumed soon after the storm abated and little inconvenience was suffered.

A house in the course of construction on Stelle avenue, owned by James Manning, was unroofed, and the steeple on top of the First M. E. church was struck. Several streets were washed out in the outlying districts and Watchung avenue at the upper end was considerably the worse for the rain.

At South Bound Brook a woman was hurrying to her home, wheeling a baby carriage. The wind caught the vehicle and carried it nearly three-quarters of a mile to the place where it was found. The baby landed close to the carriage and was not seriously hurt.

Six persons were injured, two so seriously that they had to be removed to the Monmouth Memorial Hospital at Long Branch, when the storm struck Keansburg. The wind ripped off part of the big steamboat dock, overturning a small frame candy stand, throwing it into the water and narrowly missed killing the young woman in charge of it. It was close to the time for the boat from New York to dock at the pier when the squall came up and its velocity was so great that it ripped up much of the planking at the extreme end of the dock, blew down a good sized freight shed, in which there were four employes and then hurled the little candy building into Raritan Bay.

WESTFIELD MAN GIVEN UNTIL MONDAY TO PAY $75 ALIMONY

Jersey City, July 9.—When John R. Lambert, an undertaker with offices in Westfield and Rahway, did not appear in court with $75, one-half the alimony owing to Mrs. Kizzie Lambert, Vice Chancellor Lewis extended the time until Monday morning. Augustus Nash, of Plainfield, attorney for the husband, stated that the order of the day before might not have reached his client and Lambert was given the benefit of the doubt.

"But he will go to jail if the money is not paid before Monday," warned the vice chancellor.

Married twelve years ago, the Lamberts have three children, who live with their mother in Westfield. Husband and wife separated last October and Mrs. Lambert secured an order for alimony of $15 a week. Since May 3 the husband has not made a payment. He claims that business is bad. Mrs. Lambert is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry DeMott, of North Plainfield.

WILL PROBABLY TRY PATROLMAN JULY 20

William Mernagh Confident of Acquittal in Fight Backed by Local P. B. A.

Although no definite date has been set for the trial of Patrolman William Mernagh on charges involving infractions of department regulations preferred against him by Police Chief Kiely, it is expected that the matter will be heard at the adjourned session of the Common Council, Tuesday night, July 20. Mernagh is at present under suspension and has entered a general denial of all allegations. He will be represented at the trial by former Mayor G. W. V. Moy, during whose term of office he was appointed to the police force.

The principal counts in the charges against him involve his alleged "protection" of those who maintained a "speak-easy" in the rear of French's mill on Somerset street, and his threat to shoot the first person who "squealed" on him. According to Mernagh the charges are mere "Tommyrot" and he anticipates little difficulty in clearing himself. Chief Kiely's side of the case is supported by a number of affidavits made by the "speak-easy" proprietor and other witnesses.

What Mernagh's alibi will be is a matter of keen conjecture. Interviewed by a Daily Press reporter this morning the suspended patrolman said that he had already been accorded too much newspaper notoriety and indicated that he had been cautioned by counsel to "keep a stuff upper lip." It is believed that Mernagh will subpoena a number of local citizens as witnesses to aid him in establishing an alibi as to where he was on the nights the specific offenses are said to have happened.

He is a member of the Patrolmen's Benevolent Association, a State organization with a local branch which takes charge of the interests of members in cases of this kind. It is understood that the local branch has investigated the Mernagh cases and will support his fight.

In case he is found guilty after a trial by the Council that body has the power to do three things, viz.: Order a deduction in pay, reduction of rank, or suspension or removal from office. Inasmuch as he is a patrolman the reduction in rank clause is automatically eliminated and it is thought that the only sentence in the case of conviction will be removal from office.

QUARRELING CHILDREN GET PARENTS IN COURT

Taking the sides of their respective children in a childish quarrel on the sidewalk, Mrs. Andrew Judge, of 194 Grove street, and Louis B. Goldstein, a grocer, of 196 Grove street, got into the North Plainfield Police Court this morning, where Recorder Hand reprimanded them sharply for disturbing the peace of the neighborhood and held a $10 fine over the head of each, to be imposed if there is a similar disturbance thereabouts in the future.

The children of the two families were disputing and quarreling in front of the Goldstein store and the Judge home yesterday afternoon, when their elders got into it. So loud and disturbing grew the wrangle that police headquarters was notified, and Chief Marshal Weiss responded. He stopped the noise and ordered both participants to appear in court this morning.

"POOR BOB'S ALMANAK" A CLEVER PUBLICATION

"Poor Bob's Almanak" (A Lot Bed of Learning), from the pen of that versatile writer, R. F. R. Huntsman, manager of advertising, has again made its appearance, and, as usual, is just brim full of bright nd interesting matter. Mr. Huntsman is the advertising man with the Brooklyn Standard-Union.

While his extreme modesty does not prevent him from exploiting the value of that newspaper as a medium of reaching the people, Mr. Huntsman's clever publication presents many valuable suggestions, together with some entertaining stories and a short editorial by John Wanamaker. As a bit of timely advice, Mr. Huntsman says: "Be a Damascus Blade—Hold your temper and you also will be famous."

BUSINESS MEN FOR CONSOLIDATION

Hear Arguments on Both Sides and Vote Unanimously in Favor of Change.

SAUNDERS' ARGUMENTS

Newton B. Smalley and Mayor Calkins Also Have Say—Latter Doubtful Whether Move is Advisable Under Present Law.

After hearing argument pro and con by former Mayors William L. Saunders and Newton B. Smalley, of North Plainfield, on the subject of consolidation of the city and borough, the members of the Plainfield Business Men's Association present at the meeting held in Coward's Hall last night went on record as being unanimously in favor of the project. The meeting was one of the longest the organization has ever held, and was enlivened by acrimonious tilts between speakers.

After disposing of routine business, President Herman Schwed called upon Dr. Saunders, who, after a word of greeting, spoke a little about the industrial and manufacturing advantages of New Jersey, and the great growth made in these lines during the last decade. He said that it was the duty of the people here to encourage manufacturers, for they were needed to successfully aid the growth of the municipality, and that the borough should be brought into Plainfield so as to present a united community in urging such plants to come to this city. He said that in everything but the legal aspect the two

CITY COLLECTOR IN NEW YORK STATE RECUPERATING

City Collector William R. Townsend, who underwent an operation for appendicitis over a month ago, and who has been recuperating at his home on Gresham road since leaving Muhlenberg Hospital, left town early this afternoon for Brewster, N. Y., where he will remain until September first. The City Council has granted him a leave of absence until that time. Mr. Townsend was feeling greatly improved this morning, but will not attempt any active work until after Labor Day.

JUDGE ULRICH ADDRESSES LODGE ON "PYTHIANISM"

Unity Lodge, No. 12, Knights of Pythias, had an enjoyable session last evening, when the first rank was conferred on one candidate by the following: Chancellor commander, Samuel Rothberg; vice-chancellor, Frank Putnam; prelate, William Baker, of Perseverance Lodge; master-at-arms, J. D. Anderson; inner guard, Nelson Wiley; outer guard, George Dean. The program was carried out in a very pleasing manner and met with the approval of all present. After the routine business had been transacted Judge John Ulrich, past grand chancellor commander of New Jersey, delivered an interesting talk on "Pythianism."

Next Thursday evening Unity Lodge will confer the first and second rank on three candidates, and at the same time Deputy Charles A. Nichols and his staff will install the officers for the coming year. The following evening these candidates, together with a class of five from Perseverance Lodge, will receive the third rank from their team, which is considered the best in the State. After the meeting all will adjourn to the banquet room.

Perseverance Lodge, at its meeting in the Babcock building tonight, will confer the second rank on four candidates.

CHILD IS IMPROVING

Viola VanSyckel, the four-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Roy VanSyckel, of 88 Jackson avenue, who fractured her arm at the North avenue station, yesterday morning while waiting to go on the Methodist excursion, is reported today at the hospital as resting comfortably. Through an error the name of VanArsdale instead of VanSyckel was published yesterday.

MINNEHAHA AT HALIFAX FIRE APPARENTLY OUT

Dense Fog Held Vessel Outside Port for Several Hours.

Halifax, N. S., July 9.—Creeping through a dense fog the steamship Minnehaha arrived in the harbor at 12.05 this afternoon. Word was first received that the Minnehaha was twenty miles from the harbor at 7 o'clock this morning, but owing to the dense fog she was compelled to use extreme caution in coming into the harbor.

The fire in the hold is apparently out, although the hatches had not been removed prior to the vessel's arrival here. So sure was Captain Claret that the fire was out that he sent a wireless message, via Capertown Station, before 9 o'clock, to Mr. Franklin, vice-president of International Marine Company, in which he said: "Fire apparently steamed out."

ENDEAVOR CAMP OPENS AT 'PLAINS

Forty Children Arrive to Enjoy Two Weeks of Outdoor Life.

The opening of the Union County Christian Endeavor Camp took place yesterday, when a contingent of forty children arrived for a two weeks' vacation. The camp is situated in a beautiful section of the Watchung mountains, just below Scotch Plains, and is open each year until Labor Day, delegations of children coming every two weeks. Miss Jennie Stoddard, of the Central Baptist C. E. Society, of Elizabeth, will again be the matron this year. Miss Stoddard served in the capacity of assistant matron last year, and proved highly efficient. She will have sole charge this season, being helped throughout the summer by members of the societies from this city and other parts of the county.

Fred C. Lounsbery, Jr., of this city, who has been chairman of the fresh air work of Union county, is president of the board of trustees, and takes an active interest in all matters relative to the welfare of the camp.

The chairmen of the various committees in charge of the camp are as follows: Wilson Hoffman, of Springfield, chairman, house committee; Archie R. Taintor, of Elizabeth, entertainment committee; Frederick L. Mintel, of Rahway, chairman of commissary committee, and Miss Edna G. Schmidt, of Elizabeth, chairman devotional committee.

INCREASES AND DECREASES FOR JERSEY POSTMASTERS

Many salary changes in postoffices in New Jersey have been announced by the Postoffice Department at Washington, the re-adjustment being made on the basis of the gross receipts for the past year. The greatest increases were those of Milltown from $2,400 to $3,000, and Palisades Park from $1,000 to $1,600. Unlike a large majority of the States, New Jersey showed no reductions from second or third class to fourth class offices.

Flemington gets an increase from $2,300 to $2,400; Lebanon from $1,100 to $1,200; Rahway from $2,800 to $2,900; Somerville from $2,700 to $2,800; Whitehouse Station from $1,100 to $1,200. At Elizabeth a reduction is made from $3,500 to $3,400, and at Garwood there is a reduction from $1,900 to $1,800, while at Chatham the reduction is from $1,800 to $1,700.

ASK FOR DONATIONS.

The Plant, Flower and Fruit Guild will receive donations of flowers, fruit, food and delicacies suitable for the sick, Monday afternoon, from 4 to 6 o'clock, and Tuesday morning, from 9 to 10:30 in the rooms of the W. C. T. U., 10 Madison avenue, Babcock building. Persons having no way of sending such donations may notify Joseph M. Harper, 237 East Sixth street, 'phone 758-W, and a boy will be sent for the same. Persons living in the Netherwood district may send donations to Miss Miller, 919 East Seventh street.

"GYM" CLOSING HOURS.

During the months of July and August the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium will close at 9 o'clock every evening except on Saturdays. The baths will remain open half an hour longer.

DEMOCRATS HEAL THEIR PARTY GAP

Harmony Banquet in Elizabeth Last Night Attended by 300 of the "Finest."

A TUTTLE TESTIMONAL

Former Congressman the Guest of Honor — Genuine Get-Together Session With Enthusiastic and Optimistic Speeches.

With James Nugent, of Newark, holding down one end of the banquet table, and Dennis Collins, the dean of Elizabeth Democrats, at the other end, the Democratic gathering in St. Michael's Hall, Elizabeth, last night went down in history as one of the most successful political rallies ever conducted. But for the fact that 300 honest-to-goodness voters of this party witnessed the event and partook of the same menu at the same table, it would be hard to convince the average politician that genuine harmony could prevail at an affair honored by the presence of both Nugent and Collins. Everything went along with a smoothness that was startling, and it was a great testimonial to former Congressman William E. Tuttle, of Westfield, who was the guest of honor. A Plainfield delegation, headed by John P. Owens, was present and did its share toward making the meeting a precedent setter.

Besides the guest of the evening, former Congressman Tuttle, the following delivered speeches: County Chairman Lucius T. Russell, Governor James F. Fielder, former United States Senator James Smith, Jr., for-

FINAL PLANS MADE FOR SHIRTWAIST RECEPTION

Final plans for the "shirtwaist reception" to be given by the Women's League of St. Joseph's church in the new hall at Watchung avenue and Jackson avenue, Monday night, have been completed, and the affair promises to be a most successful one. Prior to the social part of the evening, the members of the league will hold a business session, to which all are requested to be present.

The committee in charge of arrangements is composed of Miss Katherine Conshay, chairman; Miss Nora Bergen, Mrs. Catherine Sutton, Miss Hanagan, Miss Mary Jacot, Miss Margaret Conroy, Miss W. Willis, Miss Elizabeth Day, Miss Catherine Howe, Mrs. N. Helriegel and Mrs. D. Hogan.

FAREWELL PARTY GIVEN TO THE MISSES CLARK

The Misses Marion and Helen Clark, of South avenue, were given a delightful farewell party last evening at the home of Miss Viola Higgins on Stone street, prior to their departure tomorrow on the St. Louis for England. The evening was spent in a musical way, instrumental and vocal solos being rendered by the Misses Jennie Dresselt, Ella Coddington, Emma Windham, while Miss Tryphenia Mattox pleased with several humorous recitations. Refreshments were served at a late hour.

Those present were the Misses Clara King, Jennie Dresselt, Viola Higgins, Tryphenia Mattox, Sadie Newmiller, Gertrude Gibson, Emma Windham, Helen Clark, Marion Clark and Ella Coddington.

CHARLES A. JOHNSON TO BE BURIED IN PLAINFIELD

The funeral of Charles Albert Johnson, of 727 East Seventh street, this city, will be held at the late home Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock and at the Swedish Lutheran church at 3 o'clock. Rev. Karl Anderson, the pastor of the church, will officiate. Burial will be in Hillside cemetery.

Mr. Johnson was employed as a gardener at Roslyn, L. I., and was stricken while at work on Tuesday, passing away a short time afterward. He was forty-two years old and had been working at Roslyn for several years in the capacity of head gardener on the estate of A. Z. Gray. Beside his wife, Mr. Johnson leaves two sons, Charles and John Johnson, of this city.

DR. ZELIE TO PREACH.

Rev. Dr. J. S. Zelie, minister of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, will occupy his pulpit Sunday morning at 10:30 o'clock, and on Monday he will leave for Maine, where he will spend his vacation. During his absence there will be but one service at the church on Sunday at 10:30 o'clock in the morning.

HENRY THORNTON FRACTURES SKULL

Twelve-Year-Old Lad Severely Injured in Fall From Ladder.

Henry Thornton, the twelve-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Thornton, proprietors of Thornton's Hotel, South Plainfield, sustained severe injuries to his head in a fall from a ladder at his home yesterday afternoon, and was removed to Muhlenber Hospital, where an examination disclosed a compound fracture of the skull. It was reported this noon that the boy had just about an even chance of recovering.

Henry had mounted a ladder to climb up on the roof of his father's hotel, where workmen were engaged in making repairs, when the ladder slipped and the boy fell to the ground, a distance of twenty feet, the ladder falling down on top of him and striking his head. He was picked up unconscious and Dr. Albert Pittis, of Plainfiel, summoned. He responded quickly and found the boy's injuries so serious that he advised his removal to the hospital at once. This was done in the automobile belonging to the Rev. Father McDonald, assistant at St. Mary's Roman Catholic church, Plainfield, who had also been summoned.

Although unconscious when he was picked up, the boy soon regained consciousness and remained so. He was reported as resting comfortably this noon.

CLARK HEIRS SETTLE MATTER IN DISPUTE

Elizabeth, July 9.—The dispute which arose over the division of an extra dividend on some Standard Oil Company stock belonging to the estate of Mrs. Dorothy Clark, of Plainfield, was reported to the court today as having been settled. The settlement was on a 50 per cent. basis, W. H. Clark, husband of the deceased, and William Sparkman, a brother, each receiving half. The court made an order to that effect.

When Mrs. Clark died she left a large estate in which was included some Standard Oil Company stock. Just after her death an extra dividend was declared, and it was this that caused the dispute.

PLUVIAL WEATHER MARS PLEASURE OF EXCURSIONISTS

Pluvial weather throughout the entire day broken with a half hour of sunshine spoiled the many outings to Asbury Park, yesterday, the summer resort being the rendezvous for excursionists from Plainfield, Newark and several other places. When the local sections of the Methodist excursion arrived in Asbury Park at 10:30 a. m., a heavy fog permeated the atmosphere, accompanied with a drizzle and it was not until 2 o'clock in the afternoon that the sun shone for a time. Very few attempted swimming in the ocean, and those who did stayed within the first rope, the waves being unusually big and the undertow strong. The temperature of the water was sixty.

A terrific thunder storm at 4 o'clock sent "board-walkers" seeking shelter and it was not until the train pulled out of Asbury Park at 7:15 that the skies began clearing up. In speaking with several store proprietors and cottage owners, all were unanimous in saying that the season this year at the resort was the poorest ever, each complaining of financial embarrassment. Inquires at hotels and private houses revealed the fact that rooms are offered at much lower rates this year than ever before.

PATRICK M'GRATH DIES AFTER A BRIEF ILLNESS

Patrick McGrath, of 664 South Second street, died this morning, following a brief illness. He was seventy-four years of age, and had lived in this city for the last forty-seven years. Beside his widow, he is survived by three sons and one daughter. They are Thomas, William and James McGrath, of this city, and Mrs. Mary Kiernan, of Newark. Two brothers and a sister also survive him, Michael and Thomas McGrath, of New York city, and Mrs. Fitzgerald, of Bridgeport, Conn.

The funeral will be held Monday morning at the late residence, and later from St. Mary's church. Burial will be in St. Mary's cemetery.

GERMAN REPLY BEING FORWARDED

Ambassadaor Gerard Received It Last Night—Arras in Flames.

117 LOST ON AMALFI

French Offensive Continues Successfully East of the Meuse—German Forces in Southwest Africa Have Surrendered.

Berlin, July 9.—Germany's reply to the second American note was sent to Washington today by James W. Gerard, the United States ambassador. The reply was delivered to Mr. Gerard by an attache of the Foreign Office last night.

Arras is burning as a result of continued German bombardment, the Overseas News Agency announced today. It also said that the Arras cathedral had been used as an artillery observation station by the British before its destruction.

Rome, July 9.—One hundred and seventeen Italian sailors perished when the cruiser Amalfi was sunk by an Austrian submarine in the Adriatic, according to an attache of the Ministry of Marine.

Paris, July 9.—The French offensive east of the Meuse River continues with excellent results, according to the French War Office. In an official communique today it was announced that the French recaptured from the Germans 150 yards of trenches in the forest of Le Pretre, lost to the Germans on July 4. In the Vosges mountains the French have taken 700 yards of trenches, and pactured more than 700 men.

The statement says:

"From the sea to the Aisne there were artillery engagements during the night. Between Fey En Haye and Le Pretre Forest we regained about 500 yards of trenches lost on July 4. At Croix Des Carnes the enemy attacked and gained a foothold in our first line, but he was then driven out by a counter attack. They succeeded in holding only a few yards of our foremost trench.

"In the Vosges in the region of Ban De Sapt, at La Fontenelle, we won a marked success. We drove the enemy from that part of our old works which he had captured on June 22. Our troops then captured all the defense works of the Germans from the hill southeast of La Fontenelle to to the Lauois-Moyentier highway. The total gain was 700 yards on a front of 600 yards. We captured 19 officers, one of whom was a battalion chief, two surgeons and 767 men."

The French War Office also gave out a supplemental statement questioning the accuracy of recent German reports claiming victories in the Woevre district. The communique said:

"Contrary to the claim contained in the German official statements of July 5, 6 and 7, the German gains in the forest of Apremont and Le Pretre never exceeded 300 metres."

Pretoria, July 9.—The entire German forces in southwest Africa have surrendered, says an official statements. All hostilities will cease. The army of the union of South Africa will withdraw from German southwest Africa.

Copenhagen, July 9.—The Danish ship, Ellen, bound for Liverpool with a cargo of timber, has been set on fire in the North Sea by a German submarine and destroyed. Her crew was landed at Helingsfors today.

Hull, England, July 9.—The British steamer Guido, of 2,093 tons, was sunk by a German submarine off the coast of Scotland today. Her crew was rescued.

Vienna, July 9.—The Austrian war statement issued today says:

"In the latest fighting in Gorizia, the enemy was repulsed. An attack against Monte Goston was also beaten down."

London, July 9.—A big explosion occurred today in the powder mills at Hanworth, just outside of London. It is feared that the damage was heavy.

London, July 9.—The reasons which led me to predict a long war still hold good, and the time has come when I wish to make larger demands upon the resources of British manhood." This declaration was made today by War Secretary Lord Kitchener in an appeal to the patriotism of the nation. Lord Kitchener's speech at Guildhall created tremendous public interest, and the building was soon overcrowded.

Berlin, July 9.—The German war statement issued today says: "In the western theatre a French attack north of the sugar refinery at Souchez

LOCAL PASTORS ARRANGE FOR SUMMER SUPPLIES

Rev. D. B. F. Randolph, pastor of the Monroe Avenue Methodist church, will spend his vacation, the month of August, at Mountain House, Monroe county, Pennsylvania, in the Poconos. During his absence from the city his pulpit will be supplied by out-of-town preachers. On the first and second Sundays in August the Rev. Dr. M. D. Church, of Somerville, will preach, and for the fourth and fifth Sundays in the month the Rev. Daniel C. Dorchester, of Bound Brook, has been engaged. The third Sunday remains unprovided for.

Short Beach, Connecticut, will be the address of the Rev. C. S. Gillespie, pastor of Grace Methodist Episcopal church, during the month of August. Mr. Gillespie will take his family to Short Beach on Monday and will remain with them until the last of next week, returning to North Plainfield in time to occupy his pulpit on the following Sunday. He will remain at home until the first of August.

ASBURY PARK EXPECTS OVER 10,000 VISITORS

With the assurances of at least 10,000 visitors, the Chamber of Commerce of Asbury Park, yesterday completed its arrangements for handling the national conventions of the Dramatic Order, Knights of Khorassan, the Knights of Pythias and the Pythian sisters. The sessions opn Monday night. A big tent was pitched in Railroad square, Wednesday afternoon, from which President J. A. Waterbury will direct a staff of 150 employes who will work in three shifts through the day and night.

The Chamber of Commerce has received notice of several special trains which will bring delegations to the convention. Many of these, especially from western cities, will arrive at night. The delegations will be registered at convention headquarters assigned to hotels and turned over to guides to be escorted to the hotels. Many Plainfielders will be included in the list of visitors.

This is the first visit of the Khorassan Knights east of the Mississippi. This order is to Pythianism what the Shriners are to the Masonic Lodge and though this will be only its twelfth session, the order already has a membership of more than 30,000. The Pythian order, however, has a membership of more than 750,000 in the United States, and the joint convention with the Khorassan votaries is expected to bring many visitors. Last year in Milwaukee the Khorassans had 18,000 delegates in attendance.

MISS ETHEL KINNAMAN HEARD BY EXCURSIONISTS

Many excursionists took the opportunity yesterday afternoon to listen to Miss Ethel Kinnaman, of this city, who is singing this week with Arthur Pryor's band at the Arcade, Asbury Park. Miss Kinnaman is well known in both this city and the shore resort, where she appeared last summer with Mr. Pryor. She was with Mr. Pryor *at Willow Grove for three weeks this spring, the latter being her second ap*pearance at that place with him. Last summer she traveled with the band through the West, winning much applause wherever she appeared, her clear, contralto voice meeting with instant approval from every audience.

Miss Kinnaman is contralto at the First M. E. church, here, also soloist at the Temple Immanuel, New York city. She will spend her summer commuting between this city, Asbury Park and New York.

AUTOMOBILE SKIDS AND COLLIDES WITH WAGON

Hitting the rail of one of the tracks of the Public Service Railway Company, near Gallagher's corner, which is a full four inches above the surface of the road, shortly after 5 o'clock last evening, a brand new car belonging to the Bolmer garage at Bound Brook skidded and smashed head on into the back of a wagon belonging to Jack and William Gallagher, just as a team of grays attached to the wagon were about to be turned by their driver, Israel Pernell, into a driveway leading to the barn of the Gallagher brothers.

When the automobile struck the wagon Pernell turned a complete somersault from the seat of the wagon to the floor of its body. Very fortunately he was more scared than hurt. As it was the car received much the worse of the collision. Its fender was smashed and its radiator was shoved back. The wagon merely had a piece of wood driven out of its side.

P. O. S. OF A. INSTALL AND INITIATE TWELVE

The monthly meeting of the P. O. S. of A. was featured last evening by the installation of officers and initiation of a class of twelve. The camp had as their guests thirty-five members of the New Brunswick Camp of the order, accompanied by District President Larsen. The New Brunswickites brought four candidates over to be initiated. Following the business and ceremonies of the evening a social hour was enjoyed, during which refreshments were served. The meeting lasted until almost midnight. There were nearly a hundred present.

Mr. and Mrs. John M. Evans are entertaining out-of-town guests.

Nelson B. Dunn has resigned his position at the grocery store of Charles S. Day.

C. E. SOCIETY SOCIAL.

The Christian Endeavor Society of the Presbyterian church will hold a social this evening in the chapel of the church. Miss Laura Todd, chairman of the social committee, assisted by Miss Luella Stryker and the other able members of her committee, have made elaborate preparations for the occasion, and a most enjoyable evening is assured for those who attend.

Mrs. William H. Snyder, of Penfield place, who has had a long siege of illness, is considerably better, and is able to leave her bed and sit up for short periods during the day.

States R. Titsworth, of New Market road, who has been suffering from rheumatism for the past two weeks, was able to take a walk over to town with the assistance of a cane last evening.

MARSHAL HAS A DAY OFF.

Marshal Harry Shugars was among the 200 from this place who went on the excursion of the Methodist Episcopal church to Asbury Park yesterday. The marshal reported that the day was marred by showers throughout. The bathing in the surf, which is eagerly looked forward to by many, was only participated in by a few owing to disagreeable weather and the roughness of the water, the breakers at some stretches of the beach rolling in as far as the boardwalk, according to the marshal.

Thomas Fragble, the genial tender of the Union News stand at the local depot, has resumed his duties after an absence of several weeks on account of rheumatism.

J. Russell Garretson, of Front street, leaves on Saturday night on a week's vacation trip. Mr. Garretson's first stop will be at Niagara Falls. He will stop there for several days and will then go to Pennsylvania, where he will visit friends.

Theodore W. Day, Jr., of Front street, is able to be out and about after being laid up since last Wednesday with rheumatism. Mr. Day hopes to be able to resume his duties as fireman on the Central Railroad in a few days.

Mrs. William Pernell has returned to her home on Chestnut street after a short visit out of town.

MISS ALICE BRICK DIES AT MUHLENBERG HOSPITAL

Miss Alice M. Brick, of 930 South avenue, died this morning in Muhlenberg Hospital after being operated upon for appendicitis. She was stricken two weeks ago, and the case was an aggravated one. Three operations were performed in the hope of saving her life. The funeral will be held Monday morning at 8 o'clock from the house and at 9 o'clock from St. Mary's Roman Catholic church, with interment in St. Mary's cemetery.

Miss Brick was thirty years of age and was a teacher in the Westfield Grammar School. She resided with her mother, Mrs. Nellie Brick, at the South avenue address. Besides her mother, ten brothers and sisters survive her, all of whom live in this c communities are one, and that the borough has already asked, by a vote of the people, to be taken in, and that therefore there is no reasonable excuse for not submitting the question to the people of the city. "If they do not want us, and say so at the polls, all well and good," said the speaker.

WANT CONSOLIDATION

Dr. Saunders quoted liberally from a report of a committee, consisting of former Mayor Gilbert, Floyd T. Woodhull and Mason W. Tyler, in which the advantages of consolidation were set forth. He admitted that it would be better to have annexation to Union county at the same time consolidation is brought about, but said that the former was practically an impossible thing until after the latter had been accomplished. He felt sure that if consolidation took place, and it was found that the conditions with the people living in two counties became unendurable, the Legislature would soon correct the matter.

But the legal phase, according to the speaker, was secondary to the practical and humanitarian phase. The people of the city are helped in their support by those of the borough. All the city stores draw largely from borough people, because of the lack of business places "over the brook," our charities are supported by them, and they never fail when so called upon. The former Mayor said that he hoped that the business men would take the lead in the movement in the city to bring about a special election.

After Dr. Saunders had completed his remarks a resolution was offered placing the Business Men's Association on record as being heartily in sympathy with the movement to bring about consolidation, and stating that it was the belief of the organization that a special election should be called at some date in the immediate future so that the people of the city could decide whether they wanted to combine the municipalities or not.

The introduction of the resolution brought former Mayor Smalley to his feet. He had come to the meeting as an outsider, but he asked for the privilege of being heard, and was given fifteen minutes. His only argument was that consolidation was inadvisable without annexation, and would cause great confusion to the new municipality. He also said that borough property values would be seriously affected in case consolidation alone came.

President Schwed, John J. Varley, John A. Gaffney and Judge Holmes, formerly of Cook county, Ill., but a resident of the borough for the last five years, were also speakers in favor of consolidation. After they were through the resolution formerly introduced was unanimously passed.

Mayor Calkins, who had been an interested listener all through the previous discussion, was asked to say a few words. He declared that the subject was one which he knew very little about, and that he would care to go further into the matter before committing himself, especially as he found great difference of opinion on the subject in the city. He felt that perhaps the consolidation would be jeopardized in Plainfield if the vote was insisted upon at once. The Mayor also said that he was not fully in accord with Mr. Saunders that the objection about the city being in two counties was a trivial one, as he felt that the machinery of government and administration might be very complicated with the city divided by a county line. He also said that while consolidation would be a good thing if brought about under proper conditions, he would be sorry to see an unfavorable vote in Plainfield because of a lack of preparedness. He referred to conflicts of authority which might come because of the two-county feature, but realized that we are physically one community, and should be in every other way.

Councilman John H. Cose spoke along the same line as the Mayor.

At the business meeting of the organization, an ordinance which has been prepared by City Counsel Reed to keep fly-by-night merchants out of town was read, and it will be asked that it be acted upon by the City Council.

Plans for another Dollar Day, on Wednesday, September 1, were put underway, and a committee consisting of A. E. Force, chairman; Henry Rosenbaum and Hebert Schuldenfrei were named to make the necessary arrangements.

THE CHANCELLOR'S GOOD WORK.

The order of Chancellor Walker directing that the name of Simon Hahn, a lawyer in Newark, be stricken from the roll of his court for unprofessional conduct is timely. He has been a police judge in Newark and was at one time a member of the Legislature of New Jersey.

Hahn's offence was a grevious one. He extorted from a wealthy citizen of Newark $25,000 in cash under a threat of exposure of his improper relations with a colored woman. It was a terrible charge to make against the man and, if true, was revolting. But that, of course, did not justify Hahn. Of late the Chancellor has been doing some splendid service in cleaning out the objectionable practitioners in his court. About a month ago he ordered the names of four or five other lawyers stricken from the rolls.

Lawyers are officers of the court. People go to them because they hold a certificate, issued by the court, which gives them the right to advise people as to the law. Their relation is most confidential and it is the duty of the court to protect the public against wrongs committed by them. No man in a community should be more scrupulous in his conduct and dealings than the lawyer. His integrity should be unquestioned and in his dealings with his client he should exercise the strictest honesty and fairness. It is to be regretted that many forget this duty or at least do not adhere to it.

A lawyer should handle his client's money and conduct his business on lines of honor and morality. He should never do anything that his conscience does not approve and that he is not sure he would be willing should see the light of day. He should never mingle his client's money with his own or allow his client to do anything which honor and uprightness does not dictate to be right. If the courts would be more strict with the transactions of lawyers, it would be promotive of their better professional standing and their higher repute in the community. The lawyers themselves should expose any misfeasance of their associates and bring all questionable transactions, coming to their notice, to the attention of the court.

In all matters of square dealing the lawyer should be the leader in his community. A disreputable lawyer harms all his brethren and it is a hopeful sign to see the Court of Chancery taking hold of the professional delinquents and bringing them to account. A good, honorable lawyer is a blessing to any community, and a bad one is a disgrace to his profession. The Chancellor is to be commended for his good work.

Grade crossing deaths on Monday last made an awful record in this State and Pennsylvania. Four people were killed at one blow at Farmingdale, in Monmouth county, and a family of six were wiped out when a train struck them in Hummelstown, Pennsylvania. From other parts of the country come reports of similar accidents, and every day since the newspapers have told of deaths as a result of grade crossing accidents on Monday. Probably the mortality this year was greater from this cause than from the usual Fourth of July crop. It will probably be claimed, as the Trenton State Gazette points out, that contributory negligence on the part of those who lost their lives were responsible for the accidents. If, however, the opportunity to be negligent had not existed, the tragedies would not have occurred. If the grade crossings were not in existence, there would be no such toll of death as is recorded.

Ocean Grove has a complaint. Its people say that when the National Anti-Saloon League chose Atlantic City as the meeting place for its convention, the organization gave encouragement and financial aid to a city which has been notoriously a friend of the demon rum. The people of the camp-meeting town feel that the convention should have come to Ocean Grove. Had the latter place a well organized publicity bureau always on the job, as is the case in Atlantic City, perhaps they could have attracted the convention, but the old-fashioned method of running the "Grove" will never attract anything big.

Why is it that every other community around here knows more or less accurately the result of the State census, which was supposed to have been completed by June first, and in Plainfield the work is not even completed? Supervisor Reville has been on the job, but it looks as if some of the enumerators had fallen down in their work.

United States Senator James E. Martine will tell the readers of the Daily Press something about his recent trip to Hawaii in the contributed editorial tomorrow night.

"Every sixth family in Paterson owns a motor car," says the Call of that city. Evidently Billy Sunday did not get all their money.

This is one of the summers that does not especially please the iceman.

NO TRUTH IN REPORT THAT SENOR CARRANZA HAS FLED

Galveston, July 9.—United States Consul Canada postively and emphatically denies reporting that General Carranza had fled with a few trusted followers to San Juan De Ula, says a cablegram from Vera Cruz today. The cablegram states that Carranza contemplates prohibiting exportation of cattle from any port under constitutionalist control.

Washington, July 9.—Railroad traffic between Neuvo Laredo, Monterey, and Tapico and between Matamoras and Monterey has been restored, according to a despatch to the Carranza agency here from the Carranza consul at Laredo, Texas. Secretary Tumulty today said he knew nothing of the reported messages from American consuls in Mexico, appealing to President Wilson for intervention in Mexico.

RECREATION NOTES

The colored people are enjoying the social evening at Washington School each Friday, and are coming out in large numbers. Tonight readings will be given from the well-known play, "Peg o' My Heart." This will be followed by the regular program of dancing. Lemonade will be for sale.

The municipal dance is to be held at Washington School tomorrow night as usual. Good music and a good floor attract a large share of Plainfield's young people. The lemonade booth is one of the new attractions.

PARDON FOR BORO MAN.

Among the thirty-five paroles granted by the State Court of Pardons is one to Walter Smalley, of North Plainfield, convicted of a charge of embezzlement preferred against him by the local police. His minimum sentenc ewould expire within the next two months. The parole was granted to Smalley in compliance with the usual prison regulations and will take effect upon the expiration of the minimum term.

PERSONAL.

Augustus Van Deventer, of Myrtle avenue, and Harold McDowell, of Monroe avenue, are attending the Government Military Instruction Camp located at Plattsburg, New York.

Mrs. A. B. Drake, of Belmar, is visiting Mrs. Briggs, of Albert street.

Mrs. Alfred Seidel, of Jackson avenue, the borough, spent yesterday in New York city.

Miss Elizabeth Cooney, of West Fifth street, has returned home after spending a few days with friends in High Bridge.

Miss Anna Daley, of West Fifth street, has returned home after enjoying a two weeks' sojourn at Mount Pocono.

Miss Elizabeth Conde spent the week-end with relatives in High Bridge.

Mr. and Mrs. Ray T. Kline and son, of East Seventh street, have returned from a two weeks' visit with Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Jennings, of Warrenville.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Chilton and family have removed from West Front street to Sycamore avenue where they will make their home with Mr. Chilton's parents.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur North and son, of Watchung avenue, have returned from a visit to Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Schaumacher, of Brooklyn.

Rev. Dr. William Manchee, formerly pastor of the Congregational church in this city, but now of Newark, spent several days visiting in this city. Mr. Manchee was succeeded here by Rev. C. L. Goodrich, who recently resigned after a pastorate of thirty-one years. Mr. Manchee has led a retired life.

Harry Nolte, of North Plainfield, leaves today for Jacksonville, Fla., where he has secured a position with the Seminola Hotel, as assistant chef. Mr. Nolte expects to spend some time in the south before returning home.

Dr. Frederic J. Hughes, of Park avenue, left yesterday afternoon on a four weeks' trip to the Hudson Bay country in Canada. In company with a guide Dr. Hughes will tour the country, devoting his time to catching specimens of speckled trout that live in the Canadian lakes and streams.

SWING OF THE WIND.

Thirty-five years ago, while making a four months' voyage, I was frequently impressed by the unerring accuracy with which Captain Crosby, one of the best known captains sailing from New York, forecast the state of the weather. In reply to my question he answered: "Doctor, as a result of fifty years of seagoing life, I can assure you that almost invariably, I might say without exception, the wind in its shifting follows the course of the hands of a clock—that is, from left to right.

"Of course," he added, "one cannot say how long the wind will remain in any one quarter, but when it changes it will, almost without exception, take the course I have stated. For instance, if the wind is in the northeast, instead of going to the north and then to the northwest, it will on the contrary go over to the east, southeast, south, southwest, west, and finally reach the northwest."

When I asked him why that should be, he said he had never been able to obtain an answer to that, but that it was an absolute rule as far as the experience of his life went.

One other observation I have made through all these years, although it is not by any means as exact as the first, is that the winds have a fairly accurate length of time in which they remain in their various quarters. For instance, northeast and east winds are generally two or three days in duration, gradually shifting to southeast and south, then after a day's interval, or less, reaching west and northwest. These remarks apply only to the Atlantic coast and contiguous states and are inapplicable to the Pacific, where the conditions, in some respects even more remarkable, are entirely different.—Dr. Frank Abbott In New York Times.

Wills In Ancient Greece.

Wills were introduced into Athens by Solon, though in many other parts of Greece they were discountenanced. Diogenes Laertius gives copies of the wills of several celebrated men, such as Plato, Aristotle and others. Before Solon's law no man was allowed to make a will, the wealth of the deceased belonging in certain proportion to the members of his family and even after Solon only an Athenian citizen had the privilege of bequest, the estates of both slaves and foreigners being confiscated for the use of the public.

FIREMAN RECOVERING.

William Gaub, a fireman stationed at the West Second street fire house, who was injured in answering an alarm several weeks ago, has been discharged from the hospital and is able to be about again with the aid crutches. Gaub's injury consisted of a serious break of the ankle bone and his recovery has not been as rapid as anticipated.

Gospel service will be held at the Plainfield Airdome, corner Watchung avenue and Front street, Sunday evening at 7:30, to which all are cordially invited.

Don't forget that classified advertisements must be in by noon on Saturdays.

A Galley o' Fun!

JUST ABOUT.

Uncle Ezra—Then what do you think is the matter with the world nowadays?

Uncle Eben—Just this: There's too much business in religion and not enough religion in business!

WHEN HUSBANDS ADVERTISE

In that glorious age coming, when free love, trial marriages, and suffrage shall be supreme; when women will choose their mates, and there will be mating here, there, and everywhere, it is possible that good husbands will advertise for wives in a manner similar to that now employed by publishers in vending their books. Like this, for example:

J. HENRY JONES,

The Much-Discussed Co-respondent in the Smith-Brown Divorce, Is Now at Liberty.

"He is a good husband. I enjoyed his two evenings at home exceedingly. I speak from six months' experience."—Fannie Bryce Jenkins-Jennings—Kirk-Jones—Werkman-Keith.

"His mouth makes the most adorable pucker when about to kiss."—Gertrude X. (Present name furnished to reputable parties upon application. No triflers need apply.)

"I loved the way he said 'prunes.' We never quarreled but twice in our married life of ten days. I would especially recommend him as a husband to women desirous of having a husband that will give their lapdogs the care and affection to which they have been accustomed."—Joy Hartwell Jones * * * * Munson.

"There was only one thing I didn't like about J. Henry—he would never wear a puff tie and, of course, couldn't live all my life with a man like that. Aside from this strange eccentricity of his, I had a perfectly lovely time while married to him."—Statement upon witness-stand made by plaintiff in Mr. Jone's tenth suit for divorce. See Ala. 356, E. 23, 1911 page 422.

"One can't say too much about Mr. Jones's English. He used the most elegant English of any gent I was ever married to."—Olive Cornmeal. (Maiden name restored at last divorce on grounds that Miss Cornmeal couldn't sign all her married name on the hotel register without taking two pages and slopping over on the third.)

Above testimonials give striking evidence of the high esteem in which Mr. Jones was held by his former wives.

Applications will be filed in the order received, and must be accompanied by certified check to cover wedding-suit and marriage-license. References required. Address,

J. Henry Jones (at liberty), 2 Newlywed Apartments.

THE ERA OF TROUSERS.

For "My Lady."

INDULGENCE.

At Four Years.
She wanted lots of candy,
The precious little pet!
And what the darling wanted
She surely ought to get!
Of cookies, pies, and coffee,
Or sugar-plums, in force;
And it ruined her digestion,
Of course!

At Six Years.
She wanted toys and dollies,
Or something else instead,
She wouldn't eat her porridge,
And wouldn't go to bed!
She fought, and won the battle,
And screamed 'til she was hoarse:
And spoiled her disposition,
Of course!

At Sixteen.
She wanted to be pretty,
A sort of fluffy dream,
She lived on cake and pickles,
A dainty, precious team!
She loathed fresh air, and walking,
And work, and all that's coarse;
And she ruined her complexion,
Of course!

At Seventeen.
She wanted shows, and novels,
And everything that's gay,
A lazy life, and easy,
With only fun and play.
And in the race with Mother
She rode the winning horse;
And she clipped her education,
Of course!

At Eighteen.
She wanted to get married,
Her heart was all aflame,
The man was quite unworthy,
She loved him just the same.
She thought she did, the baby!
And Father must endorse;
And she spoiled her life forever,
Of course!

A SUBMARINE SIGHTED OFF THE COAST OF MAINE, BUT—

DEMOCRATS HEAL PARTY GAP

mer Congressman Edward W. Townsend, State Treasurer Edward E. Grosscup, Secretary of State Thomas F. Martin, State Banking Commissioner George M. LaMonte, State Comptroller Edward I. Edwards, Congressman John J. Eagan, James R. Nugent, Eugene K. Kinkead, United States Senator James E. Martine, State Water Commissioner Laurent C. Tonnele, Judge James C. Connolly.

The appearance of certain factional leaders who have long been at odds gave rise to the romor that the banquet was being held primarily to establish a truce and to put an end to Union's Democratic squabbling. That the gathering was a "healer" was the decision of the Plainfielders, and "the tie that binds" was strengthened considerably for the fall campaign. Former Senator James Smith, Jr., came in for the lion's share of the enthusiastic applause tendered to speakers. He struck the keynote when he uttered his pledge of loyalty to President Wilson, and assured those present of his belief that the last break in the Democratic party in New Jersey and the United States had been healed.

It was evident that the banquet was to be a peaceful demonstration from the time the first course was passed out. Between mouthfuls of a tempting banquet the weapons of war were sunk deeper into the past, and by the time the last speaker had finished the most bitter enemies in the hall were willing to smother each other with handshakes and wish the party all the success that united effort could give it.

OUTLINE Y. M. C. A. PROGRAM.

The social committee of the Y. M. C. A. held a meeting last night, to formulate a program for the coming year and made satisfactory progress. Because there are still a few details to be arranged in connection with the program, the committee decided to refrain from making the program public until tomorrow or Monday.

Y. W. C. A. NOTES

Further enrollments in the orchestra class at the Y. W. C. A. will be received tomorrow night. Any member of the association who plays a stringed instrument is invited to join the class, which meets in the parlors every Saturday night.

The regular Saturday night supper will be served tomorrow at 6:30. The charge is nominal and any business woman can receive a wholesome meal.

WAR NEWS

was repulsed. East of Ailly unsuccessful isolated attacks by the enemy occurred. We took by storm several French trenches extending over a width of 350 yards, adjoining our newly captured positions in Priest-Malo, to the east of Ailly. We captured 250 prisoners and four machine guns.

PERSONAL.

Mr. and Mrs. Kraigenow are spending their vacation at Pawtucket, R. I.

George H. Babcock has opened his attractive cottage at Watch Hill, R. I., El Reposo.

Mrs. Albert Ball Davies and her children, Dick Rhodes and Helen Tennant Davies, of Plainfield, are at Summer Rest for the season with Colonel and Mrs. A. E. Dick. Mr. Davies spent the Fourth with his family and will go to Watch Hill for the week-ends.

TOO DRUNK TO DRIVE.

Charged with being so intoxicated that there was imminent danger of his driving his horse and wagon into a sewer ditch or colliding with another rig, Dennis W. O'Loughlin, 61 years old, of 410 New street, Plainfield, was arrested by Chief Marshal Weiss, of the borough, yesterday afternoon. Recorder Hand imposed a fine of five dollars upon him this morning.

Easy to Be Prosperous

Do you want to make Plainfield the most prosperous city of its size in the nation? Of course you do for it is to your benefit to do so. And it is not difficult, it is easy. All that is necessary is that you buy in Plainfield stores at every opportunity. The results will be astounding and in a short time will be felt by every one in the city.

Plainfield Merchants, craftsmen and mechanics are the foundation upon which the prosperity of this community is erected. If they prosper and succeed then our city as a whole must prosper and succeed.

It is not as though you were being urged to buy inferior merchandise, for you are not. You get just as good value for your money when you buy at Plainfield Stores as when you purchase goods elsewhere, and oftentimes better value, and you are doing your community a great deal of good every time that you do so.

Let's get the habit "Try Plainfield First."

Saurer at Netherwood.

Three stellar attractions are carded to comprise tomorrow's City League baseball dish. One aggregation, at least, has cause for worry. The Tabs are the ones who should be troubled, for they have to stack up against the best in the league when they arrive at Soccer Field for the weekly fray. Although perched, seemingly safe, on the top rung of the ladder with no defeats chalked up against them, the Abstainers, by losing to Hope in tomorrow's melee will have to take second place. Britt Martin's reinforced Saurer outfit is scheduled to fight for honors with the Clintonians, and if Britt can infuse enough life into his new and old charges, one can safely predict a victory for the shopmen.

On the other hand, Lou Brown and his boys are not the kind to bow to a superior force without giving the opposition a run for the money. The scene of this bombardment will be Parker Field, where there is plenty of room for all. The third game booked for the leaguers tomorrow is the Netherwood-Baptist go on West End avenue lot. As yet the Baptist have not won a game, but the addition of the three ex-N. P. H. S. men is sure to add to their chance of winning tomorrow. However, Manager Coughlin, of the Netherwood forces, declares that his team will not be the first to bow before the lowly Firsts, and if the Orients play as they did last Monday, when they annexed a ten-inning argument from the Clinton Avenues, we feel inclined to put a great deal of faith in Coughlin's assertion.

Scattered Sport Gleanings

Just why certain City League managers should make such a fuss over a fellow by the name of Hirsh is more than we can understand. Playing for North Plainfield High School in the Interscholastic League this alleged first sacker didn't turn any stunt that would be likely to set the world afire.

Maybe he's wanted for ballast but it would be far more appropriate for a local league pilot to sign up something besides dead-wood for ballast.

Rattling the sport skeleton of 1904 we note that Leal School, North Plainfield, Plainfield and Westfield High Schools engaged in a dual athletic meet in which the first prize for pole vaulting was awarded to a fellow who cleared the bar at 7 feet 4 inches; and the first medal in the running high jump went to a contender who had 4 feet 6 inches to his credit. We're of the opinion that these marks wouldn't qualify an athlete of the present generation for a grammar school competition.

How about those paddlers sporting Plainfield regalia who have been doing so much chinning about taking a whack at the State canoe champs? Now's the time to come across with the entries and put Plainfield on the map in water sports.

Judging from the healthy appearance presented by the Parker Field junior league it would not be out of the way for us to suggest that some enterprising City League magnate get an option on the Randolph road organization as a "farming-ground" for promising recruits.

Hobbling into the office on a pair of crutches "Katz" Miller, the Saurer slab artist, informed us that his injured limb would be in condition to allow him to twirl in two weeks. Therein lies the difference between a minor league and a big league player. Miller belongs to a circuit on which it profits him nothing to be idle while a big leaguer oftentimes gets paid for nursing a hurt long after it heals.

It looks as though that Spicer athletic meet was going to be the only event of its kind this year colored wholly with local talent. Forerunning tales inform us that its going to be a hummer and the shopmen are training faithfully for the various events carded.

REINHART-GLENNEY MATCH AT P. C. C.

Interest Centers Around Meeting of Two Cracks Tomorrow.

Interest in Plainfield Country Club golf circles tomorrow will centre around the meeting of Frank O. Reinhart and W. Lester Glenney in the final round for the club championship. Added zest has been lent to this year's windup because of the fact that Will T. Glenney, for four years the club's title-holder, was eliminated by Reinhart last Saturday afternoon, and many are anxiously awaiting the result of his brother's effort tomorrow to retrieve lost family laurels.

It goes without saying that both players will be at their best tomorrow and the match will be a spirited one from start to finish. In forcing his way into the finals Reinhart had to go through twenty holes of exceedingly strenuous play and turned in a card of 1 up against Will Glenney in the first sixteen of Saturday's play. Lester Glenney mounted to the final class by taking Charles A. Reed into camp with a tally of 7 and 5 in the first sixteen last Saturday.

In the semi-finals Reinhart beat D. O. Rogers 5 and 4, and Glenney beat S. D. Lounsbery 1 up (20 holes).

AUTO RACES AT BRIGHTON.

Ben Gotof, the auto driver who wsa reported killed a few weeks ago at Minneapolis, arrived here yesterday and entered the 100-mile race and sprint events to be held at the Brighton Beach race track tomorrow night. Gotof's car, the big National, was badly damaged in the accident, but the driver escaped injury. The car has been repaired and will be out for a trial today.

HIGH SCHOOL POOL A POPULAR CENTER

Many Are Taking Advantage of Opportunity to Take Indoor Dips.

The public swimming pool at the Plainfield High School was opened for the summer Tuesday. So far the attendance has been fair and it is hoped that with the coming of hot weather more will take advantage of the opportunity offered.

Boys have the use of the pool on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays from 9 to 11 a. m., and girls at the same hours on Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays. Good crowds have been on hand each day. In the near future races will be arranged for both boys' and girls' periods, for which prizes will be given.

Monday, Thursday and Friday afternoons are reserved for women and the Wednesday evening period, which has been so popular, is continued, and Saturday evening from 7:30 to 8:30 has been added. For men the open evenings are Tuesday, 7:30 to 9:00, Thursday, 7:30 to 8:30; Friday, 8:30 to 9:30, and Saturday, 8:30 to 10:00.

A number of periods have been taken by private classes and the Y. W. C. A. also conducts a period on Wednesday evenings. Several desirable hours are still open, and may be secured by telephone at the High School.

P. C. C. MIXED DOUBLES.

Play will be continued tomorrow in the mixed doubles tennis tournament at the Plainfield Country Club, when Mr. and Mrs. Howard Colby meet Mr. and Mrs. Howard Craig. Last Saturday Mr. and Mrs. Colby defeated Mr. and Mrs. Harold Brown in the semi-final round by scores of 7-5, 6-8 and 10-8.

CHURCH TEAMS TO CLASH ON HYDE OVAL BALL PARK

On Hyde Oval tomorrow the Trinity Reformed church baseball team will cross bats with the St. Joseph's, of North Plainfield. This contest will be the second of the season for the Trinity team, the first, played two weeks ago, being a victory over the Interhavens. Although no official lineup has been given out it is understood that Willett will use about the same team that appeared in the first encounter. Oscar Dilts will adorn the hillock, with Schneider behind the bat. Harvey is carded to play around first and Larison will handle the second sack job. Johnnie Dawe on short and Joe Kirch on third round out a very formidable infield.

There is likely to be a change made in at least two positions in the outfield, but it is certain that Harry Kirch will be one of the three chosen to guard the outer stations. He probably will take care of the flies in the left garden and may have as co-fly catchers Bob Dawe and French. Marsh, the N. P. H. S. man, is to be on hand, too.

The lineup of the St. Joseph team is to be a surprise, but it is practically sure to contain among others the following diamond lights: The McDonough brothers, Harold Meade, Eddie Conshay, Dan Denny, Harry Moulton, and possibly George Howe. Conshay or Dan Denny will handle the pitching proposition, the first named being the manager of the organization.

SCHOOLEY TUNING UP FOR ATLANTIC COAST EVENTS

William Schooley, former State hurry-scurry champion and former resident of this city, will compete in the Atlantic Coast and New Jersey State Canoe championships over the half-mile straightaway course on Deal Lake, Asbury Park, Friday and Saturday, July 30 and 31.

Schooley captured three prizes in the safe and sane carnival at Newark, Monday morning, although defeated by Harold Rohlffs in the hurry-scurry event.

CITY-BORO TENNIS TITLE MAY BE DECIDED AT P. C. C.

Play will be resumed tomorrow afternoon at the Plainfield Country Club for the Plainfield and borough tennis singles' title, the cream of the male court talent in the two municipalities being listed to perform. The tournament has now reached its semi-final stages and it is not unlikely that the championship will be decided tomorrow. At any event, the semi-finals will be reached.

Several matches remain to be contested in the third round and it is expected that some long and spirited ones will develop. The players remaining in the competition are of high calibre and thoroughly competent to give a good account of themselves.

DOOIN IN N. Y. REGALIA.

When the Giants again take up the home diamond struggle, this time with Cincinnati as opponents, there will be one new face among the home guard. "Red" Dooin, who for several years rode a stormy sea as manager of the Phillies and who last winter was traded to Cincinnati for a "bat-bag," has continued his trip and now is a Giant. He probably will make his first appearance as a Giant regular in one of the two games scheduled for today.

ROYAL GAME OFF.

The baseball match between the local Royal Giants and the All Stars, scheduled to be played tomorrow on Parker Field, has been called off. Inability to obtain the use of the field is assigned as the cause of the cancellation. The two teams have already played one game of a three-game series, and it is likely that the second match will be staged on Parker Field next Saturday.

BIG YEAR FOR YALE.

New Haven, Conn., July 9.—The annual report of the Yale University Athletic Association for the year 1913-14 was made public last evening. It shows that the receipts for the year ended September 1, 1914, were $134,038.04, the largest in the history of the association.

JACKSON A WINNER.

Detroit, Mich., July 9.—Clarence Jackson, Michigan's three cushion billiard champion, yesterday afternoon defeated H. Solomon, Pacific Coast title holder, in the first block of a 200 point match, 50 to 31, in sixty-five innings. High runs—Jackson, 9; Solomon, 3.

MARTY O'LOUGHLIN FINISHES THIRD ROUND TWO STROKES BEHIND HAGEN, THE FAVORITE

Plainfield Boy Playing in Excellent Form and is Confident of Closing up the Existing Gap This Afternoon—Walter Hagen has a Card for Three Rounds Totalling 219, While Guy Nicholls Leads the Field with a 218—P. C. A. Professional's Record is 223.

(Special to Daily Press.)

Fox Hills Golf Club, S. I., July 9.—Playing in a finished style, putting accurately and driving consistently, Marty O'Loughlin, the Plainfield Country Club's professional, finished the third round of the metropolitan open championship here this morning with a score of 76. That O'Loughlin is displaying his best form is the opinion of the large gallery of interested Plainfielders who are following the play, and a sensational finish in the afternoon's round is anticipated. When he started on his outward trip this morning he was pitted against Walter C. Hagen, of Rochester, who turned in a card of 74, two strokes better than his opponent. During the noon recess Marty confidentially remarked that he would make up the gap on the outward trip this afternoon. This gives Marty a total tally of 223 for the three rounds, and Hagen has a card aggregating to 219, a stroke more than the one presented by Gil Nicholls, of Wilmington. Better weather conditions favored the players this morning, the rain having stopped, but there was still a stiff breeze blowing across the links.

Experts following the play single Hagen, the Massachusetts' totle holder, out as the probable winner. His form is the last word in perfection, and he expresses a personal confidence that is above the ordinary. His round this morning took four more strokes to complete than his record-breaking one of yesterday, but those who know golf expect to see him break through the one-stroke advantage now held by Nicholls.

Marty O'Loughlin "came back" in a way that delighted the gallery of Plainfield spectators yesterday afternoon, his card tying him with Jim Barnes, the Western champion, for fifth place in the ratings. In the morning Marty went out in 37 and came back in 36; in the afternoon he went out in 37 and took two strokes more in coming in. This gave him a card of 149. Eugene J. McCarthy, the former Somerville professional, but who is now competing for the Jacksonville, Florida, club, brought in a card of 37, 39, 42, 40—158. O'Loughlin is a former protege of McCarthy's and the veteran had the pleasure of seeing his pupil complete the circuit nine strokes ahead of his own card.

An interesting position was reached in yesterday's competition when the fifteenth man turned in a card within five strokes of the leaders. Although through most of the day the eighty-two contestants had to struggle with a storm of wind and rain, one had to have a close acquaintance with par to leave off with any chance of "figuring" in the second day's play. The last time the metropolitan open was decided over the Fox Hills course a score of 300 strokes was low. That was in 1905. Indications are that the title this year will be won with a return of about ten strokes lower. It all goes to show the strides that are being made in the game in the way of turning out players, for while the implements, notably the golf balls, have been greatly improved, giving more length from tee and through the green, the courses have also been made much harder than they used to be.

Walter C. Hagen, of Rochester, N. Y., the national open champion in 1914 and the holder of the Massachusetts State open title, who was tied at 145 strokes for first place at the completion of play yesterday, was paired with Marty O'Loughlin for today's competition. "Bob" MacDonald, of Buffalo, occupied the top rung with Hagen. Despite the storm yesterday the Rochester player set up a new record of 70 for the links, going around in the afternoon, when things were worse, with 37 and 33 for his halfway totals. The last five holes the Rochester star made in an average of 3 each. Hagen got down good putts at the fourteenth and sixteenth, but he had three shots on the tenth green. It was by no means "fluky" golf that enabled the champion to make such a fine showing and it goes without saying that Marty O'Loughlin had his work cut out for him this morning.

Trailing MacDonald and Hagen yesterday at 146 strokes were J. J. McDermott, the national champion in 1911 and 1912, and William Macfarlane, professional at the Suburban Club, of Baltimore. "Tom" Boyd, the Fox Hills "pro," and Gilbert Nicholls, Wilmington, were each 147; George Sargent, of Chevy Chase, the U. S. G. A. open champion of 1909; "Tom" McNamara, of Boston, and Isaac Mackie, formerly the instructor at Fox Hills, each showed a total for the thirty-six holes of 148. One stroke away were James Barnes, of Whitemarsh Valley, the Western open title holder; "Marty" O'Loughlin, of Plainfield, and C. L. Mothersele, of Malba Field Club, while just one stroke behind this group were "Alex" Smith, Wykagyl; Wilfrid Reid, of Seaview, and "Joe" Mitchell, of Ridgewood.

HELPING THE WHITE SOX STAY ON TOP

Left to right: Roth, Felsch and John Collins (a new picture).

That the Chicago White Sox are leading the American league is due in no small part to the fine work of the outfield—Roth, Felsch and John Collins. These men are strong not only at fielding but in every department of the game.

WHILE THERE'S LIFE, THERE'S HOPE, RALPH RUNYON STILL HAS A CHANCE FOR PLUM

A few days ago it was announced that Kenneth Curtis, of the N. Y. A. C., had been selected to represent the East in the pole vaulting event at the Panama-Pacific Exposition on August 7. Ralph Runyon, the local vaulter, who sports the colors of the Pastime A. C., made a splendid effort to land the berth but failed.

However, the A. A. U. officials learned today that several of the athletes chosen for the team will be unable to make the trip. Among this list is Curtis, who complains of an injury to his foot. He stated to Paul Pilgrim, the A. A. U. promoter, that he would be able to go, but Pilgrim informed him that he would have to vault twelve feet or stay home.

Runyon was beaten by Caldwell, the Cornell vaulter, at the New Brunswick meet, the winner making eleven feet, six inches, while the local lad leaped eleven feet, three inches, but if Ralph can do twelve feet and if Curtis is unable to make the trip West, the Plainfielder may get a chance.

MORAN EXPLAINS HIS SUCCESS

Phillies' Pilot Says There's Always Something New

SMART PLAYERS IN DEMAND

In Old Game Natural Ability Was Needed Most, but Today Mental Development Is More Important, States the Veteran Leader.

This is a season of upsets, at least it has been so far. Who would have been wild enough—and some wild predictions are made in baseball—to predict at this time last year, or even at the close of the 1914 season that the despised Yankees and Phillies might be contenders? Who would have been wild enough even at the beginning of this season to have hinted that even one of them would be taken seriously this year?

Bill Donovan, former major league pitcher, was brought from a managerial berth in the minors to put new life into the Yankees. Moran did not come from the minors to the leadership of the Phillies, but he was a coach on the team when Dooin was ousted. He had been a great catcher with the Chicago Cubs, and that was where he gained the greater part of his major league experience.

FRED LUDERUS, THE PHILLIES' HARD HITTING FIRST SACKER.

Moran has three new men in his lineup—Bancroft at short, Niehoff at third and Wieser in center field. He disposed of Sherwood Magee, one of the greatest sluggers in baseball, and the team hasn't lost any more games than it had at this time last year with Magee in the lineup.

It is a different team, though, from the 1914 aggregation. The men are on their toes all the time, they never give up a game until the third man is out in the last inning, they are showing speed on the bases and they are studying the game.

"I have a pretty smart team," observed Moran when he was asked how he had brought them to the front so quickly.

"The boys are studying the game and applying what they learn. You know, it doesn't matter how many years you have been in baseball, how many games you have played in, how many you have lost, or how many you have won. There is something to be learned in every game you play. The man who has the natural ability to play, but doesn't bother trying to learn something more about the game, is never a real success.

"He may get along for awhile, but it is the smart player, the man who knows there is plenty to learn after years in the game, who really succeeds. There have been men in the game who fell below the standard in their natural playing ability, but who have gotten by just because they had the baseball brains.

"In the old days natural ability was what was needed. The real smart player was scarce. It's different now. There are more smart players in the game today than there were a dozen years ago, a half dozen, or even three years ago. Every year this mental development is becoming more important. Look around and you will see fine players, men with natural ability who have been playing in the game three or four or five years, and yet they don't know much more about the game than they did when they broke in. They have the natural ability and have got by with that."

Zimmerman Objects.

'Tis said that Heine Zimmerman of the Chicago Cubs has objected to playing second base any longer, as he finds difficulty in making his remarks carry to the umpire working behind the plate.

Snodgrass Swiping Many Sacks.

Snodgrass has usurped Burns' prerogative. He is leading the National league in filched bases. The Giants are leading the league in games filched from them.

CHANCE FOR WHITE SOX.

The Queen City B. B. C. will play the White Sox on Sunday at Crescent Oval. Velard and Coffey are slated to be the opposing twirlers.

PARKS AT BOUND BROOK.

The Park Avenue Baptist baseball team will encounter the Bound Brook Bees at the latter's grounds tomorrow afternoon.

You May Find a Worker Trained and Fit to do Your Work.

A worker whose salary you will voluntarily raise in a short time!

"Getting along" with half-competent help, in home, office, store or factory, is a poor plan—a poor business policy.

The quest for the Competent Worker is important enough to justify a real campaign of classified advertising in the Plainfield Daily Press—although it does not often require a very long campaign.

If you have not advertised for a position, you are not competing with those who do advertise.

An Appeal to Americans
BY

The Commission for Relief In Belgium

Sole Clearing House for all Belguim Relief

We, as Americans, are enlisted for the war to save seven million men, women and children. It is the greatest commissary undertaking in the history of the world, and in the lexicon of America there is no such word as fail.

We Need Food Supplies as Well as Cash

Railroads, express companies, postoffices, governors and state committees are aiding. Our Flotilla of Mercy, comprising thirty-five chartered ships, is constantly carrying food. But—Our Supplies Are Far too Short!

Are You Helping? If Not, Send in Your Name Now!

Make out your check or money order, or send cash either to your state committee co-operating with this Commission or to the New York Headquarters:

EXPECT TO HAVE NEW EVERGREEN AVENUE SCHOOL READY FOR USE BY CHRISTMAS

The new Evergreen Avenue Grammar School building, illustrated in this issue, is now well under way, and unless unforeseen complications arise, should be ready for occupancy after the Christmas holidays.

In its design Wilder & White, the architects, have effected a distinct departure from that of the other Plainfield schools, as it follows the modified Elizabethan style so generally becoming recognized as the best adapted to modern school requirements. This country house style, prevalent through England in the time of Queen Elizabeth, with its great groups of windows, not only solves the rigid lighting requirements of the State Board of Education, but gives to the school buildings in that style a semi-homelike character eminently suited to their purpose.

In the Evergreen Avenue School there has been no attempt to give the building a monumental character other than was possible from a judicious arrangement of openings, as every effort has been devoted by the Board to keep the cost to the lowest point consistent with good construction. To give the exterior a more cheerful appearance the walls will be faced with a light gray brick, and lighter terra cotta string courses and window quoins will furnish the necessary contrast. On the Evergreen avenue front the large windows of the assembly room, with its higher roof, and the main entrance doorway below will furnish the chief interest, as the adjoining classroom bays are of a simpler character, and the blank wing walls required by the demand for unilateral lighting of the classrooms are relieved only by a simple brick pattern. On the ends the central motive is the stair window, with its decorated panel above and vestibule below, flanked on either side with classroom bays as on the front.

In plan, the building is the H form so generally satisfactory where space permits and where future extensions may become necessary. The assembly room, located in the center of the second floor, not only effects a reduction of cost, but becomes a leading feature in the exterior, and permits of its thorough natural lighting by outside windows on three sides. This is an arrangement which none of our other schools possess. At the rear of the assembly room the stage, with its anterooms, are placed. Inasmuch as the main floor will provide seats for the student capacity of the building as now finished, the balcony will not be built at the present time. Provision, however, will be made so that it can be easily added whenever its use is needed. The building as designed will provide thirteen forty-pupil classrooms, with seperate locker rooms for each, besides the principal's room, teachers' room and labrary and a manual training room and gymnasium in the basement. By placing the basement floor only slightly below grade, space on this floor can be used for classrooms, and at slight expense four additional classrooms can be made available at any time. With the idea of still further classroom accommodations the completion of the sections on the rear at either side of the assembly room will provide six more classrooms at a minimum of cost, so that the finished building has the possibility of twenty-three full classrooms, each designed to accommodate forty pupils.

In the construction, a combination of metal tile and reinforced concrete is used for the floors and roofs, all carried on concrete beams and columns, a system which has proved very economical for school construction, and provides unbroken ceilings. The exterior walls will be of brick backed with hollow tile—except the insets at the rear, which will be of stucco on tile—all interior partitions will be of plaster blocks and the stairs of concrete. As in accordance with the requirements of the local building code, even the roof is of concrete, every part of the construction proper is absolutely fireproof—a very desirable feature, but one that naturally increases the cost. In spite of this the Evergreen avenue building provides more classroom accommodations than the Washington School at less cost, although the latter is of only semi-fireproof construction and was built some years ago, when the cost of labor was less than today.

All of the mechanical equipment will be of the best type, and all possible provision will be made for future extension. The heating will be steam, with direct radiation, and the ventilation by both supply and exhaust fans. In the latter, separate units are so provided that the ventilation of the assembly room or either end of the building can be maintained without the use of the whole plant.

"FIGHT WOMAN SUFFRAGE," IS ADVICE TO SALOON-KEEPERS

Bayonne, July 9.—George Carroll, of Elizabeth, State president of the State Liquor Dealers' Association, urged saloon-keepers, at a banquet at Meister's, Bergen Point, Wednesday night, to do all in their power to defeat the woman suffrage proposition.

To strengthen their forces, Mr. Carroll told the banqueters, members of the Bayonne Liquor Dealers' Association, to try to get every liquor dealer in the city affiliated with them. John L. Nugent, president of the association, was toastmaster.

WOULD LIKE OPINIONS ON MUNICIPAL PENSIONS

Elizabeth, July 9.—Assemblyman Charles L. Morgan, the Union county member of the legislative committee on municipal pensions, says the committee would like to get opinions on that subject.

"The committee has been appointed to investigate the question of municipal pensions," said Mr. Morgan, "and it would appreciate views of the taxpayers, officials and citizens generally on the need of municipal pensions.

"We would also like to get editorial expressions from the newspapers, in order to ascertain how the people view this matter, for we want to present a complete report to the next Legislature."

START CRUSADE AGAINST THE FLY

Powdered Hellebore An Effective Means of Destroying the Pest.

TRAPS RECOMMENDED

Educational Campaign Inaugurated by the United States Department of Agriculture—Timely Suggestions Are Offered.

Washington, D. C., July 9.—An educational crusade against the house fly, in which every proper means of publicity should be employed is urged by the Department of Agriculture. In a new Farmer's Bulletin, No. 679, it is stated that the danger from the house fly must be brought more forcibly home to the people before health officers can do effective work. By the expenditure of sufficient pains, any one individual may prevent flies breeding on his premises, but this will not rid him of the danger from flies if his neighbors are careless.

There is, however, no excuse at the present time for permitting flies to breed in anything like the numbers in which they have done in the past.

The vast majority of flies develop from eggs which are laid in horse manure, and there are two simple ways of destroying the larvae, as the young insects or maggots which hatch from the eggs are called. Sprinkling the manure heap with a solution prepared by adding half a pound of powdered hellebore to ten gallons of water will destroy, according to recent experiments, from 8 to 99 per cent. of the larvae in the manure. If this is not done, the use of a simple maggot trap will prove equally effective. By experiments carried on by the Bureau of Entomology of the United States Department of Agriculture, at the Maryland Agricultural College, it was found that the trap used there destroyed fully 99 per cent. of all the maggots or larvae breeding in a given lot of manure.

Such a trap is simplicity itself, consisting merely of a slatted platform standing about one foot high upon a concrete floor, which is surrounded by a rim or wall of concrete four inches high. The floor slopes a little toward one corner in order to allow liquid from the manure to be drained off into a small cistern. Ordinarily, however, this drain is plugged with a stopper and the concrete floor filled with water to a depth of one inch in the shallowest part. Each morning the manure is removed from the stable and heaped upon the platform. The flies lay their eggs on it as usual and the larvae hatch as usual. The larvae, however, when about to enter the pupal or resting stage, preliminary to emerging as adult flies, invariably endeavor to migrate, crawling about in search of a suitably dry spot in which to enter into pupation. In the maggot trap, therefore, as soon as the larvae attempt to leave the manure on which they have been feeding, they fall through the opening in the slatted platform into the water below and are drowned. Each week the drain should be opened and the dead maggots washed from the floor of the trap into the cistern nearby. A platform 10x20 feet in size will hold the manure from four horses during a period of four months, or from 25 horses for about 20 days. The slats should be one-inch strips, with half to one-inch spaces between them.

ESSEX COUNTY HAS A POPULATION OF 567,292

With the census lists closed so far as the supervisors in the various municipalities of the county are concerned, and showing a total population for Essex of 567,292, additional returns have reached the Census Bureau since yesterday which indicate that the official figures do not accurately represent the number of bonifide residents of the county. The added returns are principally from Newarkers who failed to return blanks sent to them after enumerators had tried in vain to get the necessary information.

Incidentally, a slight error in addition was disclosed in Newark's totals, so that it appears today that instead of 366,721, the official count given for the city, it should be 366,744, exclusive of the names that have come in late. Whether or not the additional names can still be placed to the credit of the city will remain for Secretary of State Martin to decide.

PROVIDENCE STUDENTS MUST TAKE MILITARY TRAINING

Providence, July 9.—Compulsory military training in the High Schools of this city is to be the order henceforth as the result of action of the school committee Wednesday. About 1,700 boys will be affected by the order. Uniforms, equipment and instruction will be provided by the city.

Rent one of your rooms and reduce your own rent materially. It's a simple and sensible plan—and it works.

CLEAN MOTOR FUEL

CLEAN Motor Fuel means more miles per gallon, freedom from frequent carburetor adjustments and greater motoring pleasure. You cannot be too careful about what goes into your tank. Carbon in cylinders is often due to the use of inferior gasoline—"blends" and "mixtures."

Standard Motor Gasoline is a clean, straight-distilled product, not a mixture. It is absolutely homogeneous—every drop like every other drop. You get the same steady power-impulses whether you are running on the top or on the bottom of your tank.

Saying "Standard Motor Gasoline" to the garage man is like asking to see the pure food label on the provisions you buy for yourself. It is an easy way to make sure of getting the best motor fuel, wherever you fill your tank.

To end your friction troubles and all excessive wear, use Polarine Oil and Greases, obtainable wherever you see the "Standard Motor Gasoline Service Station" sign.

FOR YOUNG FOLKS

Woodpeckers Are Beautiful and Useful Birds.

THE FLICKER FOND OF ANTS.

One of the Largest of His Species, He Performs Good Service to Mankind. Kills Tree Borers—Puzzles and Games For Little People.

One of the larger woodpeckers familiar to every one is the flicker, or golden winged woodpecker, which is generally distributed throughout the United States from the Atlantic coast to the Rocky mountains. There it is replaced by the red shafted flicker, which extends westward to the Pacific. The flickers, while genuine woodpeckers, differ somewhat in habits from the rest of the family and are frequently seen searching for food upon the ground. Like the downy and hairy woodpeckers, they feed upon wood boring grubs and ants, but the number of ants eaten is much greater than that eaten by the other two species.

The flicker's habit of pecking holes in buildings sometimes greatly annoys his human friends, and it is particularly noticeable in the California species. Observation has shown that the object of the work is to obtain shelter for the winter. In the east most of the flickers are migratory, and only a few remain north, where shelter is necessary. These generally find a safe retreat in the hollow tree in which they nested. To the woodpecker family more than to any other agency we owe the preservation of trees from hordes of destructive insects.

Game of Fisherman.

If there is a large table at hand all sit around it to play the game of fisherman. One of the players is armed with a short stick, to which a piece of twine is attached, the twine being tied in a loop at one end. The fisherman drops his line in such a way that the loop lies on the table about in the center.

When he says "Whose fish?" all the players place the tip of one finger (forefinger of the right hand) on the table inside of the circle formed by the twine. Then the fisherman calls, "My fish," and the fingers must be withdrawn before the fisherman pulls in his line. This must be done quickly or fingers will be caught. Each fish caught counts one for game, and the number constituting a game should be decided upon before beginning to play. Each player should have his turn as fisherman.

Concealed Central Acrostic.

(One five letter word concealed in each line.)

1. To skate on thin ice risks one's life;
2. Go to the rink and take your wife.
3. Pray, write with ink and tell me true,
4. Is ale made best with salt and glue?
5. I gave them Adam's ale to drink,
6. For peach and pear are rich, I think.
7. Fair Mabel at her easel sits;
8. She sits and sketches cats and kits.

The central letters now will tell who romp and play, but learn as well.

Answer—Children. Hidden words—Nicer, other, think, Salem, madam, rarer, there, sands.

What Is Your Occupation?

The game may be played by three or more children. One player becomes the "guesser" and the others each agree upon an occupation which he is supposed to follow. The guesser then asks, "What is your occupation?" and all the other players must go through the operation of performing the labor agreed upon. If from any one the guesser can get an idea as to what the labor is then the laborer must take his place. He can have but one guess.

Heard in the Hall.

"Our master is not a very fast runner," said the old straw hat. "I jumped off his head last summer, and he chased me for over three blocks before he caught up."

"Well, you had the wind behind you," said the golf stick.

"So did he," snarled the straw hat.

Nighty Time.

Brother in his trouser kind,
Sister in her gown,
Baby in its muslin slip—
A little ball of down.
Frolic just about to start,
Waiting, still as mice:
"One, two, three, now you catch me."
Nighty time's so nice!

Brother being growly bear;
Sister at the bars;
Baby watching fearfully,
Eyes as big as stars;
Mother sitting very near,
In the fire's shine;
Laugh and crow and make believe—
Nighty time is fine!

Brother snug in one soft bed,
Sister snug in one;
Baby fallen sound asleep
Before the game was done;
Shadows drifting up the wall,
Fall of sandman's feet,
Gray dreams sifting over all—
Nighty time's so sweet!

Milady's Mirror

Watch Your Toothbrush.

A good toothbrush if used conscientiously should not be in use more than two weeks at a time, and it is better to keep two in use so that each may have a period of drying out and airing. It never pays to buy too cheap a brush if the price is at the expense of the bristles. In the first place, a poor set of bristles will not do their work well, and, in the second place, loosely fastened bristles are very dangerous if they slip down the throat, where they may catch and decay or penetrate the walls of the digestive tract. Always wash out the brush thoroughly after each application, and, by the way, a new brush should be soaked in a weak solution of bicarbonate of soda for two hours both to disinfect it from shop handling and to set the bristles so that they will not fall out so readily.

The teeth should be brushed at night, after each meal and upon rising. It is particularly important to clean them the last thing before retiring, so that food particles will not remain in the teeth crevices to decay overnight when the mouth saliva is not active enough to prevent it.

During a long illness the teeth should be carefully cleaned when they cannot receive attention from a dentist. If this were done fewer teeth troubles would be laid to the ailment, which is not much more to blame than neglect of the mouth. See that the mouth is constantly washed out with a little bicarbonate of soda, which can be prepared by dissolving a teaspoonful of the bicarbonate (ordinary baking soda) in a pint of water and bottling it for use. Most authorities consider this better than too frequent a use of the hydrogen peroxide solutions which are not always good for the teeth.

Take Care of the Mouth.

Some fortunate girls are born to pretty mouths. A very few have the much sung Cupid's bow, with perhaps the added charm of a dimple. Others have a smile which transforms an otherwise plain face. A great many have very commonplace mouths, with no redeeming dimples. And some few, fortunately comparatively very few, have large mouths or distorted mouths. But no mouth is hopelessly ugly. Sometimes the teeth may be crooked, distorting the mouth, and here the dentist can give relief. But oftenest of all, the mouth is made homely by facial contortions, the habit of screwing up the lips when talking, of drawing the mouth up on one side when laughing. The mother of growing children cannot be too careful of their appearance.

Whatever the shape of the mouth, its defects can be balanced in a large measure by good teeth, healthy gums and red lips. There is absolutely no excuse in this age of successful dental surgery for misshapen or protruding teeth and similar mouth defects. With comparatively little pain the teeth can be straightened, and in case they must be removed because of their bad individual shape new ones will be inserted on a bridge, not on an unsightly plate.

Another advance in surgery which adds greatly to the beauty of the mouth is the invention of porcelain fillings, which are rapidly replacing the gold ones.

About Climbing Stairs.

Climbing stairs always has been thought to be very injurious to a woman, yet in many cases, if it is rightly done, it may be of real benefit and gradually strengthen the heart and shoulders instead of doing actually the reverse. Mount the stairs slowly with the body erect, the head and chest high, and allow the leg muscles to do the work. Try this for a week instead of the old way of bending the back and depressing the chest and see how it improves the general carriage.

A physical culture exercise that is unrivaled for giving one an erect and graceful carriage, straightening the shoulders and making them as level as those of a West Point cadet is done by this same stair climbing, only in this case with the arms hanging at full length. The hands should be clasped behind the back, with the fingers interlaced and the hands turned as nearly to back as possible.

Then, standing very erect, mount the stairs slowly, and before half the ascent is made every cell in the lungs will have been expanded many times. These exercises are excellent for any one whose heart is in good condition, but when this organ is in a diseased state it is well to avoid stair climbing whenever possible.

If You Wish the Bloom of Youth.

If you wish to have rosy cheeks be careful of your diet. Eat simple, nourishing foods; avoid pastries, sweets, all rich and spicy foods and oily meats, such as pork and veal. Drink milk, cocoa and chocolate instead of tea and coffee. Pure air, pure water and pure food are the first essentials to a pure complexion. So are sunlight, out of door exercises and sleep. A cheerful disposition has much to do with the health. There is a story told of a husband who objected to his wife using cosmetics. He told her that the best way to give the face a good color was to get a pot of rouge and one rabbit's foot, bury them two miles from home and then walk out and back once a day to see if they were still there. She is said to have tried it and found it to be all her husband claimed.

Your classified "ad" will work longer hours for you today than the labor regulations would permit a worker to do.

Of Interest to Women and the Home

LOW WAISTS FASHIONABLE FOR THE VERY YOUNG LADY.

No. 8960.

With the waistline in children's clothes ranging in position from the extreme French to the extreme Empire positions, it is often hard to know just what sort of a dress to choose. Dame Fashion has stamped the French waistline with her approval, however, and the decree will be welcomed by everybody—particularly those mothers who already were familiar with its suitability to the daintiness and innocence of little girls. Ladies' Home Journal Pattern No. 8960 shown above, is one of this type and is made with square or round neck, shaped bertha, and straight gathered skirt. Sizes 4 to 12, size 8 requiring 2¾ yards 36-inch material.

Patterns may be obtained at the store of A. E. Force & Company.

PROCTOR'S THEATRE

Announcement was made last evening of the new date set for the Pearl White contest, the day being Tuesday of next week. Young women who desire to enter this contest, in which amateur make-ups of Miss White are to carry away the prizes, should leave their names and addresses at once at the box office of Proctor's Theatre.

Miss White appears this evening in another episode of the "Romance of Elaine," and contestants should be on hand to see the model before making up.

The big feature in the program for this evening is "The Devil's Daughter," a photo-production which surpasses anything seen in this city during the summer season. This screenette is far beyond "A Fool There Was," as far as power is concerned and certainly ought to be witnessed to be thoroughly appreciated. This is a Fox production in five parts with Theda Bara playing the title role.

For tomorrow, a most pleasing program has been arranged, including comedy, drama and travel pictures. Another chapter of the serial beautiful, "The Goddess," is to be shown, and this will doubtless attract many of those who have seen previous installments. The travel pictures which have been featured at the Proctor house for some time have proved to be more than popular, and this number for tomorrow will be up to the standard.

"O-18," or "A Message From the Skies," a four part production, will feature tomorrow's program. This masterful drama is one including the thrills of secret service life, containing a series of exciting episodes which will make the most stubborn hair stand on end.

LITERARY

Our fathers of Revolutionary days did not endure the hardships of a seven years' war for the purpose of creating a British-American nation, with perhaps a Holland-American and a Swedish-American State interspersed. When their Declaration of Independence was launched, it was a final farewell to their former allegiance and a definite assumption of the responsibilities and duties of a new citizenship. When the Constitution was adopted, it was intended as a complete merger into common American citizenship of any previous distinctions as to birth. The United States of America was to be a nation of men and women filled with the American ideal and desirous of working it out together as American citizens. When difficulties arose with France, nobody thought of inquiring what stand would be taken by Franco-Americans. When friction arose with England and finally developed into war, nobody suggested a possible embarrassment from the large number of Anglo-Americans who had settled among "us." It is a new condition that has arisen in our own day, whereby we must think of groups of our citizens in hyphenated terms which distinguish them from other citizens. Quite accepting the protestations of loyalty to their American allegiance which these hyphenated groups have given us, we have the right, as plain Americans, to ask them to think of themselves also as plain Americans, repudiating any other description and treating as negligible the fact of their birth in a foreign land. If the earlier Americans are willing to offer full and free citizenship to new comers, they have a right to ask that these will accept it in the spirit in which it is offered—or leave it. The British-born Americans gave that proof of their Americanism in 1776. The Holland-born gave it. The Swedish-born gave it. The German-born gave it. We have a right to ask that what these were able to do, in the days when Democracy was in the founding, be also done by the later comers who have accepted the invitation of America to all who truly enter in to the American ideal, to make their home in this country and unite with us in realizing those principles of a free Democracy which were propounded to the world in 1776.—The Living Church.

He Sat Very Gracefully In His Saddle.

Daddy's Bedtime Story—The Pony That Knew Just What to Do.

"ANIMALS know more than some people realize," said daddy. "I had almost said that they know more than some people know. But animals cannot talk, so they have to show their knowledge in other ways.

"I will tell you a little story about a pony, which proves what I have said.

"This was a very pretty little pony, with dappled spots, just the nicest, fattest, most comfy pony for a little boy to ride that you ever saw. He belonged to a little boy named Roy.

"The pony could gallop and trot and canter and lope and had all the gaits which a well trained pony should have, for he had been well broken before Roy's daddy bought him for him, and Roy, who was about seven years old, grew to be a very expert rider.

"It was a pleasing sight to see the little boy start off on a ride with his pony—or, rather, on his pony's back. He sat very gracefully in his saddle, and he held the bridle just right, and everybody who saw them admired them.

"I think the pony enjoyed it as much as Roy did. He liked to trot and amble and canter along the smooth roads, past the green woods and in the brilliant sunshine, and he and his little master loved each other very much. The pony, whose name was Tobias, would eat lumps of sugar out of Roy's hand, and Roy would pet him and be glad that he owned him.

"At last, upon a brilliant summer day, Roy rode Tobias out of the stable one afternoon for a delightful canter down by the road which led to a beautiful lake. It was awfully warm that day, but Roy did not mind this at first. Soon, however, he noticed that the sides of Tobias were all wet with perspiration.

"So Roy pulled Tobias to a walk so he wouldn't feel quite so warm. But after a little time Roy got to feeling rather queer himself. He felt dizzy, and his stomach felt sick, and all of a sudden he just slid down out of the saddle, his feet luckily leaving the stirrups all right and lay limp and still on the road.

"Tobias sniffed around for awhile, and then he turned and trotted home, and he neighed and whinnied and trotted back and forth until Roy's daddy got on his back and went down the road and found the little boy, who had had a sunstroke.

"He was all right again in a day or two, and he declares, and so do his parents, that Tobias just knew something was the matter with Roy and ran home to tell his parents about it, and Tobias was much petted after that, you had better believe."

Household Hints

RECIPES WITH COCOANUT.

Cocoanut and Tapioca Pudding—Four tablespoons cocoanut, three tablespoons tapioca, one quart boiling milk, four eggs, one-half cup sugar, one teaspoon vanilla extract, one tablespoon powdered sugar. Stir tapioca into boiling milk; boil gently fifteen minutes. Add cocoanut, extract and the sugar beaten with yolks of the eggs. Pour into buttered pudding dish. Beat up whites of the eggs to a stiff froth, then add one tablespoon powdered sugar and spread over pudding; sprinkle cocoanut over top and brown in oven. Serve cold.

Cocoanut-Peach Custard—One-half cup cocoanut, six peaches, four tablespoons granulated sugar, two tablespoons powdered sugar, two eggs, half cup milk, few drops red coloring. Peel and slice peaches into a pudding dish, then sprinkle in half the cocoanut. Put the yolks of eggs, milk and granulated sugar into saucepan and stir them over fire until they thicken. Pour over the cocoanut and bake in moderate oven. Beat whites of eggs to a stiff froth, then beat in powdered sugar and spread over top. Color the remainder of cocoanut with a few drops of red food coloring and sprinkle over the meringue.

Cocoanut-Apricot Cakes—Cocoanut, apricot jam, two cups flour, one-fourth cup sugar, one-fourth cup butter, one teaspoon baking powder, one large egg. Cream butter and sugar together, then add egg well beaten; beat again, sift in flour and baking powder. A little milk may be added if needed, but the mixture must be stiff. Make into balls. Place on buttered tin and bake twenty minutes in moderate oven. When they are cold brush over with apricot jam, roll in plenty cocoanut.

Cocoanut Cream Pie—One-half cup chopped cocoanut, four tablespoons granulated sugar, two tablespoons powdered sugar, two tablespoons cornstarch, two cups milk, two eggs, one-half teaspoon vanilla extract, pastry. Line pie plate with pastry, bake in oven. Beat yolks of eggs with granulated sugar in double boiler, add cocoanut, cornstarch mixed with milk. Stir over fire till mixture thickens, add vanilla, pour into crust. Beat whites of eggs to stiff froth, add powdered sugar. Brown lightly in oven, sprinkle over with chopped cocoanut.

THINGS WORTH KNOWING.

Window Screens—When dusty, take a black cotton cloth with a little gasoline and rub them.

A Little Bluing added to the water in washboiler will make the clothes white and nice.

For the Family Overshoes—To keep overshoes off the floor, have a strong tape hung up in a convenient place, with spring clothespins attached. Put the youngest child's rubbers on the bottom pin, next youngest's just above, etc. There should be a pin for each member of the family. By this plan one is able to get one's rubbers in the dark without making a mistake.

Old Black Kid Gloves that are turning gray at finger tips are wonderfully renovated by polishing with a dull liquid shoe polish. Put them on and after blacking gently swab them dry with a soft rag. With care they may even be ironed, looking almost new.

For Yellow Teeth—Baking soda applied once a day to yellow teeth will greatly aid towards whitening them. Better results are obtained by applying same with the end of a bath towel, rather than with a toothbrush.

If part of a bottle of olives has been used and you wish to keep the remainder for some time, add a pinch of salt to the brine and pour in bottle enough olive oil to cover brine.

STRENGTHEN JAIL WINDOWS.

Elizabeth, July 9.—Sheriff George C. Otto has arranged with the freeholders' grounds and buildings committee for the construction of boiler plate guards outside of the jail windows. The sheriff has taken this step because of a recent alleged attempt of "Ice Wagon" Connors, a convicted burglar, to escape. The plates will prevent the window screens from being pried loose.

USE FOR WHITE OILCLOTH.

White oilcloth can work a transformation in the darkest, dingiest kitchen and add to the charm of the brightest. A yard for a few cents will save you from facing the indifferent or worn paint at the base of the dish closet, shelving and, besides, make cleaning easy and gratifying. The inside window ledge of the kitchen and the bathroom treated in this way will be conducive to beauty and cleanliness.

A strip along the wall beside the sink will catch spattered drops of dishwater or drainings and may be readily cleaned with a lightly soaped cloth rubbed over the surface.

A stretch of oilcloth above the japanning about the range will catch any spattering grease, the vapor of steam or the blackest of escaping smoke, which can then be washed off, though here one of the coarse cleansers may be necessary to restore the pristine whiteness.

A yard of wide oilcloth at 18 or 20 cents will cover the top of a kitchen table with some to spare. A length of a few inches more of the scalloped kind will render the tops of the washtubs sightly and convertible to table uses for a hasty meal for one or two. The top of the refrigerator covered in this way will be taken as a pledge of the sweet, clean interior below.

Glimpses of Married Life

BY MRS. EVA LEONARD

"You'll have to walk the floor with him, dear," came in a stage whisper from the lower berth. "This is impossible; these people have paid for their berths and it's not fair to keep them all awake."

Nell had exhausted every resource to get the baby quiet without avail.

"If we ever get him home we'll keep him there till we can modulate his voice, that's one sure thing." Dick was insinuating himself into his bathrobe and slippers. He swung himself down into the aisle without waiting for the steps.

"Give him here." The tone was so belligerent that Nell looked inquiringly up at her husband.

"What are you going to do?" she asked, a note of anxiety in her voice.

"Do! Lord! Didn't you ask me to walk the car with him? I'm going to do something to shut off this noise, if I can, or take him to the baggage car. We'll all be murdered if this keeps up, and with reason. Give him to me." He placed the baby over his shoulder. "This will distribute the noise evenly to all parts of the car, anyway," he snorted as he started off.

Nell listened with tense nerves while the cry was fortissimo or pianissimo in a regular crescendo and diminuendo as he approached or receded from the berth.

Heads began to appear outside the enveloping curtains; one bellicose man with grizzled hair and face decorated with a two-days' growth of beard demanded in irate tones of the approaching Dick:

"Can't you ring off that noise?"

"I'm using all my muscular force to that end with no appreciable result," answered Dick, his good humor restored by the traveler's ill-nature. "Can you suggest anything?"

"Babies belong at home; it's an outrage to bring them aboard a sleeping car and make sleep impossible for a whole car full of people."

"I'm putting forth my best efforts to get the young man home, and I've done everything but strangle him to shut him up. Perhaps you'd like to have me turn him over to you to strangle." Dick paused in front of the berth.

Heads were protruding all along the line. Since they could not sleep the occupants might as well enjoy the passing show.

"Let me take him," suggested a motherly old lady. "I've tended scores of babies first and last. You are nervous over the situation and that affects him."

Nell in her kimona and slippers was coming down the aisle.

"Give him to me," she whispered. "I'll take him to the dressing room and keep him there till he quiets down."

Dick handed him over with alacrity, while he wiped the sweat of honest toil from his brow.

"Bring the steps, porter," he ordered, and climbed from view.

The wail softened by distance and draperies continued with fitful interruptions. Finally the motherly old lady, wrapped in her kimona, rolled out of her berth and went to the scene of action.

"I believe the baby is sick," said Nell, looking up tearfully as the old lady entered the dressing room. "No baby cries like this unless something desperate is the matter."

"Give him to me," said the comfortable voice. "Crying is not a serious symptom; any baby with lungs like that is a healthy specimen, I should say." She laid him over her plump shoulder and softly patted his back.

"He's in a strange place and he's frightened. Both of you are so nervous over the situation you make an atmosphere so tense around him that it keeps him nervously wrought up."

"There, there, dear," she continued, as the cries softened to little gasping sobs. "He's exhausted; he'll sleep when once he quiets down."

"It's to be hoped so," said Nell with a long, tremulous sigh.

"Now you go and get settled in your berth and I'll bring him to you, he'll be asleep in a minute."

"Oh, thank you so much," said Nell gratefully.

BUTTER

We don't want to bore you with our talk on butter, but we want to impress on your mind the fact that our butter is of the highest possible quality and cannot be surpassed at any price. You will find our quotations from three to five cents per pound lower than most dealers.

33c PER POUND.

"24-HOUR" EGGS

The satisfaction of knowing positively that the eggs you are eating are strictly fresh is worth a great deal. These eggs of ours are brought in to us every day by Mr. Sims, the producer, from his henneries on Clinton avenue. Sometimes we have to wait for the hens to lay them. Last Saturday we sent eggs out of our store at three in the afternoon that were taken out of the nest at noon. Can't beat that very much, can you?

38c PER DOZEN

NEW POTATOES

The potatoes are still coming very freely and are of fine quality. We have another fine lot for Friday and Saturday and we are going to make you a lower price even than last week, and we thought that was almost giving them away. This undoubtedly will be the lowest price you will hear of this season.

WILL STAND BY SENATOR MARTINE

His Friends in Union County Little Apprehensive of Fielder's Candidacy.

MOVEMENT IS OPPOSED

Tuttle Testimonial Banquet Discloses an Attempt on Part of Smith-Nugent Faction to Regain State Supremacy in Democratic Party.

The testimonial dinner given to former Congressman William E. Tuttle at Elizabeth, Thursday night, has disclosed the fact that the Democratic gathering also served another purpose—that of rallying the forces in support of United States Senator James E. Martine. It also seems that another purpose in mind was the carrying out of a Smith-Nugent plan to regain their power in the State Democracy and still another was described as the furthering of Governor James F. Fielder's candidacy for United States Senator.

Within the past few days, it is said, local friends of Senator Martine held a conference and it is further asserted that those present included many of those who have been opposing Lucius T. Russell's advancement in the party's ranks. It has been impossible to learn just where the conference was held, but what would happen at the banquet on Thursday night was prophesied at the conference.

Those behind the dinner plans realized the futility of carrying on the fight along anti-Wilson lines, hence the pledge of loyalty to the President was no surprise to those present. There are some who claim that considerable strength in the Fielder candidacy was evidenced through the somewhat ordinary reception given to Senator Martine. The Plainfielder occupied a seat at the extreme end of the table and was the last one called upon to speak. On the other hand the Governor was escorted to a seat with much prominence and was the first speaker introduced.

Senator Martine's friends assert that the banquet was arranged by three men, two of whom were appointed to office by Governor Fielder and upon whom the responsibility of carrying Union county for him will rest. The Union County Democratic Committee, the Elizabeth City Executive Committee and the Elizabeth Democratic Club knew nothing about the dinner, it is charged, until the plans were all completed. The three men referred to are Lucius T. Russell, named by Governor Fielder to the State Board of Taxation; Robert H. McAdams, clerk of the Court of Chancery, and Prosecutor Alfred A. Stein.

The Martine supporters do not go so far as to couple the first purpose of the banquet with the second one. They remark, however, that the break between Fielder and Smith was never so serious as the break between Wilson and Smith.

The Wilson phase of the whole discussion is peculiarly complicated. Senator Martine's course at Washington has not been any too pleasing to the Administration, and in backing Fielder the Smith-Nugent people would be in the strategical position of supporting a man who would be favorable to many of the President's closest and most sincere admirers. The Smith-Nugent forces might even be able to swing back into power in the State by such strategy. That the President will keep out of the Senatorial primaries is believed in many quarters. The politics of the situation in a Presidential year would alone demand non-interference.

However, whether it be Martine or Fielder for Senator on the final showdown, any return of Smith and Nugent to power will have doubtful approval, just now at least, from the rank and file of the Union County Democracy.

The opponents of the Russell candidancy feel that they have the whip hand. Furthermore, they declare that this is Martine's home county, and no matter how the rest of the State might go the Plainfield man's cause is safe in Union. If his cause is safe, they reason, so are they in planning to oppose the Fielder movement here.

MONROE AVENUE SERVICES.

Rev. Dr. D. B. F. Randolph, of the Monroe Avenue M. E. church, will preach tomorrow morning on the subject, "Survival of the Weakest." The Epworth League will hold a fifteen-minutes' song service at 7:15 o'clock in the evening after which he will preach on the [illegible]shment from the [illegible]

SAMPLE OF BARBED WIRE.

In the show window of John J. Praed's store, 314 Park avenue, may be seen a piece of barbed wire like that used so effectively by the soldiers across the water in forming barricades. Much of the wire used by the armies is made in this country.

FRESH AIR CAMP OPENING SERVICE

Rev. Dr. Birney S. Hudson Will Speak and Children's Choir Will Sing.

The opening service of the Netherwood Fresh Air Home will be held tomorrow afternoon at 3:45 o'clock. The speaker at this service will be Rev. Dr. Birney S. Hudson, pastor of the Park Avenue Baptist church. The singing of the children of the Home has always been an attractive feature of these services and a choir of about twenty selected voices will sing special selections at this service.

Miss Curry opened the Home on Tuesday last and there are between three and four hundred mothers and children from the East Side of New York who are at present enjoying the comforts and blessings that the Home affords. Many children are being cared for at the Home who are ill and without their mothers, and this chance to enjoy the fresh air and the care of Miss Curry will no doubt send them back to the city well and strong.

Contributions of money, fruits, vegetables and clothing are always acceptable, and the Home extends to all a most hearty welcome to visit the Home at all times and especially to attend these public services.

WILL REPRESENT JERSEY AT MINING CONGRESS

To fill the vacancy caused by the recent resignation of B. Frank Hires, of Bridgeton, Governor Fielder has appointed Charles S. Stevens, of Cedarville, a member of the State Board of Prison Inspectors. The Governor also named nineteen delegates to represent New Jersey at the eighteenth annual convention of the American Mining Congress, to be held at San Francisco, September 20 to September 22. Among the appointees are the following local people: Thomas H. Leggett and J. A. Van Mater and Henry D. Hibbard, of Plainfield, and William L. Saunders, of North Plainfield.

JOHN W. HARRISON IS 78 YEARS OLD TODAY

John W. Harrison, of 508 New street, is celebrating his seventy-eighth birthday anniversary today. Still in good health, Mr. Harrison is active in business, civic and religious circles. He is spending the day quietly, accepting the congratulations of his many friends and acquaintances.

Mr. Harrison belongs to the Disciples of Christ, a religious sect, and has traveled extensively in this country, preaching in various places. Two long trips in a gospel wagon were made by him and his wife, now deceased, during which they held religious services in hundreds of towns and cities between New York and the Far West.

MANY LOCAL PEOPLE VISIT HOPATCONG FOR VACATIONS

During the past fortnight many Plainfield arrivals have been recorded at Lake Hopatcong, a number of whom are planning to spend the summer months at the popular fresh water resort. Mr. and Mrs. Frederick I. Smith and family, of Netherwood avenue, returned to their home in this city yesterday afternoon from a two weeks' stay at Prospect Point, one of the interesting places at the Lake. Mr. Smith, who has been convalescing after a serious illness, has been greatly benefitted by the change.

J. Bruce Conlin, of Kensington avenue, is spending the summer at the Conlin cottage, Raccoon Island. Mrs. E. A. Reed and son, Lester, of West Fourth and John streets, will return home tomorrow after a two weeks' outing spent at Camp "Biljak," Halsey Island, as the guests of Mr. Reed's brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. John Honan, of East Orange. Miss Ruter Wolff and Master Ralph Wolff, of Martine avenue, are spending the summer at Camp "Esrun," Halsey Island.

MASTER MASONS TO MEET.

An important meeting of the Master Mason's Association is to be held Monday evening, at which time several matters of importance will be taken up. It is expected that some definite action will be taken in regards to its agreement with the Hodcarriers' Union.

Lake Hopatcong $1 Excursion.

COLLECTOR CLEARS UP DOUBTFUL POINTS

Information Concerning the Amount Necessary in Conveying Property.

In a letter received by County Register Frank H. Smith, Charles V. Duffy, internal revenue collector for this district, clears up several doubtful points concerning the amount of revenue stamps to be placed upon deeds conveying mortgaged property. He states that the law requires stamps for the entire purchase price or consideration unless the deed specifically mentions a mortgage or lien as a part of the consideration for the transfer of title.

Owing to some doubt about the construction of the law, Register Smith recently wrote to Collector Duffy as follows:

"A. sells a piece of property to B. for $5,000. B. pays $1,000 in cash to A. and the balance of $4,000 is paid through a loan secured through a building and loan association. Does the above deed require $5 in revenue stamps, or does it require stamps only for $1,000 in equity held by B.?"

Mr. Duffy's answer follows:

"In reply you are informed that Treasury Department 2123, dated January 11, 1915, reads as follows:

"'Where the purchaser receives a deed conveying the entire title to himself, even though it be received under a specific agreement that a mortgage or lien thereon will immediately ensue, unless such mortgage or lien is evidenced in the deed as showing that its execution was a part of, or consideration in the original sale and transfer of title, the tax to be imposed under the provisions of the internal revenue act of October 22, 1914, upon the deed should be computed on the entire amount of consideration given, or the value of the interest or property conveyed, and the said note or notes will be subject to the tax imposed upon such instruments under the provisions of the said act.'

"In short, unless the mortgage given by purchaser of real property, at the time of purchase, is specifically evidenced in the instrument of conveyance, the only incumbrances which may be deducted from the amount of actual consideration given, of the actual value of the interest or property conveyed, in computing the amount of tax to be imposed upon the deed, are those which rested upon the property at the time of purchase."

EVENING CHURCH SERVICE ON THE LAWN TOMORROW

So successful was the open air service on the lawn of the Park Avenue Baptist church last Sunday evening, it will be a feature of tomorrow's services. The Rev. Dr. Birney S. Hudson, the pastor, believes the church is fostering the community spirit in providing for such gatherings.

Electric lighting has been arranged for tomorrow night's service and plenty of seats will be provided. The church choir will be in attendance and there will be a solo by Master Irving Manley, the boy soprano, who will sing "The Ninety and Nine."

Services tomorrow will be held as follows: Sunday-school, 9:45 a. m.; preaching service, 11 a. m.; young people's meeting, 7:15 p. m., and evening preaching, 8 p. m. The pastor's morning theme will be, "Doors That Must Be Opened," and at night, "Great Decisions."

PLAINFIELD IS REPORTED FREE FROM MOSQUITOES

Elizabeth, July 10—Plainfield is included among a list of municipalities in the western half of the county where the mosquito has ceased from troubling to a large extent, according to a report issued today by the Mosquito Commission on the result of an inspection tour Wednesday night when inspectors had their nets out all over the county.

In that city, Westfield, Fanwood, Netherwood, Springfield, Garwood, Summit, Mountainside, Roselle and Roselle Park, conditions are very satisfactory, but in Elizabeth, Rahway, Linden and Cranford, the mosquito is still ravaging. These are salt marsh mosquitoes from the Hackensack meadows, however. The report states that conditions are improved to a marked degree in the county, despite the unfavorable weather.

SALVATION ARMY OUTING.

The Salvation Army is planning to give its free outing to the city's poor, an annual event for which contributions from the public are requested. Wayside Park has been selected as the place for the outing, which is set for Wednesday, July 21. It is hoped to afford a day of pleasure to 200 poor mothers and their children. Contributions will be received at the army headquarters, 137 East Second street.

CRAFTSMEN HOLD STORMY SESSION

Builders Joint Arbitration Board Finally Settle Differences With Contractor.

WAGE SCALE ADJUSTED

Master Masons' Association Ask for Termination of Agreement and May Declare an "Open Shop" for the Trade.

The Joint Arbitraiton Board, composed of master builders, and delegates from the local Building Trades Council, held a stormy session last evening, prior to the regular meeting of the latter body, when questions involving William H. Dennick, contractor for the work on the Crescent Court Apartments on East Seventh street, now in the course of construction, and two laborers, were taken up.

Questions concerning the wage to be received by the laborers came before the board for arbitration, and it was decided by that body that the men should be paid the union scale of wages for laborers, or $3 a day instead of $2, which, it was alleged, was offered the men by the foreman of the job after the men had started to work.

After this matter had been adjusted, the question of whether the men were entitled to "waiting time," for the period from Saturday noon to Thursday morning, pending a settlement of the previous trouble, was brought up, and the board was called together again. Following a heated discussion covering over two hours, the matter was acted upon favorably to the laborers. Unless further complications develop, the action of the joint board of arbitration closes one of the most unique local labor troubles to be taken up during the course of the present building season.

During the course of the meeting it developed that the Master Masons' Association desired to do away with its present agreement with the Hodcariers and Building Laborers Union at this time, the former body asking the arbitration board to make the agreement of non-effect in order that another be drawn up between the two interested bodies. This the board refused to do, and the matter was referred to both the Journeymen's Union and the Masters' Association for action.

From present indications it appears that there is a probability that the master masons will declare "open shop" in regard to hodcarriers should the present agreement be terminated. Such conditions would exist at least, it is believed, until such times as a new agreement between the parties would be drawn up and signed. An effort will be made to bring the representatives of the organizations together in the near future to discuss a new agreement. The Master Masons' Association will meet Monday evening, at which time the matter is to be taken up.

MRS. HELEN HOY GREELEY TO SPEAK IN THIS CITY

Suffrage speeches will be a feature of Saturday nights in Plainfield from now until October 19, the date set for voting on the Suffrage Amendment. The first speech of the series will be give tonight at 8 o'clock at the corner of Park avenue and Second street. The speaker will be Mrs. Helen Hoy Greeley, who was so well received last year. Mrs. Greeley comes with fresh enthusiasm and real hope for "New Jersey Next." She will answer any questions that may be put to her at the close of her talk.

Next Saturday night local Suffragists will speak to Plainfield voters on the subject of how to vote in the autumn for the best interest of the city and State.

NEW MARKET MAN INJURED IN TERRIFIC WIND STORM

Robert Broadway, a contracting carpenter who resides in New Market, is lying in a serious condition in St. Luke's Hospital, New Brunswick, suffering from injuries sustained during the wind and rain storm of Thursday.

He was working on the roof of a house which was lifted from its moorings by the miniature cyclone. Some of the broken rafters struck him and he had a narrow escape from instant death.

JACK GAFFNEY BETTER.

John A. Gaffney, a member of the reportorial staff of the Courier-News, is recovering from an attack of the gout, with which he has been suffering for the past week.

FIRE ENGINE BID RAISES DISCUSSION

Strike Reported in the Shop of the American LaFrance Co., at Elmira, N. Y.

The nomination of officers and routine business marked the weekly session of the Plainfield Building Trades Council, held last evening, while the election of officers will be held next Friday evening. Reports received during the course of the evening indicate that the new Federal postoffice building will be erected under union condition, while it was also announced that the J. D. Loizeaux Lumber Company, a local concern, will turn out the bulk of the interior wood trimmings. In view of the latter fact, it is assured that this work will be done under the eight-hour day schedule.

Representatives of the Painters' Union reported that their line of work in this city at the present time is almost at a stand-still, in spite of the improvements noted with other building crafts. It appears that this condition cannot be explained, as no good reason has been advanced for the slump in this direction.

Local craftsmen, as well as the machinists and other mechanics working in machine shops, expressed interest in the probable action the Common Council may take in regard to the bid of the American La France Fire Engine Co., of Elmira, N. Y., where the union machinists have been out on strike for the past two or three months. At present the factory is being operated by non-union mechanics. It is probable that the fire committee of the City Council will be made aware of these conditions.

During the course of the past week a number of carpenters have found employment through Business Agent William H. Lunger, who reports that local building conditions are gradually improving.

FORMER PLAINFIELDER MAY LOSE HIS EYESIGHT

Oliver Hill, formerly a resident of Plainfield, but now living in New York, is in a New York hospital as a result of an unexpected explosion of a flower pot last Monday. The flash struck his face and injured his eyes so badly that the attending physicians have given up hope of one eye altogether, and cannot assert positively that the other can be saved.

The flower pot he had ignited did not go off as quickly as he expected it to and Mr. Hill bent over it to investigate. Then the explosion occurred. Suddenly Mr. Hill caught the full force of the explosion in the face.

FOUR GENERATIONS ENJOY SURPRISE AND REUNION

Attended by four generations of the family, the reception given to William Freiday, of Newark, at the home of Mrs. Phoebe Philpott, of Westervelt avenue, last night, was in the nature of a re-union attended by forty relatives and friends from this city, Brooklyn, New York, Newark, Elizabeth and Jersey City. The affair was arranged by Mrs. Philpott and Mrs. William Freiday, her granddaughter, and was a complete surprise to the guest of honor, who is staying in this city for a several weeks' vacation with his wife. The lawn and spacious piazza were prettily decorated with Japanese lanterns. Yellow and black were the predominating colors in the dining-room while the parlor and hall presented an attractive appearance, green and white being used in the decorative arrangements.

The evening was spent in playing games, singing and dancing. The pricipal feature of the affair was an old-fashioned Virginia reel in which the larger portion of those present took part. Instrumental selections were beautifully rendered by the following: Violin, Clarence Gaston; piano, Mrs. William Freiday and Miss Emily Starkins, of Brooklyn. Vocal selections given by Howard Dentz were especially pleasing. He was accompanied by Miss Carolyn Dentz. The four generations present last night were Mrs. Phoebe Philpott, her son, Warner Philpott; his daughter, Mrs. William Freiday, and her three children, Marjorie, Gladys and Ernest.

MUTUAL AID ANNUAL.

The annual meeting and election of officers of the Potter Printing Press Shop Mutual Aid Society will be held next Saturday evening, at the rooms of the Building Trades Council Hall. The yearly reports are to be presented at this time, while other matters of importance are to be taken up.

RUSSIANS MEET WITH SUCCESS ONCE MORE

Offensive North of Krasnik is Forcing Austrians to Retire With Great Loss.

London, July 10.—Great success is attending the Russian offensive north of Krasnik, and the Austrians everywhere in that section of the front are retiring, suffering heavy losses in their withdrawal. The Russian operations, however, have not yet reached a decisive stage in this region, and whether the Russian forces on the left of this army will have to return further depends on the outcome of the battle in about Krasnik. Although the renewed offensive here by the Russians shows that the army has not lost its ability to strike back hard and that its morale has not been destroyed by the long retreat through Galicia into Poland, military experts are careful not to overestimate its present importance. A despatch to the Times from Petrograd indicating the Russian view of the situation says:

"The defeat of Archduke Ferdinand's army near Krasnik is not regarded as decisive despite its high importance, as the Germans are sending strong reinforcements with a view to attempting to recover its lost initia-

PRIEST GIVES STATUE TO STONY HILL CHURCH

New Providence, July 10—To St. Mary's Catholic church of Stony Hill, have been presented two statues of adoring angels by Rev. Joseph Zimmer, of Raritan. A special service will be held tomorrow afternoon in the church, at which the images will be blessed by Rev. Joseph McGrath, pastor of the church.

The gift is made by Father Zimmer in memory of his childhood days spent in St. Mary's parish. He is seventy years old, was taken from the town when he was five, and his first visit to the place of his nativity in sixty-five years was two weeks ago, when he made a pilgrimage to St. Mary's. Determining to leave something here in memory of his childhood he asked Father McGrath what he desired most. The latter named the adoring angels, and they arrived this week.

CONVICTED BOY CHAUFFEUR ON PROBATION SIX MONTHS

Arraigned before Judge Rene P. F. von Minden in the Dunellen court, this morning, nineteen-year-old Arthur Moore, the Plainfield chauffeur who was convicted of a charge of driving an automobile while under the influence of liquor on West Seventh street, near Clinton avenue, early in June, was given a probationary term of six months. He will have to report to the probation officer of Middlesex county every week and Judge von Minden will maintain a strict surveillance over the youth. He was warned by the court that his arrest for any offense prior to the completion of the probationary period would mean his commitment to the New Brunswick jail for six months.

Moore's automobile driver's license has been revoked and he will be permitted to drive a car under no conditions. Judge von Minden in passing sentence said that in the future similar offenses would be dealt with by administering jail terms, and that no leniency was to be shown by his court for drunkards who pilot automobiles.

REV. DR. BIRNEY S. HUDSON ADDRESSES FLOWER GUILD

A large number of members and friends attended the meeting of the Plant, Fruit and Flower Guild held in the Friends' Meeting-house last night. The session opened with prayer by Mrs. H. W. Winter, secretary and treasurer of the guild, after which several vocal and instrumental selections were rendered by members. Miss Carrie Higgins delighted with several piano solos. Reports from the distributing committee read by Mrs. L. M. Case, were most encouraging and showed that body to be actively engaged in its work. Mrs. Case was appointed chairman of a committee to visit the Industrial Home.

Rev. Birney S. Hudson, pastor of the Park AAvenue Baptist church, delivered an address in which he drew a lesson from the life of Christ. He urged the committee to continue the good work it has been doing which has been a source of happiness in so many homes. The next meeting of the guild will be held in the meeting-house on August 13.

GERMAN REPLY IS UNSATISFACTORY

That is Belief Unofficially Expressed at Washington, D. C.

FAILS TO MEET DEMAND

Only Promises Safety to American Ships Which Are Marked to Show Identity—Suggests Taking Over of Four Enemy Vessels for Passenger Traffic Only.

Washington, D. C., July 10.—Compromise proposals, which it is impossible for this country to accept, according to the views held here in official circles, are made in the German reply to the second Lusitania note from this country. Little hope is felt that the note even affords opportunity for further discussion with Germany of the American demands.

The note promises safe passage of passenger steamships and "legitimate" shipping—under certain conditions, such as special markings and notification to Germany that such vessels are proceeding to Europe.

The note suggests that a "reasonable number" of neutral steamships be put under the American flag and if these do not provide an adequate number of neutral passenger steamships "the imperial government is prepared to interpose no objections to the placing under the American flag by the American government of four enemy passenger steamships for passenger traffic between North America and England."

The note makes many protestations of great friendship for the United States, but the Berlin government makes no pretence of yielding to President Wilson's demand that Americans aboard all merchant vessels shall have their lives respected by German submarine commanders. Germany pleads again that she is fighting for her existence and protests that Great Britain has forced her into the method of submarine warfare against which the United States has protested.

"The case of the Lusitania," the note insists, "shows with horrible clearness to what jeopardizing of human lives that manner of war employed by our adversaries leads."

It is declared that if time had been given to the crew and passengers of the Lusitania to take to the boats it would have meant the loss of the submarine. The presence of munitions on board is again put forward in extenuation of the sinking of the Lusitania.

Germany's reply to the American note follows:

Berlin, Friday, 9:25 p. m., via London, Saturday.

The text of the German note follows:

"Berlin, July 8.—The undersigned has the honor to make the following reply to His Excellency, Ambassador Gerard, to the note of the 10th ultimo re the impairment of American interests by the German submarine war. The imperial government learned with satisfaction from the note how earnestly the government of the United States is concerned in seeing the principles of humanity realized in the present war. Also this appeal finds ready echo in Germany, and the imperial government is quite willing to permit its statements and decisions in the present case to be governed by the principles of humanity, just as it has done always.

"The imperial government welcomed with gratitude when the American government in the note of May 15 itself recalled that Germany had always permitted itself to be governed by the principles of progress and humanity in dealing with the law of maritime war. Since the time when Frederick the Great negotiated with John Adams, Benjamin Franklin and Thomas Jefferson, the treaty of friendship and commerce of September 9, 1785, between Prussia and the Republic of the West, German and American statesmen have, in fact, always stood together in the struggle for the freedom of the seas and for the protection of peaceable trade. In the international proceedings which since have been conducted for the regulation of laws of maritime war Germany and America have jointly advocated progressive principles, especially the abolishment of the right of capture at sea and the protection of the interests of neutrals.

"Even at the beginning of the present war the German government immediately declared its willingness, in response to proposals of the American government, to ratify the declaration of London and thereby subject itself in the use of its naval forces to all the restrictions provided therein in favor of neutrals. Germany, likewise, has been always tenacious of the principle that war should be conducted against the armed and organized forces of an enemy country, but that the enemy civilian population must be spared as far

GIVE UP THEIR JOBS TO FIGHT FOR COUNTRY

Ten of the Italian laborers employed in constructing the collecting sewerage system have thrown up their jobs and sailed for Italy to assist their mother country in the warfare which she is waging on an enormous scale against Austria-Hungary. These men were summoned to Italy to take up arms through the Italian consul located at Newark. Once these summons are received it is either up to those who receive them to go or forfeit their right to return to the land of their birth and also forfeit all property which they may have in their names there.

EUROPE HAS BILLIONS IN AMERICAN RAILROADS

New York, July 10.—According to the latest estimates of the investment of Europeans in America, holdings in American railroads amount to about $2,500,000,000, and in American industrial concerns about $2,000,000,000. The recent summary of the railroad securities held abroad showed that they were much lower than had been thought. L. F. Loree, president of the Delaware and Hudson Railroad, made a minute investigation, covering 145 American railroads, and his result is as follows:

PRIZE OFFERED FOR FLAG DESIGN

$100 to Be Paid for the Best Banner for City of Newark.

AN OPEN COMPETITION

Any Resident of State May Enter Contest, which Closes October 1—Many Cities Adopting Official Emblems.

A competition, open to any resident of the State of New Jersey, for a design for a flag for the city of Newark, has been announced. A prize of $100 will be awarded. The competition closes October 1. Following are the conditions which will rule the competition:

The design must be executed and completely finished by the person competing.

It may consist of a drawing in colors or of an actual flag of silk or bunting of miniature size.

All designs must be in the hands of the judges by October 1, 1915. Each design shall be securely wrapped, and if a drawing, shall bear in one corner a distinguishing mark or symbol, and if a miniature flag, shall have affixed thereto a small card or sheet of paper bearing such distinguishing mark or symbol. Accompanying each design shall be a sealed, plain white envelope, which shall carry on the outside the distinguishing mark or symbol, and no other mark of any other description, and shall contain inside, the name of the competitor and his or her address. The envelopes containing the names will remain sealed until after the judges shall have made the awards. No competitor will be permitted to submit more than one design. Designs and correspondence relating to the competition should be addressed to the Committee of One Hundred, Kinney Building, Newark, and endorsed "City Flag Contest."

The judges will be: Thomas L. Raymond, Mayor of the City of Newark; Patrick O'Brien, president of the Common Council of Newark; Frederic L. Johnson, president of the Board of Education of Newark; Patrick H. Ryan, president of the Board of Street and Water Commissioners of Newark, and Alexander Archibald, city clerk of Newark.

This competition will be held in connection with the celebration of the 250th anniversary of the settlement of the city of Newark, which will be held in 1916. In charge of this celebration is a committee of one hundred men, of which Former Governor Franklin Murphy is chairman; Former Senator James Smith Jr., vice-chairman; Alexander Archibald, honorary secretary; Wilson J. Vance, secretary, and D. H. Merritt, treasurer. This committee was constituted under law and resolution of the Newark Common Council to conduct the celebration.

Until recent years very few American cities had city flags. New York has just adopted one in honor of the 250th anniversary of the institution of city government.

Baltimore adopted a flag in connection with the festival celebrating the 100th anniversary of the writing of the Star Spangled Banner. Boston has had a city flag for a number of years. Denver has only recently adopted an official banner.

Most of the banners thus adopted have some historical significance. New York's official flag is a reproduction of the colors of the House of Orange, which ruled in the Netherlands when the city was founded. Baltimore reproduces the colors of Lord Baltimore, her founder, and imposes upon them a picture of her historic Battle Monument. Boston likewise commemorates history in her flag.

FORCED TO MOVE 39 TIMES, SEEKS DIVORCE

Camden, July 10.—Edward T. Turner, a telephone inspector, is seeking a divorce because, he claims, he was forced to move thirty-nine times during his ten years of married life. The frequent change of residence was made necessary by landlords, he says, because of disturbances created by his wife. Finally, he claims, she left him and refused to return to the home he had made here. The case came up in the Chancery Court, and was continued until yesterday, when Advisory Master Joline took up the appeal of Turner.

TO SENTENCE PROSECUTOR.

Cape May Court House, July 10.—Matthew Jefferson, prosecutor of Cape May county, who was found guilty last month of malfeasance in office, will be sentenced on Monday. Involved in the charges was a sum of $300, which he admitted he had retained for nineteen months before paying it over. The jury found him guilty after two hours' deliberation.

If you have not advertised for a position, you are not competing with those who do advertise.

KEEP THE KIDNEYS WELL

Health is Worth Saving, and Some Plainfield People Know How to Save It.

Many Plainfield people take their lives in their hands by neglecting the kidneys when they know these organs need help. Weak kidneys are responsible for a vast amount of suffering and ill health—the slightest delay is dangerous. Use Doan's Kidney Pills—a remedy that has helped thousands of kidney sufferers. Here is a Plainfield citizen's recommendation.

Mrs. Anthony Wahl, R. F. D., No. 1, Plainfield, says: "I had such distressing pains in my back that I could hardly stand and it was out of the question for me to stoop. I was all crippled up and I knew perfectly well that my kidneys were the cause of the trouble. Doan's Kidney Pills gave me almost immediate relief and three boxes changed me from a chronic sufferer to a healthy woman. I still take Doan's Kidney Pills occasionally, when a cold settles on my kidneys and they act as a preventive of any serious trouble."

Price 50 cents, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mrs. Wahl had. Foster-Milburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y. Adv.

UNION COUNTY COURT OF COMMON PLEAS.

Notice of Hearing Objections to Assessments For Street Improvements in the City of Plainfield.

Andrew J. Gavett, Vincent W. Nash, Jr., and Frederic E. Mygatt, the Commissioners appointed by the Union County Court of Common Pleas, by order entered on the thirtieth day of April, 1915, to estimate and assess benefits conferred by the permanent street improvements in the City of Plainfield, under the ordinance of said city specified in said order, (said ordinance being also hereinafter specified) and the character of the work and improvements for which said assessments have been made and a description of the sections of the particular streets and avenues thereof which are included in said assessment, being as follows, viz.

Emerson Avenue, from the macadam on East Front Street to the macadam on George Street.

Geraud Avenue, from the northwesterly curb line of West Front Street to the bridge over Green Brook.

Monroe Avenue, from the macadam on West Eighth Street to the center of Sherman Avenue.

under the ordinance of said city entitled, "An Ordinance for the Permanent Improvement of Certain Streets and Portions of Streets of the City of Plainfield, with permanent and durable macadam pavement, and to provide the Necessary Funds in advance of the Collection of Assessments for Benefits." Approved July 6th, 1914, which ordinance was adopted under and by virtue of the Act of the Legislature entitled: "An Act to authorize the improvement of streets and highways in cities of this State, and to provide for the payment of the expense of the same, and for the assessment of the benefits of such improvement upon the land and real state benefited thereby," approved July 13th, 1898, and the amendments and supplements thereto, having made and filed in the office of the clerk of said court, a report in writing of their estimates and assessments, accompanied by surveys and maps prepared by the City Surveyor under their direction, showing lots or parcels of land and real estate peculiarly benefited by such improvements, respectively, the total cost of the whole work upon each of the sections of said streets or avenues improved as aforesaid, under the aforesaid ordinance, the portions assessed upon the City at large, and the names, so far as ascertained, of the owners of the said lots or parcels of land and real estate, and the amount of the assessment to each owner for each of said lots or parcels of land and real estate for the said benefits, and the excess thereof to be paid by the City at large, and raised by general tax, and the other matters required by said acts of the Legislature, as by reference to said report and maps will more fully and at large appear.

Notice is hereby given, that said Union County Court of Common Pleas has fixed the 30th day of July, 1915, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, or as soon thereafter as the Court can attend to the same, at the Court House in the City of Elizabeth, as the time and place for hearing before said court any objections that may be made to such assessments, when and where all parties may be heard, and has directed the publication of this notice.

KNIGHTS OF COLUMBUS PLAN ANNUAL EXCURSION

Final plans for the annual excursion to Asbury Park and Ocean Grove given by the Watchung Knights of Columbus were completed at a meeting held in the clubhouse on West Front street, last night. The following committee was appointed: A. A. Cannon, chairman; M. P. Griffen, secretary and treasurer; John A. Gaffney, publicity.

The outing this year will be held on Tuesday, August 10, and will include the Sunday-schools of the folling places: Plainfield, North Plainfield, South Plainfield, Dunellen, Scotch Plains, Netherwood and Stony Hill. The train will be run in three sections of fifteen cars each and the committee has arranged for the comfort of all who go. Tickets will be ready for the committee next Tuesday and the Sunday-school children will receive their passes Sunday, July 18.

GOING TO EUROPE.

Among the passengers on the steamship St. Louis of the American Line, which sailed for England today, are the following Plainfielders: Mr. and Mrs. Charles Crump and daughter, Ida, of South avenue; Mrs. Mary A. Clark and daughters, Mary and Nellie, also of South avenue. They are all returning to their native land, England, where they intend to make their home permanently. Passage was secured through Estil's Steamship Agency on Park avenue.

SLIGHT GROCERY STORE FIRE.

A fire originating in some waste paper behind the counter in the grocery store of Grover Cashin, 726 South avenue, near Berckman street, about 11 o'clock last night, did slight damage. The fire was put out with chemicals. Matches, stored under the counter, are supposed to have become ignoted through the moving about of some articles, and to have set fire to the waste paper.

FUNERAL OF MRS. CARLSON.

The funeral of Mrs. Anna Elizabeth Carlson, wife of Carl Carlson, who died at her home on East Sixth street Wednesday afternoon was held yesterday afternoon from the late residence at 2:30 and from the Swedish Lutheran church at 3 o'clock. Rev. Gottfried Sjoblom, pastor of the church, officiated at the service. There were many floral offerings. Burial was in Hillside cemetery.

CHARLES HOOK'S FUNERAL.

The funeral of Charles Hook, who died Wednesday at his home on Pearl street, was held from that residence yesterday afternoon. Rev. George Hauser, pastor of the German Reformed church, officiating at the service. A large number of friends attended the obsequies. There were many floral tributes, large set pieces being included in the offerings. Burial was made in Hillside cemetery.

FINED PEDDLER $8.

Louis Vendix, who gave his address as 1049 Hall place, New York city, was arrested by Patrolman Dunlap last night on a charge of peddling without a license. In the city court, this morning, Judge DeMeza sentenced him to pay a fine of $8 or go to the county jail for forty days.

LADIES' AID SOCIETY GIVE SUCCESSFUL AFFAIR

The ice cream festival and social given by the Ladies' Aid Society of the Netherwood Reformed church, yesterday afternoon and night, was a successful undertaking both financially and socially, a large number of members of the church and their friends attending the affair, which was given on the lawn surrounding the church. An orchestra from the Dutch Arms Band of this city, furnished music throughout the evening. Mrs. J. M. Hunt was chairman of the committee having charge of the affair and much of the success is due to her efforts. She was ably assisted by the members of the society.

KNIGHTS OF PYTHIAS TO HOLD BIG CELEBRATION

Perseverance Lodge, No. 74, K. of P., conferred the third rank on a class of candidates at the meeting last night and followed the program with a banquet.

Plains for the meeting next Friday night were perfected, and the committee promises an enjoyable occasion for all those who attend. It will be "Past Chancellors' Night" and at least sixty-three past chancellors of Perseverance will be present. They will witness the younger men, who are now active in the lodge, initiate a class of candidates from both Perseverance and Unity lodges. Delegates are expected from Somerville, Bound Brook and Crescent Council, Uniformed Rank, of this city. The latter will be in full uniform. Crescent Council will assist in the initiation. A banquet will follow.

It will be an occasion long to be remembered, this gathering together of so many past chancellors of the lodge, and will be another one of the many entertaining features the officers of Perseverance have been arranging lately to maintain interest in the lodge.

OUTDOOR SERVICE.

Rev. Edward S. Ralston will preach at the Netherwood Reformed church tomorrow morning at 11 o'clock, on "The Mesage of the East Wind." The service at 7:45 p. m. will be an outdoor service, the weather permitting. These outdoor meetings were very popular last summer. The subject tomorrow will be "The Uttermost." A cordial invitation is given to all to come, enjoy the quiet hours under the stars, join in the hearty singing and be helped by the message.

NETHERWOOD SCHOOL COMING.

The first definite step towards the erection of a public school building in the Eastern end of the city was taken at the meeting of the Common Council this week when a petition was received from the Board of School Estimate requesting the Council to set aside an appropriation of $6,000 for the purchase of land for a new school building in the Netherwood section.

SUNDAY WILL BE CLOUDY.

Weather Prophet John Neagle predicts partly cloudy weather for Sunday with not much change in temperature. The highest temperature yesterday was 82 degrees and the lowest this morning 53 degrees.

REPLY UNSATISFACTORY

as possible from the measures of war. The imperial government cherishes the definite hope that some way will be found when peace is concluded, or perhaps earlier, to regulate the law of maritime war in a manner guaranteeing the freedom of the seas, and will welcome it with gratitude and satisfaction if it can work hand in hand with the American government on that occasion.

"If in the present war the principles which should be the ideal of the future have been traversed more and more, the longer its duration, the German government has no guilt therein. It is known to the American government how Germany's adversaries, by completely paralyzing peaceable traffic between Germany and neutral countries, have aimed from the very beginning and with increasing lack of consideration at the destruction not so much of the armed forces as the life of the German nation, repudiating in doing so all the rules of international law and disregarding all rights of neutrals.

"On November 3, 1914, England declared the North Sea a war area, and by planting poorly anchored mines and by the stoppage and capture of vessels made passage extremely dangerous and difficult for neutral shipping, so (by ?) that actually blockading neutral coasts and ports, contrary to all international law. Long before the beginning of submarine war England practically completed intercepted legitimate neutral navigation to Germany, also. Thus Germany was driven to a submarine war on trade.

"On November 14, 1914, the English Premier declared in the House of Commons that it was one of England's principal tasks to prevent food for the German population from reaching Germany via neutral ports. Since March 1 England has been taking from neutral ships without further formality all merchandise proceeding to Germany, as well as all merchandise coming from Germany, even when neutral property. Just as it was also with the Boers, the German people is now to be given the choice of perishing from starvation with its women and children or of relinquishing its independence.

"While our enemies thus loudly and openly proclaimed war without mercy until our utter destruction we were conducting a war in self-defense for our national existence and for the sake of peace of an assured permanency. We have been obliged to adopt a submarine warfare to meet the declared intentions of our enemies and the method of warfare adopted by them in contravention of international law.

"With all its efforts in principle to protect neutral life and property from damage, as much as possible, the German government recognized unreservedly in its memorandum of February 4 that the interests of neutrals might suffer from the submarine warfare. However, the American government will also understand and appreciate that in the fight for existence which has been forced upon Germany by its adversaries and announced by them, it is the sacred duty of the imperial government to do all within its power to protect and save the lives of German subjects. If the imperial government were derelict in these, its duties, it would be guilty before God and history of the violation of those principles of highest humanity, which are the foundation of every national existence.

"The case of the Lusitania shows with horrible clearness to what jeopardizing of human lives the manner of conducting war employed by our adversaries leads. In the most direct contradiction of international law all distinctions between merchantmen and war vessels have been obliterated by the order to British merchantmen to arm themselves and to ram submarines, and the promise of rewards therefor, and neutrals who use merchantmen as travellers thereby have been exposed in an increasing degree to all the dangers of war.

"If the commander of the German submarine which destroyed the Lusitania had caused the crew and passengers to take to the boats before firing a torpedo this would have meant the sure destruction of his own vessel. After the experiences in sinking much smaller and less seaworthy vessels it was to be expected that a mighty ship like the Lusitania would remain above water long enough, even after the torpedoing, to permit passengers to enter the ship's boats. Circumstances of a very peculiar kind, especially the presence on board of large quantities of highly explosive materials (word omitted, possibly 'dissipated') this expectation. In addition, it may be pointed out that if the Lusitania had been spared thousands of cases of munitions would have been sent to Germany's enemies and thereby thousands of German mothers and children robbed of breadwinners.

"In the spirit of friendship wherewith the German nation has been imbued toward the Union and its inhabitants since the earliest days of its existence, the imperial government will always be ready to do all it can during the present war also to protect the jeopardizing of lives of American citizens. The imperial government, therefore, repeats the assurances that American ships will not be hindered in the prosecution of legitimate shipping and the lives of American citizens in neutral vessels shall not be placed in jeopardy.

"In order to exclude any unforseen dangers to American passenger steamers, made possible in view of the conduct of maritime war by Germany's adversaries, German submarines will be instructed to permit the free and safe passage of such passenger steamers when made recognizable by special markings and notified a reasonable time in advance. The imperial government, however, confidently hopes that the American government will assume to guarantee that these vessels have no contraband on board, details of arrangements for the unhampered passage of these vessels to be agreed upon by the naval authorities on both sides.

"In order to furnish adequate facilities for travel across the Atlantic for American citizens the German government submits for consideration a proposal to increase the number of available steamers by installing in passenger service a reasonable number of neutral steamers under the American flag, the exact number to be agreed upon under the same condition as the above mentioned American steamers.

"The imperial government believes it can assume that in this manner adequate facilities for travel across the Atlantic Ocean can be afforded American citizens. There would, therefore, appear to be no compelling necessity for American citizens to travel to Europe in time of war on ships carrying an enemy flag. In particular, the imperial government is unable to admit that American citizens can protect an enemy ship through the mere fact of their presence on board.

"Germany merely followed England's example when she declared part of the high seas an area of war. Consequently, accidents suffered by neutrals on enemy ships in this area of war cannot well be judged differently from accidents to which neutrals are at all times exposed at the seat of war on land when they betake themselves into dangerous localities in spite of previous warnings. If, however, it should not be possible for the American government to acquire an adequate number of neutral passenger steamers, the imperial government is prepared to interpose no objections to the placing under the American flag by the American government of four enemy passenger steamers for passenger traffic between North America and England. Assurance of 'free and safe' passage for American passenger steamers would then extend to apply the identical pro-conditions to these formerly hostile passenger steamers.

"The President of the United States has declared his readiness, in a way deserving of thanks, to communicate and suggest proposals to the government of Great Britain with particular reference to the alteration of maritime war. The imperial government will always be glad to make use of the good offices of the President and hopes that his efforts in the present case, as well as in the direction of the lofty ideal of the freedom of the seas, will lead to an understanding.

"The undersigned requests the Ambassador to bring the above to the knowledge of the American government, and avails himself of the opportunity to renew to His Excellency the assurance of his most distinguished consideration.

New Goods All Over the Store in the SIMPSON-CRAWFORD Sale on Monday

Could we take you behind the scenes and show you how our receiving and stock rooms have been working to keep up with your buying, you would have a faint idea of the vastness of this Simpson-Crawford Sale—and in mid-July, too! It is a gigantic task to mark all the Simpson-Crawford goods with their new GIMBEL prices—averaging half. It is another big job to take care of the new goods coming in to keep the Sale well rounded—from mills, importers and jobbers, all with overstocks of good merchandise to unload; glad, too, to help GIMBELS maintain the high character of the offerings.

We receive many letters like these:

From a Famous American Maker of Rugs:

"We wish to state that we have favored you by making shipments of extra good rugs, which we had not intended to place on sale. We have no doubt that your sale will be a quick and effective one."

From a Noted Scotch Gingham Manufacturer:

"We understand you have secured the entire stock of the Simpson-Crawford Corporation, and take this opportunity to congratulate you.

"In case you are open for any more goods we will be glad to have you look over some of our materials on which we are making big end-of-season reductions."

From an Old Perfumery Concern:

"We will take 25 cents on the dollar for goods on hand, packed and wrapped, for the Simpson-Crawford Store. We do not want to have to re-label and re-pack."

From a Woman's Tailor:

"Perhaps it will help you in completing stocks, as it will help us in our mid-year inventory, if you will take a line of dresses which we have over and above our orders. We will do better than 50 cents on the dollar."

It is from such sources as these that the Simpson-Crawford Sale derives ever fresh interest. For, as we said in the beginning, Simpson-Crawford goods themselves (all duly marked with distinguishing price tags), are only a part of the immense quantities planned for this month-long event. Part of Monday's Wonderful News:—

PROCTOR'S THEATRE

Eugene Walter's stage play "Fine Feathers," has been done in film form and is being released by World Film Corporation. The author made a success of the original piece, which was one of several popular dramatic works, viz.: "Paid in Full," "The Easiest Way" and "The Wolf."

Janet Beecher is the central figure of the film play. She plays the part of a young woman who is discontented with her lot in life; yearns for fine feathers; obtains them by dishonorable means, has a brief career of glitter and glory; and then suffers retribution in company with her weakling of a husband who connived at her social exaltation and suffered with her in her fall.

The story is a fine one, it is a moral one, it is a lesson and a warning. And it is worked out with great dramatic skill. Everything that happens in the photoplay is what you might expect to happen in real life when two young people deliberately start in to live beyond their means.

One of the most impresive parts of this picture is that showing the bursting of a dam and the flooding of the surrounding country. The cause of this was an inferior kind of cement for which the seeker of fine feathers was responsible—she persuaded her husband to accept a nefarious proposition from a villainous man who would make money out of supplying a poor kind of cement instead of a good one.

"Fine Feathers" will be shown at Proctor's Theatre on Monday, July 12, both afternoon and evening.

DANIELS TO DEDICATE CHURCH.

Washington, July 10—Secretary of the Navy Josephus Daniels will take part in the ground-breaking exercises for the new Methodist Episcopal church at the head of New Hampshire avenue. Tomorrow afternoon he will yield the shovel, after he has delivered his address.

CUPID'S CROP SHRINKS.

Boston, July 10.—The total number of marriage licenses issued here for the month of June was 1,073, showing a decrease of 140 from last year. The total for the first six months shows a loss of 347 from the figures of the corresponding six months last year.

The "thrift-instinct" in people makes the "For Sale" ads interesting to them.

PLAINFIELD, NEW JERSEY, JULY 10, 1915.

On Saturdays the editorial columns of the Daily Press are conducted by citizens who are free to express their own views. The contributing editor for today is United States Senator James E. Martine, who presents the first of two articles on his recent trip to Hawaii. The second will appear on Saturday, July 24.

"SEEING AMERICA FIRST."

In the first week in April last a party consisting of six United States Senators and their wives and a number of members of the House of Representatives left Washington, D. C., for a trip to the Pacific Coast. We embarked on a special train on the Pennsylvania Railroad, the train was a most complete one in equipment and service. Our first stop was at Chicago, where we remained for a day and two nights. At this city we were entertained by the Chamber of Commerce and given a fine luncheon in the rooms of the Chamber. After this we were driven in autos around the city.

Upon leaving Chicago we took the Santa Fe Railroad for the coast. It was a merry and happy party; our train became our home for the days and nights until we reached San Francisco. The service rendered by the railroad was perfect, the trip novel and the party delighted.

At San Francisco we were driven to the Palace Hotel. After bath and luncheon we were taken by the Board of Trade for a sail on the beautiful bay of San Francisco. The day was perfect, and every prospect was pleasing. What a superb sight to see every craft, large and small, decked with the Stars and Stripes; all seemed anxious to do honor to the party. After a sail of about three hours, we were driven in autos to the grand and beautiful fair grounds. Beautiful did I say? Yes, grand and glorious. The site on the bay could not be surpassed; the view across the water to the various islands, the finely wooded shores, make a most perfect picture. The Fair Buildings are bewildering in beauty, the coloring a dream of good taste, and hence pleasing for the eye to rest on. The various state buildings are most attractive, each having reference to the State by which it was built. New York, the Empire State, has a most stately structure; New Jersey a most commodious building, modeled after the old Colonial barracks in Trenton; Pennsylvania has a substantial home built of red brick, on lines of Old Independence Hall at Philadelphia, and so on. Of course the exhibits are th ewhole world on show. It would take a book to hold the story of all these superb buildings contain within.

But we leave the Fair for another time, and hie ourselves on for the sea, the real blue sea, for the Pacific Ocean is the most beautiful blue you can imagine. We boarded the steamship Sierra, a fine ship of about 10,000 tons. What a novelty, yes, delight, for the writer. But oh, how Noah Webster lied in his dictionary when he said that the word Pacific meant quiet, for surely as applied to the Pacific Ocean, it is not true, for it was not quiet a little bit; and as a result almost every one on board was sea sick, the Senators and Representatives were no exception to the rule. However, before the six and a half days' voyage was over, we got our bearings, and all went well. It was a real family party, the ladies playing cards, knitting, the Senators and Congressman pitching quoits, bean bag, ten pins and other games.

To my astonishment and regret we did not sight a sail or craft of any kind from the coast of California to the Isle of Hawaii. It was to me a great disappointment at least. A flying fish, now and then, the only living thing to be seen on that glorious blue ocean.

On the sixth day we all strained our eyes for the first sight of land. How eagerly we kept vigil! At last we see in the far distance, a great promontory, it is Diamond Point, the first of the Hawaiian Islands, towering up over 1,000 feet, bleak and barren, clear and solitary, keeping watch over the seas. As we come nearer we see the grassy slopes and villages, the fields of sugar cane and pineapples, the slow smoke curling from the sugar mills. This all makes an interesting picture and time passes quickly.

At last, thank God! we see our loved flag, hear the "The Star Spangled Banner," "Columbia Gem of the Ocean," and other patriotic strains, and then the Governor of the Islands and a number of officials on small boats fairly covered with flags, come close to our ship. Many native women in their party, all clad in white, who sang our patriotic songs and waved Americans flags, bidding us welcome, exchanging greetings and telling us how happy they are to shake hands, to meet Senators and Congressman of their great government, etc. At last about noon, after six and a half days, we step foot on the wharf of Honolulu. Here hundreds of school children, girls and boys, come to us burdened with wreaths of flowers and beautiful leaves; these they place around our necks, in order to express their happiness at our coming.

At a later date will write regarding the islands—the living volcano, etc.

JAMES E. MARTINE.

THE FORUM

Editor, Plainfield Daily Press:

The undersigned has been investigating the recent riot in which the Pillars of Fire were concerned, and is securing evidence bearing on the entire matter.

All citizens of Plainfield who were present at the riot and who have the best interest of the city at heart, and who believe in the constitutional right of free speech, will be performing both a civic duty and a patriotic act by submitting to me in writing any evidence that they may have bearing on this case or by sending me their names if they are willing to personally appear in event of the case being heard by the city officials.

The writer has absolutely no connection with the Pillars of Fire either religiously or in any other way, and in fact knows nothing of their sect, but is imbued solely with the desire to see the laws respected in this city.

PERCY S. BROWN.

ALLIED TRADES TONIGHT.

The Plainfield Allied Trades Committee will hold its first meeting of the season at the Building Trades Council Hall, this evening, at which time a number of matters of importance will be discussed. It is probable that the question of the advisability of holding another Labor Day demonstration this year will be taken up at this time.

Going to build? See Saturday's Press.

SHRINERS AT SEATTLE.

Seattle, Wash., July 10.—Some big treats are in store for the Shriners, who are gathering here from all parts of the map for the forty-first annual session of the Imperial Council, Nobles of the Mystic Shrine. The formal opening will be on Sunday, and the sessions will continue all the week. The main attraction in the way of recreation is the "Stampede and Roundup," which will be staged at the race track, beginning today, and Indians and cowboys with wild horses and steers have been brought from the ranches for the unique event. Everything in the line of a Wild West show has been put on the program, including a stage-coach race, riding wild bulls, Indian and cowboy races, an Indian war-dance, roping and tieing contests, and free-for-alls around the race course. Many of the special trains will arrive today bringing to this city the Shriners from distant places. The Imperial special is due on Monday, with Dr. Frederick B. Smith, imperial potentate.

Buyers Are Found by Advertising—Because They Are Opportunity-Hunters!

If you have something to sell—real estate, personal property of any sort—there's a buyer for it. You don't know who he is, or where he is. You'd be helpless in trying to locate him—but for the fact that he is trying to locate you!

For buyers are opportunity-seekers. And they have learned that the Plainfield Daily Press classified columns are 'the Happy Hunting Grounds' for opportunities. Thus, when your "ad" starts upon its quest it meets the man for whom it was written—also upon his quest. And that's how "results" follow classified advertising.

323 wash dresses that were priced $8.75 and $12.75. Morning buyers will have 24 styles to choose from; voiles, crepes, linens, and tissues.

At $16.50

12 styles of cotton dresses; pretty crepes, tissues, and plain, dotted and figured voiles; 150 dresses in this group; $27.50 and $30 grades by early-season standards.

At $18.75

250 charming lingerie dresses; voile and organdie, embroidered net, voile, linen and net in combination; newest fashion touches in lace trimming, flounce, ruchings, etc., $30 wouldn't have bought one of them in May.

"Above all," says a writer on fashions, "you must wear taffeta."

Fortunate, then, the woman who shall come to the Fashion Salons on Monday and take her choice from these three wonderful groups—

450 Taffeta Dresses at $10.75
220 Taffeta Dresses at $12.50
150 Taffeta Dresses at $16.50

820 dresses in the prettiest, quaintest, youthful styles; flounces upon flounces, frill upon frill; ruffles and pleats and cordings; buttons and pockets and belts; all of the silk that creaks, the only silk that refuses to cling, the silk that is so old-fashionedly feminine.

Navy, black, gray, Belgian blue, striped combinations—a shade and a style and a size for every woman.

And how wonderfully little the price!

Gray Salons, Second floor, Old Building.

Women's Low Shoes, too—1,804 Pairs, Our $5 Grades, at $3.35

Disposal of twelve groups of shoes originally $5 or more—Oxfords, pumps and novelty top low shoes which have sold down to small lots remaining.

The offering is entirely made up of the very shoes women have decided are most desirable.

There is, for example, a two-strap sandal with the charming Paris blunt toe, in all dull black, or gray or fawn back with patent leather toe.

There are pumps of patent, dull black, and tan leathers.

Then there is a fine group of pumps with a dainty tailored bow in various combinations of patent or dull black leather toes and fawn, white, gray or mahogany kid backs.

A number of other models, too. Sizes 2½ to 8; widths AA to D; not all sizes in every model, but all sizes in the entire offering.

Main floor, Old Building.

Monday is the day of this splendid offering.

104 Used Pianos and Player-Pianos, in First-Class Condition, for Sale Monday

Terms, to Suit, in Reason

These are instruments taken in exchange during the regular course of our business, and our own fine instruments used for demonstration purposes.

Every instrument is right—right as a trivet; a producer of good music.

The exchanged instruments are offered at the price we took them for, plus the cost of putting them in fine shape. The others—our own fine instruments—are offered at materially reduced prices because their slight use by us takes them out of the absolutely new class.

74 Upright Pianos, Beginning at $70
24 of the Upright Pianos under $150
32 of Them Between $150 and $195
5 Square Pianos $5, $10, $15, $20 and $25
2 Grand Pianos at $585 and $695
25 Player-Pianos Beginning as Low as $290

Chickering, Weber, Steinway, Knabe, Emerson, Vose, Sohmer, are some of the names on the upright pianos which will be offered Monday morning. Chickering, Schomacker, Lindeman, Kurtzmann and Emerson, are among the player-pianos.

It is one of the few great opportunities—getting less and less each year—to purchase a good music-producing instrument for little money; and on easy terms.

First choice Monday morning, in the Piano Salons.

MARTY O'LOUGHLIN SPLITS SEVENTH MONEY IN METROPOLITAN OPEN ON FOX HILLS LINKS

Plainfielder Finishes Ahead of Many Golfing World Stars—Divided $30 With J. M. Barnes—Nicholls and McDonald in First Place Tie That Will Be Played Off at 2 O'clock This Afternoon—Result a Surprise to Many Followers of Play.

Predictions made by experts following the play in the Metropolitan Open Golf Championship over the links of the Fox Hills course on Staten Island came true yesterday afternoon, when Robert MacDonald, of Buffalo, was able to tie with Gilbert Nicholls, of Wilmington, in the last hours of competition. Each had a score of 292 for 72 holes of medal play. The play-off has been set for 2 o'clock this afternoon. The dope singling out a winner, however, went bad, Walter C. Hagen, of Rochester, finishing as a runner-up with a card of 294. As matters now stand Marty O'Loughlin, the Plainfield Country Club's professional, is tied with J. M. Barnes, of Whitemarsh, Va., for seventh money. The seventh and eighth prizes, amounting to $30, have been combined and the Plainfielder and Barnes will split. Either MacDonald or Nicholls will win first money amounting to $150, while the loser will draw $100. The third award of $75 goes to Hagen, who was paired with O'Loughlin in the second day's play, and Tom McNamara, William Macfarlane and Isaac Mackie split fourth, fifth and sixth moneys.

Surprising in the extreme was the work of O'Loughlin, he being one of the few players entered in the big classic who has not been in active competition recently. It has been three or four years since the Plainfielder engaged in an event of any consequence and that he should finish in the money is a welcome surprise to his many friends several of whom followed the play on the Staten Island course during the two days. His total of an even 300 was only eight strokes behind that of the couple who won out and he had the satisfaction of topping such stars of the golfing world as Macdonald Smith, Louis Tellier, Jack Hobens, George Sargent, John J. McDermott, Alec Smith, Wilfred Reid, Max Marston and others. Eugene McCarthy, who taught the Plainfielder the rudiments of the sport, finished well down the list with a card of 321. He competed for the Jacksonville, Fla., club and was at one time connected with the Somerville Country Club.

O'Loughlin played the first three rounds as follows:

First day—morning round:
Out .....4 3 4 4 3 4 5 3 3—33
In .....5 4 3 5 5 3 4 4 5—38—71

Afternoon round:
Out .....6 4 3 6 3 5 3 3 4—37
In .....4 4 4 5 4 4 3 3 5—36—73

Second day—morning round:
Out .....4 4 3 5 3 5 4 4 4 4—36
In .....4 4 3 6 4 5 4 4 5—39—75

Yesterday afternoon O'Loughlin returned a total of 76, bringing his card for the four circuits up to an even 300. He played masterful golf from start to finish and the luck that generally sticks with him on the Staten Island greens was with him during the entire four rounds. Had the opening day's play been staged under more favorable weather conditions it is not unlikely that the Plainfielder would have strengthed his grip on the standing considerably.

Matters had come down to a critical stage. Nicholls had finished with a score of 74 for his last round and had nosed out Walter C. Hagen by two strokes. Learning what he had to do McDonald experienced the difficulty of working against psychology. He needed four on the par four home hole to tie.

His drive had been pulled into the rough, and his second was a trifle off the line and came to rest on the side of a steep bank to the right of the homegreen. To get his stance, the Scot from Buffalo had to stamp a place for his feet on the side of the trap, and he further had to be careful, for a sand pit was immediately underneath him.

Yet he clipped the shot out handsomely, caught the roll of the green, and came within an ace of winning the title when the ball trickled past the lip of the cup, coming to rest within three feet of it. He coolly holed the putt.

The best score of the day went to Macdonald Smith, the former title holder, who got a 70 in the afternoon, going out in 33. This earned a ten-dollar special prize for Smith, who up to that time had not been able to show anything like his true form. Nicholls with his 71 in the morning won $10, and he also won another ten-spot for getting the best thirty-six-hole score of 145.

A GENUINE EYE-OPENER FOR PARKER FIELD LEAGUERS

The Laurels and the Red Stars will engage in combat Monday, Parker Field being the scene of the activity. These two teams have always been the backbone of the Parker Field League, the Laurels being three-time pennant winners, with the Red Stars runners-up in each case. However, the Stars' lineup has been greatly strengthened by the addition of a new star, "Bill" Dodd. He is touted as a comer and much is expected of him.

The Laurel clan needs no introduction to local fandom, three of the members being City Leaguers. They are "Art" Kyle, the P. H. S. and T. A. B. star; "Kid" Brennan, T. A. B. shortstop, and "Polly" Snyder, the Hope Chapel outfielder. Butler and Venable, two Royal Giant recruits; Frank Mullin, the fastest infielder in local juvenile baseball circles; Boos, T. P. H. S. man, and "Count" Trotter comprise the rest of the Laurel roster.

The Red Star list includes the names of Vincent Mullin, a very clever fielder; Burke, "Bill" Reasoner, the Junior League "Ty Cobb;" "Axle" Brandt, Kennedy, Vail, Kane, Marsh, Russel and Alfred. Managers Burke, of the Stars, and Kyle, of the Laurels, intend entering their charges in the Parker Field Senior League.

EASTERN TENNIS STARS PLAN INVASION OF WEST

San Francisco, July 10.—The first big tennis tournament of the season began today on the asphalt courts at the Exposition, with the strongest eastern players lined up with the coast stars. R. Norris Williams, of Philadelphia, national singles champion; Watson H. Washburn, of New York; George M. Church, of Princeton, the intercollegiate champion, and Dean Mathey, of New Jersey, have come for the tournament. The team matches between the East and the West will be four singles and two doubles, the Coast team to be selected from McLoughlin, Murray, Johnston, Strachan, Fottrell and Bundy.

Will Tackle New York Semi-Pros in Sunday Afternoon Attraction.

Jimmy Monahan's T. A. B. S., not content with stacking up against the hardest proposition in the City League this afternoon, has contracted to battle with the New York Senators at Avon Park tomorrow afternoon. The Senators are advertised as being one of the strongest semi-pro outfits in the Metropolis, but Manager Monahan believes that his youthful battery, Lawton and Kyle, can check the stars.

"Tone" Denny will probably tackle first; Geary, second; Brennan, short, and McCarthy, third, for the T. A. B. S., while the outfield positions will be cared for by F. Lawton, Jack Denny and "Russ" Day.

The New York manager has not announced his line-up, but has promised to present a very strong one.

Hostilities are scheduled to commence at 3:30.

SPORT BRIEFS

Disbrow and Kline favorites for 100-mile auto race at Brighton Beach racetrack tonight.

Gilbert Nicholls and Robert G. McDonald tied for metropolitan golf title.

Ralph Grunan and Joe Azatedo, two prominent California lightweights, were matched last night to meet next Wednesday at the St. Nicholas A. C.

Homer Baker, the national half mile champion, to defend his title at the championships to be held at the San Francisco Exposition the first week in August.

New York Giants secure First Baseman George Kelly, of the Victoria Club, of the Northwestern League.

St. Louis Browns send Ernie Walker, outfielder, to Rochester Club, of the International League.

Umpire Orth hurt his bad knee in Philadelphia-Pittsburgh game yesterday.

Arthur Lovibond reaches final round in North Side tennis championship singles.

Carman Dider and Wiley in big 30-mile motor paced race at Sheepshead Bay Velodrome tonight.

Bob Burman won the 100-mile auto race on half-mile track at Burlington, Iowa.

BIG AFTERNOON FOR DUNELLLEN SPORTDOM

The Plainfield Juniors go to Dunellen this afternoon to engage in an exhibition of the national pastime with the Boy Scouts of that place. The athletic meet scheduled to be run off on Independence Day and postponed on account of inclement weather, will be held at Maurer Oval this afternoon.

A ball game between the local doctors was billed, but it has been announced that the Plainfield Juniors have been carded to take the place of the physicians.

APPLICATIONS WILL BE TAKEN FOR BADGES

Boy Scout Council Will Meet in Y. M. C. A. Monday Night.

The regular meeting of the Boy Scout Council will be held at the Y. M. C. A. parlors on Monday evening at 8 o'clock, at which time applications for examination in merit badges will be received and examination dates set. It is expected that a tentative draft of the Scout Championship Competition to be held on Columbus Day, October 12, will be submitted to Council that evening. Mrs. Stephen G. Van Hoesen, district agent for the American Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, has offered a prize for the best demonstration of the bandaging and care of wounded animals by boy scouts.

There will be an important announcement made at the meeting on Monday night regarding a further acquisition to the equipment of the local Boy Scout movement through the generosity of men interested in seeing the work among boys in this city and vicinity developed. Scouts having compositions in course of preparation for the camp cooking outfit offered by Mrs. Stephen G. Van Hoesen on the definition and application of the sixth scout law, have until Monday evening, August 9, to file their papers.

LOCAL ANGLERS CAUGHT 382 POUNDS OF SALT WATER FISH

That weakfish are running well in Great Kills, off Staten Island, is the opinion advanced by a quintet of Plainfield nimrods who visited that watering place yesterday, bringing back a mess, composed largely of weaks, weighing 283 pounds. Included in the party were "Doc" Whelan, P. A. McVoy, Frank Langhorne, Charles Hall and "Pop" Thorn.

Included in the array of prize finny specimens were 155 fish, "Pop" Thorn hooking the first one which weighed 3¼ pounds.

tive. It behooves us, therefore, to await patiently developments and it is safer to regard our success as a clever manoeuvre which has appreciably improved our position, but not decided the issue in the Vistula-Vieprz theatre of war."

Paris, July 10.—Checked at every point where they have launched mighty counter attacks, and swept from one of their strongest positions in the Vosges by an irresistable French charge, the Germans are bombarding the Allies' positions all the way from the coast well into Alsace today with their heaviest artillery.

The Allies are returning the fire with just as much spirit and, according to latest despatches, honors are apparently even.

The Germans continue to throw shells into Arras and are directing their strongest attacks between the Oise and the Aisne and between the Meuse and the Moselle.

French troops are extending and organizing the area of the positions they wrested from the Germans in the Vosges and are forcing the fighting at most of the important points to suit themselves.

Advices containing details of the fighting of the last few days around Ypres, the key to Flanders, show that the British have inflicted frightful losses on the German troops opposing them in that district, and that for forty-eight hours the men battled with hand bombs.

The French war office statement issued this afternoon says:

"In the region to north of Arras a few attempted attacks by the Germans were repulsed last night. At the labyrinth there was a fight with grenades. In Lorraine a battalion of the enemy attacked our positions near Laintrey and was repulsed. There is nothing to report on the rest of the front, except some artillery engagements, particularly in the forest of Apremont, at Le Pretre forest and at La Fontenelle.

"Our aviators yesterday bombarded the railway stations at Arnaville and Bayonville, as well as the military barracks at Norroy, dropping 22 bombs and 1,000 arrows."

Rome, July 10.—Victory for the Italians in the great battle which has been in progress for a week on the Carso plateau is near, despatches from points near the front state. In the last two days the Italians have pushed ahead and have taken a number of Austrian positions. The correspondent of the London Daily Chronicle at Chiasso has telegraphed that a decision in the battle is likely within twenty-four hours.

Reinforcements are being hurried to the Austrian lines, which are wavering. It is reported that some of the fresh troops on their way there are from the Galician district. A message from Insbruck states that Austria realizes Italy has the upper hand in the engagement and that only the swinging of great numbers of reinforcements into line can save the forces there.

A victory on the Carso plateau will expedite the advance of the Italians on to their objective, Trieste. By gaining control of the plateau they will virtually have the key to Trieste and also be in a position to cut the only remaining railroad running into Gorizia, which is being attacked by the Italians. The interruption of rail communications would enable the Italians to practically starve out the enemy.

HAVE HEARD NOTHING OF FIRE SPREAD ON MINNEHAHA

SEMI-BUNGALOW DESIGN. NO. D-1306

A semi-bungalow and selected because it suggests how, by combining two harmonizing materials, low cost and attractive effects can be had for a small cottage. The house is absolutely simple. The brick work, capped with a course of headers under the sill line and in pleasing contrast with the stucco above, is practically its only ornamentation.

The floor plan suggested for this elevation shows a very pleasing arrangement of rooms. The living room, dining room and hall are of ample size and with the large connecting archways, open up into practically one large room. The pantry is unusually well provided with dresser space for a house of this size. Four steps to a door on the main stair landing provide convenient passage from the pantry to the front door and the three second story bedrooms. There is a full basement under the entire house.

The estimate cost of this semi-bungalow is $1,525, exclusive of the heating, plumbing, electric work and decorations. Price of plans and specifications, $15.

ONLY FIVE PERMITS GRANTED BY DOANE

Mid-summer Quiet Evidence in Local Building Activities.

Only five permits were granted by Building Inspector T. O. Doane this week. One was for a dwelling, three for garages, while the fifth was for the installation of a tank to store volatile liquids. The estimated cost of the five jobs is $6,600. All except one building are in the Third ward.

THIRD WARD.

William J. Boyd, of 955 West Sixth street, was granted a permit for the construction of a frame garage, 13x19 feet in dimensions, one story high, on his property. The estimated cost is $150.

James C. Manning, of 1034 West Seventh street, was granted a permit for the erection of a two-story and attic frame dwelling on Sheridan avenue, 337 feet east of Grant avenue. The building will be of frame construction, 38 feet front by 28 feet deep, will have a peaked roof, and will cost about $6,000.

Another garage, also of frame construction, will be built by Peter W. Voorhees, on his residence property, 934 West Fourth street. The garage will be 12x18 feet in dimensions, and will cost $150.

The permit for a tank for the storage of volatile liquids was granted Adolph Tepper, of 669 West Seventh street. It will be a gasolene tank to hold 120 gallons, and will be sunk adjacent to the garage on Mr. Tepper's property.

FOURTH WARD.

The only permit issued for the Fourth ward was to Andrew McCardell, of 518 West Front street, who is to build a garage on his property to cost $300. It will be of cement hollow block construction.

CHARLES A. REED BUYS TRACT AT WESTFIELD

Corporation Counsel Charles A. Reed, of this city, as complainant in the foreclosure suit of Reed vs. Lillian B. La Rue et al, bought a large tract of land in Westfield at sheriff sale this week. The sale was one of the largest foreclosure sales recorded recently in Union county, and took place in the office of Sheriff Otto, in Elizabeth.

The price paid was $25,000, and the property consists of eighty-six lots in the Park Slope section of Westfield, besides eight other lots located at Boulevard and Washington streets. Many of the lots have houses built upon them and are otherwise improved.

Another sale of the week was of two lots at Cherry street and Clay avenue, Roselle Park, which were sold to the defendants for $3,100 in the foreclosure action of Josephine Senf against the Mulford Coal and Lumber Company, William W. Van Wagner et al.

PROSPECTIVE DEVELOPMENT IN CLINTON AVE. SECTION

Den. J. Galbraith, of 605 Darrow avenue, expects to start the erection of at least four one-family dwellings on the tract of land on Clinton avenue which he owns, as soon as he has some business matters, which require his personal attention, out of the way. Several sketches of houses, with all modern improvements and containing many attractive features, have been submitted to Mr. Galbraith by his architect, and he promises that when the houses are up they will compare favorably with anything in the cottage line that has been erected hereabouts lately to sell at a moderate price. Mr. Galbraith's land fronts 600 feet on Clinton avenues, and lies between Clinton place and West Fourth street.

Going to build? See Saturday's Press.

P. FRANK STONE'S NEW RESIDENCE

Ground Broken for Handsome Colonial Dwelling on Stelle Avenue.

Work has been commenced on a handsome new residence which P. Frank Stone will erect on Stelle avenue, above Grant avenue. The house was staked out yesterday, and excavating for the cellar will be begun Monday.

Architect Fred L. Lancaster drew the plans, which call for a typical Colonial structure 39 feet front by 28 feet deep, two and one-half stories high, to cost about $6,000. Work will be rushed by Contractor William D. Bird so that Mr. Stone and family may occupy the house about October 1.

The first floor will be divided into a living room 14 feet, 6 inches wide by 27 feet long, containing a large open fire place with a brick breast laid up all the way to the ceiling. A dining room, kitchen and butler's pantry will also be found on this floor. On the second floor will be three sleeping rooms, a bath, a cedar closet and a sleeping porch. The porch will be entered from two bedrooms. The cedar closet will be a feature of the house, for it will be as large as a small-sized room. It will be lined with cedar throughout and will be moth-proof. There will be one finished room on the third floor.

The exterior of the house will be finished in real Colonial style. It will be shingled and painted white. There will be the true Colonial entrance with seats on each side, and on the south end of the house will be the piazza. This will extend two stories and will be built in under the main roof. The second story of the piazza will be the sleeping porch. The cellar will be excavated under the piazza and it will be enclosed in glass so as to be used as a sun parlor in winter.

The house will contain all modern improvements and will be heated by hot water. A garage will also be built on the lot, which is 60x170 feet in size. This will be the second house to go up on a single block on Stelle avenue this summer.

WORK PROGRESSING ON NEW PUBLIC SCHOOLS

The work at the Somerset Public School, in North Plainfield, will consist of enclosing an alcove in the southern end of the building, formed by two wings, and in this enclosed space the new stairways will be built. The adidition will extend three stories high and will be fire-proof in every way. The space now occupied by the stairways will be utilized to enlarge certain class-rooms. Some of the windows will be changed to conform more perfectly with the new State school law. The work will cost, all told, about $9,000.

Plastering is going on slowly at the Harrison School, on which about $27,000 will be spent. Most of the roof is on and workmen are leveling the grounds in preparation for actual grading.

PROPERTY TRANSFERS.

The following property transfers have been filed in the office of the county registrar at Elizabeth:

Jacob Sachar et ux. to Harry Perlman, northwesterly side West Front street, 188 feet southwesterly Grant avenue, Plainfield.

The Knollwood Co. to Robert W. Nelson, centre Radley road, 20 feet easterly James Talcott, Fanwood, $1.

Harriet D. King, to Jennie C. Pope, middle of Sanford avenue, 480 feet northwesterly E. Front street, Plainfield, $100.

Anthony Albert et ex. to Alfonso Sabatino, westerly side Forest avenue, northerly corner Adelia Lyon, Fanwood, $1.

Westfield Real Estate Co. to Peter J. Windfeldt, lots 3, 4, 45 feet of 5, block 2, map of Harrison property at Westfield, $1.

John E. Curtis et al, to Sara S. Hoefler, easterly side Kensington avenue, 475 feet southeasterly E. Seventh street, Plainfield.

Geo. C. Otto to Robert H. Cook, northerly corner West Third street, Plainfield, $1,000.

Peter J. Windfeldt et ux. to Edward S. F. Randolph, northeasterly side Elmer street, 110 feet northerside Lenox avenue, Westfield, $1.

Merchants & Traders Realty Co. to Charles Erickson, westerly side Clark street, 40 feet southerly Harold avenue, Rahway, $1.

Myrtle Gaige Simon et al. to Jack Hallard, lot 2, block A, map of Greycourt Tract, Plainfield, $1.

Samuel Solomon to Charles Krauss et ux., centre of West Fourth street, Plainfield, $1.

Esther Johnson et al. to Fletcher B Wills, Jr., northwesterly side West Eighth street, 320 feet southwesterly Munroe avenue, Plainfield, $1.

New York Suburban Land Company to George Percival Edstrom, lots 8-9, block 32, map of Voorhis & Smith, Westfield and Fanwood, $1.

ANOTHER SOMERVILLE PLANT.

That the Cott-a-Lap Company, which has a large new factory at West Main and Doughty streets, Somerville, is planning to erect another factory building on the borough's property along the Central Railroad tracks, was made known in Somerville this week. The company made an offer to purchase or rent the property in question, and the public grounds committee of the Somerville Common Council has taken the matter up with the concern.

RANDOM NOTES.

James Miniszek is building a pretty residence on Russell road, Fanwood. It will be of frame construction, two and one-half stories high.

Peter C. Van Nuys, a Somerville architect, is drawing plans for a new schoolhouse which the Bedminster Township Board of Education will build at Pottersville. It is hoped to have the building ready for occupancy by September 1.

EXCAVATING CELLAR.

The work of razing the old Gloekler building, Front and Somerset streets, proceeded quietly, but swiftly, without any unnecessary confusion, and now the cellar is being excavated. So far the work has gone forward with little or no hindrance to traffic or inconvenience to the public.

PLAINFIELD CONTRACTS FILED.

The following contracts have been filed in the office of the county clerk at Elizabeth:

Alex. W. Newman with Henry Lelbe, plumbing work new building, Ashwood avenue, Plainfield, $1,475.

Same with Henning Wallin, painting work, $225.

LUMBER PRICES ARE ON INCREASE

Following the Lead of Other Building Materials Sharp Advance is Reported.

LOOK FOR PROSPERITY

Demand for Munitions and Supplies Is Being Met by Manufacturers—Many Contracts for New Work Are Closed.

New York, July 10.—Lumber has begun to follow the lead of other building materials. One manufacturer's agent in New Jersey this week quoted a special shipment made up largely of special building shapes and sizes suitable for speculative building at prices slightly above the June 15 list to a contractor who plans to erect 100 houses in North Jersey, and who has a contract to put up an addition to a machine shop in Brooklyn, specifications for which call for wooden flooring. Coupled with this sale was one reported from Brooklyn for spruce at a higher level than those which had been considered fair market prices up to the first of the month. Even lath was said to be firmer at $3.80. It was said by one agent that he expected a change upward in practically all lumber prices by September 1, running about fifty cents to $1.50. Dealers, in consequence, may be expected to quote supplies to consumers at a slight advance from now on.

Linseed oil continues to move down in price, the quotation at the close of the week being approximately 57 and 58 cents, in large lots. Paint prices have not been affected by this drop, which now amounts to a total recession of ten cents a gallon within the last five weeks. The drop in this respect is more than made up in the increased cost of colors and other paint ingredients.

Pig iron sales are much more brisk, and the U. S. Steel Corporation was reported in the market this week for 15,000 tons of open hearth steel billets. The Carnegie Steel plant is working at 85.5 per cent. of capacity, and some of this is accounted for by recent structural contracts, showing that building operations are beginning to move ahead. Building projects in New York city, as reported up to June 30, show total of $86,027,961 as compared with $71,379,408 in the same period in 1914, an increase in estimated cost of $14,648,553. The number of building projects filed during the same period ending June 30, 1915, was 6,073 as compared with 5,838 in the first half of last year. The total increase in building projects for the entire metropolitan district, including the five counties in eastern New Jersey and Westchester county, in New York, is 2,311, with a total increase in estimated value of $17,116,000. This shows that speculative residential building in the suburbs has not kept proportionate pace with the increase in building construction in the more congested districts.

Illustrating how the demand for war munitions and supplies is being met by manufacturers, it might be stated that steel contracts already let call for structural material for the enlargement of the Fore River Shipbuilding Company, Moore Brothers' plant, Republic Iron and Steel Company, the Miller Rubber Company, the McKeesport Tin Plate Company, the Westinghouse and General Electric Companies and the Standard Oil Company. Other contracts requiring structural steel include a six-story building for the corner of Halsey and Market streets, Newark; a loft building at Twenty-ninth street and Fourth avenue, an apartment house at Seventy-fifth street and West End avenue, New York, taking 1,100 tons of steel; a highway bridge over the Passaic River at Pine Brook, N. J.; an office building at Yonkers calling for 200 tons, and a store for the Balch-Price Company, in Brooklyn, taking 600 tons of shapes. An incidental steel order is one taken by the American Car and Foundry Company, calling for 4,100 box cars for the Russian Government.

Builders say that with American manufacturies developing increasing activity the reflection of this prosperity will be shown in increased miscellaneous construction about the spring of next year. In the menatime increased volume and value of plan filings indicate a gradual improvement in demand for all materials going into general construction and with prices already moving up, it is predicted in some quarters that many other commodities besides Portland cement will be at abnormally high prices after the turn of the year, if, indeed, it does not take place this autumn.

You can't, even through a "For Sale" ad, sell that used article for its original cost, nor near it; but you can get its cash value at the present time for it.

The Week's Work In Brief

Sow beets and carrots for winter use.

Spray melons, cucumbers, squash and other vegetables with both fungicides and insecticides.

Order strawberry plants for delivery next month.

Keep flowers cleanly cut from continuous blooming annuals.

Protect the asters against root aphis by applying tobacco water.

Weed the lawn.

BEETS and carrots for winter use should be sown now. Plant as many rows as your requirements demand. With beets, time can be gained if, for any reason, planting is unduly delayed, by soaking the seed in water over night. If the ground is very dry, plant two inches deep; if moderately damp, plant half an inch shallower. The drills may be no more than twelve inches apart. Scatter the seed thinly. Carrots should be sown in drills one inch deep and a foot apart and the seed should be scattered thickly in the drills as germination is uncertain. When the plants are three inches high, thin to three inches apart. Crowding at any stage of their development injures them and results in an unsatisfactory crop. The seedlings are very delicate and extreme care must be exercised in cultivating up to the time that the tops cover the ground.

These, generally, are critical days for the melons. Spray them with Bordeaux mixture now and again a week later, following this with another spraying ten days later. Squash should be sprayed also with arsenate of lead, an ounce to a gallon. If the borer appears, repair the damage he does as far as possible by covering the vines at the joints with moist earth. This induces them to root at these points and so gain extra vitality with which to resist his assaults.

As onions show signs of ripening, lift them and lay on their sides to dry. If late lettuce wilts in the heat, shade it and keep it well supplied with water.

Strawberry plants for setting out next month should be ordered immediately. Be careful, in making up the list of varieties, to include both pistillate and staminate sorts, or perfect and imperfect. If the latter alone are purchased, or planted remote from the former, no fruit will form. For the home garden, get the varieties that are largest and sweetest regardless of their "shipping" qualities. The earliest sorts are seldom the sweetest and the cheapest sorts are seldom the best. Be sure, in purchasing the stock, to obtain the plants from a reliable dealer who will give you what you order. Making a bed is a matter of too much time and work and waiting to be disappointed finally in the crop through no fault of your own.

Keep the flowers cut cleanly from all the blooming annuals. Failure to attend to this results in the formation of seed pods and the end of the plant's usefulness for purposes of bloom. It is always safest—and essential with sweet peas—to cut the flowers with knife or scissors. An attempt to pull them off frequently results in uprooting the plant, especially those with shallow root systems. Frequent pinching back of the vigorous shoots of geraniums, coleus and other plants set in formal beds will preserve uniformity of height and at the same time produce sturdier and stockier plants. If the aphis becomes troublesome, use a nicoteen spray. Use a tobacco decoction also to destroy the root aphides that so frequently attack the asters. If a commercial solution is not employed, make the tobacco water by steeping tobacco stems in soft water until it is the color of weak tea. Water this well into the soil. Tobacco dust dug in about the plants is also beneficial.

Keep the mower going on the lawn, its blades set two inches high. Let the clippings lie as a mulch. Weeds should be dug out diligently. Go about the work systematically, a section at a time. Have at hand a supply of light, pulverized soil and when a hole is made in digging up the weed fill up immediately with this and seed at once. Bindweed, dandelion and plantain must be taken up to the last minute bit of root. Ground ivy is another troublesome pest—increasing rapidly in recent seasons—and is to be eradicated by tearing it loose from the soil at every point where its creeping stems take root. It has only a weak hold on the soil, but if a single rooted joint remains, the weeding will have been in vain. Chick-weed becomes rampant in mid-July. Fight it by resorting to vigorous use of the rake. Crab grass is a common invader and a destructive pest. It can be eliminated only by carefully digging up every rooted joint—an operation that must be done before it goes to seed. It oftentimes pays to go over a lawn thoroughly with a fine-toothed rake just previous to mowing. Use the implement with determination, combing up every weed encountered, especially those that creep along the surface and root from the joints. Follow this by setting the mower blades a little lower than usual and mow the lawn twice—once east and west, for instance, and the second time, north and south.

ACTIVITY IN MIDDLESEX CO.

The Westinghouse Airbrake Company will establish a new plant near Runyon, in Sayreville township, where material for the European war will be manufactured. The company asked for and was granted permission to extend a railroad switch across a road in Sayreville township near Runyon, at a meeting of the Middlesex County Board of Freeholders this week. The work of constructing the factory will be undertaken at once, it is reported.

SHERIFF SALE IN MIDDLESEX.

Charles S. Maltby and Margaret S. Maltby, of this city, complainants in the chancery suit against the Central Park Realty Company, bought in a property in Piscataway township this week. The property was sold by Sheriff Houghton, of Middlesex county. The decree and costs amounted to $12,116.29, and the property was knocked down to the complainants for $1,000.

HURRYING BRIDGE WORK.

Contractor Arthur E. Smith, who is to build the new Luten reinforced concrete bridge over Green brook, at Grove street, is expected to make rapid progress with the work. He has all the facilities on the ground for hurrying the job, and it is likely that Grove street will not be closed to traffic very long.

Corporation Notice

Notice is hereby given that an ordinance entitled: "An Ordinance to Vacate an Unopened and Unused Street on Property of John Gray, Running Through the Block Bounded by Putnam Avenue, Webster Place and Woodland Avenue, and being the Unopened and Unused Continuation of Berckman Street," a copy of which is subjoined to this notice, has been introduced before the Common Council, read the second time, and ordered engrossed preparatory to its third reading, and that it is the intention of the Common Council to adopt such ordinance at the regular meeting of the Common Council, to be held in the Council Chamber, No. 149 North Avenue, in the City of Plainfield, N. J., at eight o'clock p. m., on Monday, the second day of August, A. D. nineteen hundred and fifteen, at which time and place prior to the adoption of said ordinance said ordinance will be considered by the Common Council, and all persons interested may be heard before the Common Council with reference to the proposed ordinance.

By order of the Common Council.

JAMES T. MacMURRAY, City Clerk.
Plainfield, N. J., June 22, 1915.

AN ORDINANCE

TO VACATE AN UNOPENED AND UNUSED STREET ON PROPERTY OF JOHN GRAY, RUNNING THROUGH THE BLOCK BOUNDED BY PUTNAM AVENUE, WEBSTER PLACE AND WOODLAND AVENUE, AND BEING THE UNOPENED AND UNUSED CONTINUATION OF BERCKMAN STREET

WHEREAS, it appears that the hereinafter described unused portion of the street, which street is particularly described in a return of the Surveyors of the Highway recorded in Book 1 of Road Returns for Union County at page 54 and which appears by the Surveyor's map to have a width of sixty-six (66) feet instead of sixty (60) feet as shown by the return, has never been opened to public use, to wit, the portion thereof hereinafter particularly described; and

WHEREAS, it appears that John Gray is the owner of all abutting lands on said portion of said street, and that he and his wife have applied to the Common Council of the city of Plainfield to vacate said portion of said street; and

WHEREAS, the said portion of said street has not been opened to public use for more than twenty years, or at all, since it was laid out by the Surveyors of the Highway as aforesaid; and

WHEREAS, it appears that the opening of said portion of said street to public use would involve a large expenditure of public funds, and that the opening of said portion of said street to public use would be of no public benefit; and

WHEREAS, all of the owners of abutting lands on said portion of said street have consented in writing to such vacation by filing in the office of the city clerk in the city of Plainfield such consent duly acknowledged as in the case of an acknowledgement to a conveyance of lands; and

WHEREAS, it appears to the interest of the city that such unopened and unused portion of said street should be vacated and the Common Council judges the public good requires the same be done;

The Inhabitants of the City of Plainfield, by their Common Council, do enact as follows:

1. That the unopened and unused portion of said street hereinabove referred to and more particularly hereinafter described, which was laid out by the Surveyors of the Highway by their return dated October 20, 1865, recorded in Book 1 of Road Returns for Union County, at page 54, and which unopened and unused section is particularly described as follows:

Beginning at a point in the centre line of Berckman Street as the same is now laid out and opened, said point being distant one hundred and eighty-nine and one-tenth (189.1) feet in a magnetic course of south forty-two degrees and thirty-seven minutes east along said centre line of Berckman Street from its intersection with the centre line of Webster Place, said beginning point also being in the division line between lands formerly belonging to Evan Jones and Stephen Vail; thence running south forty-two degrees and thirty-seven minutes east through lands of said Vail and J. H. Thomas, now John Gray, a distance of fifteen hundred and forty-six feet, more or less, to its intersection with the westerly side line of Woodland Avenue (formerly the Short Hill Road); said line is intended to cover a portion of the same route as described in Book 1 of Road Returns for Union County at page 54, and is the centre line of Berckman Street (sixty feet wide), ... be and the same is hereby vacated and relieved of the public use and burden pursuant to the acts of the Legislature in such case made and provided.

IN CHANCERY OF NEW JERSEY.

To Charles S. Runyon, Mrs. Charles S. Runyon, Katherine Hodgdon, Henry W. Hodgdon, William Sexson, Elizabeth Sexson, Mary Utter, Samuel Utter, Albert L. Runyon, Mrs. Albert L. Runyon, Smith Gibbons:

By virtue of an order of the Court of Chancery of New Jersey made June 11, 1915, in a cause wherein Lemuel B. Woolston and James F. Buckle, partners in trade as Woolston & Buckle, are complainants, and you and others are defendants, you are required to appear, plead, answer or demur to the bill of said complainants, on or before the twelfth day of August next, or the said bill will be taken as confessed against you. The said bill is filed to foreclose two mortgages executed July 21, 1896, by John B. Mills, Anna R. Mills, his wife, and Francis S. Runyon, one to David A. Depue, of the City of Newark, County of Essex, and State of New Jersey, the other to Eliza Stewart Depue, of the City of Newark, County of Essex, and State of New Jersey, on lands in the City of Plainfield, County of Union, and State of New Jersey, and you, Charles S. Runyon, Catherine Hodgdon, Henry W. Hodgdon, William Sexson, Elizabeth Sexson, Mary Utter, Albert L. Runyon are made parties defendant because you are next of kin and heirs-at-law of Francis S. Runyon, one of the mortgagors who executed the said mortgages, and you, Mrs. Charles S. Runyon, are made a party defendant because you are the wife of said Charles S. Runyon, and you, Samuel Utter, are made a party defendant because you are the husband of the said Mary Utter, and you, Mrs. Albert L. Runyon, are made a party defendant because you are the wife of the said Albert L. Runyon, and you, Smith Gibbons, are made a party defendant because you are the husband of Hattie L. Gibbons, and failed to join in a conveyance of said property to the said Frederick J. Huff.

Of Interest to Women and the Home

ANTI-SUFFRAGE

Conducted by New Jersey Association Opposed to Woman Suffrage.

Of all the women candidates in the State of Washington last November, not one was elected to an important political office. This may explain why Suffrage Day in North Yakima, according to the Republic of that city, was celebrated so quietly on May 1 that not even the keenest news gatherer was able to find any celebration. Apparently it was a day for meditation and not jubilation.

Wyoming has had woman suffrage for over 45 years. There are no dower rights in that State. There is no equal guardianship law. A husband cannot be prosecuted for non-support of his wife. Forty-one States have industrial commissions but Wyoming has none. There is no limitation of the hours of labor for either women or children. Wyoming can hardly be held as a shining example of the good laws in effect under woman suffrage, yet Wyoming is the oldest suffrage State in the Union.

"Very pale and anemic is the suffrage cause in Chattanooga," says the Chattanooga Times of May 7. "Inquiry as to the methods that would be pursued by local Suffragists in the State campaign inaugurated Saturday in Nashville showed that at the present time only five members out of some six hundred or more registered Suffragists in this city were taking an active interest in this particular phase of politics. These five members met at a called meeting Tuesday to discuss affairs of interest to the league, but owing to the absence of a quorum no business was transacted. Chattanooga has been the straw that broke the backbone of the votes-for-women cause in Tennessee, if indications are correct."

By a vote of 140 to 105 the New Jersey State Federation of Women's Clubs at its recent annual session in Atlantic City, rejected a proposed resolution endorsing woman suffrage.

Wyoming, Colorado, Utah, Idaho, Washington and California have had woman suffrage long enough to show good results if it carries them. Arizona, Kansas, Oregon, Nevada and Montana may plead they have not had woman suffrage long enough for it to show what it can do in the way of improving conditions.

"Facts which 'speak for themselves' are that not one State that has had woman suffrage long enough to count can be listed among the ten States having the best State and municipal governments; woman suffrage has not lifted one State or one city into good government eminence; woman suffrage has not saved States and cities from falling into ill repute as badly governed."

"Experience disappoints expectations of great political uplift as the result of woman suffrage."—Buffalo Inquirer.

Iowa, a male suffrage State, has just passed a law to limit the working day of children under 16 to eight hours. Iowa stands among the leading States in Child Labor legislation.

Pennsylvania has passed a Child Labor law limiting the hours a child under 16 can work, to fifty-one per week. Children under 14 cannot be employed except in selling papers, for which the minimum age is 12. Pennsylvania is a male suffrage State.

In North Dakota a Mothers' Pension bill has recently been passed and the age of consent from 16 to 18 years. Not only is North Dakota a male suffrage State but woman suffrage was defeated in 1914 by 19,348 against 40,209.

NOVA SCOTIANS CELEBRATE.

Halifon, N. S., July 10.—The people of Musquodobolt will begin tomorrow the celebration of the centenary of Presbyterianism in that famous valley. Chief Justice Archibald, of Montreal, will take part in the celebration, and other notables will speak. Two historical tablets will be dedicated tomorrow evening, one to the pioneers of the valley and the other to the ministers during the past 100 years. Three days will be filled with home-coming gatherings, reunions, speech-making and rejoicing.

REAR-ADMIRAL RETIRES.

Washington, July 10.—Rear-Admiral Walter C. Cowles, recently relieved from command of the Asiatic Fleet, will be retired tomorrow, having reached the legal age of retirement. Capt. Augustus F. Fechteler, who has been on duty at the Naval War College at Newport, will be advanced to the grade of Rear-Admiral to fill the vacancy.

ITALY'S FINEST REGIMENT.

Rome, July 10.—The most imposing regiment in the Italian army is the Corazzieri, or Royal Bodyguard, every member of which is six feet one or two, while many are far taller. Their wonderful feats of horsemanship are known throughout Europe. Although the crack military order of Italy, the large majority of its members come from the peasantry.

Daddy's Bedtime Story—How Chief Eagle Feather Got His Name.

There Was a Terrible Fight.

"MANY years ago," said daddy, beginning the evening story, "there was a young chief named Eagle Feather, who was very famous among the other Indians.

"The young chief's name was not Eagle Feather to begin with, nor was he a chief. He was a young brave, as the common warriors who were not chiefs are called, and he was in love with the daughter of the old chief of the tribe.

"This young brave loved the old chief's daughter, but she was very proud and never gave him a look. And this was a pity, for he was very straight and brave and tall.

"Other brave young chiefs came to pay this maiden court, but she was coy, and her father was very indulgent to her and gave her leave to marry the man she pleased. And in this he was much more considerate than some old chiefs have been.

"But she seemed hard to please, and the young brave had the satisfaction of realizing that, though she had not looked at him, at least she was marrying no rival of his.

"The tribe dwelt near a very high mountain, and up on a cliff, away above their heads, a pair of glorious golden eagles had built their nest. And by this time the tribesmen knew there were eaglets in that nest. They used to watch the great parent birds circling above it, bringing food to their young.

"At last one day three young chiefs came together to ask for the hand of the old chief's daughter. She looked up at the nest, high above their heads, and said, 'I will marry the man among you who will climb that cliff and bring me a feather from one of the young eaglets to wear in my hair.'

"They were afraid. Then the young brave stepped up and said, 'I am not a chief, but I will go.'

"So saying he set out to climb that cliff. And up he went and up and up, carrying a shield and a knife. And when he had reached the nest he looked ever so little to those who watched below, and he plucked the eaglet feather.

"Then the parent birds, who had come back with some food for the eaglets, swooped down upon him, and there was a terrible fight. But he finally beat off the great birds and gained the foot of the cliff in safety.

"The old chief then made him a young chief and named him Eagle Feather. And the old chief's daughter was very proud and put the feather in her hair and she married the young chief. And they tell us that the pair dwelt happily ever after."

SMOCKS POPULAR AND SMART.

One of the very delightful innovations of the season—one that has proven particularly popular for morning wear at country resorts—is the slip-on smock illustrated above, Ladies' Home Journal Pattern No. 9008. It is made with full length or short sleeves, with or without cuffs and belt, a roll collar and pockets. Sizes 32, 36, 40 and 44 inches bust measure, size 36 requiring 3⅞ yards 36-inch material. Skirt No. 8676, four gored with raised waistline is very smart and goes well with the smock. Sizes 22 to 34 waist measure, size 24 requiring 4⅜ yards of 36-inch material.

Patterns may be obtained at the store of A. E. Force & Company.

WANAMAKER 77 TOMORROW.

Philadelphia, July 10.—John Wanamaker, Philadelphia's "Grand Old Man," will reach his 77th birthday tomorrow. He is hale and hearty, and gives indications of many years of his wonderful usefulness yet to come. He recently led the "trail-hitters" at Billy Sunday's revival, as he did back in the days of Dwight [illegible] He maintains his interest in church work, giving a financial lift here and there, dispensing wealth with a free hand for good causes. His organizing capacity and shrewd judgment are still with him, and is is still an active worker.

Glimpses of Married Life

BY MRS. EVA LEONARD

"Hello, Nell! Welcome home," said Jo Parsons, slipping her arm around Nell as she got off the train. "Dr. Ellson is here with his auto, so come along."

"It does seem so good to be back," Nell exclaimed, giving her friend's hand a squeeze. "Come on, Dick. We're in luck; we're to ride home."

"Good work!" called Dick cheerily. "Here, take the baby while I give the check to the expressman; it will save a trip down here. I'll be along in a minute."

Nell greeted the doctor and the women climbed into the tonneau.

"How did you leave our friends, the Dunns?" the doctor asked.

"They are all right and as charming as ever."

"Charming is right; they are delightful people," replied the doctor.

"Olive is coming on to Fairport for another visit next summer; she likes our little village."

"We are glad of that," chimed in Mrs. Parsons.

"If we could grow a little bigger and have some modern conveniences," sighed Nell. "I shall miss the hot and cold water and the furnace."

Here Dick came up and shook hands with the doctor and climbed in.

"I have everything all nice and warm at your house. Roger started your fire this morning before he went to the office, and I have been over there two or three times today to regulate it and get everything in order." Mrs. Parsons beamed on Nell as she spoke.

"That certainly was kind of you. I was dreading getting things in running order."

"Come in, all of you. It's early yet; let's have a reunion." Dick sprang out and took the baby.

"Is Parsons at home?" asked the doctor. "I'll drive over for him," and he sped away as the party went up the walk.

The fire in the baseburner filled the room with a welcoming glow as they entered.

"It's so good to get home," sighed Nell contentedly. "I think it's the best part of going away. I'll take the baby's things off, Dick." Nell took the baby out of his father's arms.

"Do make yourself at home, dear," she added, giving Mrs. Parsons a kiss as she passed her.

"There come the others," said Dick, throwing open the door. "How are you, Parsons? What have we here?" Mr. Parsons had walked straight to the dining room table and set down a basket.

"Well, the doctor and I knew if we got anything to eat here tonight we'd have to bring it along. This is an old-fashioned basket party. We have been foraging, you see." He lifted the cloth and displayed half a cake, some oysters and a bottle of milk.

"Have they robbed you?" laughed Nell as Mrs. Parsons peeped over her husband's shoulder.

"No," she replied, "unless those are the oysters Roger brought home tonight."

"They are," he affirmed with a grin, "and the other things Dr. Ellson found on his own premises."

"My sister sent them with her blessing," grinned the doctor.

"Why didn't she come, too?" called Nell from the bedroom. "I'd love to see her."

"She had no one to leave the little boy with. She'll come over and see you tomorrow," replied the doctor.

"Now, Jo, get busy and make one of your good oyster stews," suggested Mr. Parsons, turning to his wife. "Morton and I will set the table," volunteered the doctor. "I got him pretty well broken in while you were gone, Mrs. Morton. In time he could learn to be a really useful member of society."

Dick responded with an exaggerated bow.

"Thank you very much for your timely assistance; all such help is appreciated by wives," said Nell gratefully.

Household Hints

PINEAPPLE DISHES

Pineapple Salad—Cut a small pineapple into tiny cubes, mix with one cup English walnuts chopped, and one cup celery cut in small pieces. Place a portion on each salad plate on a bed of shredded lettuce, and pour over mayonnaise mixed with an equal amount of whipped cream. Serve very cold.

Pineapple Cream—Whip one cup sweet cream until stiff. Peel and chop a pineapple, add juice of a lemon and two-thirds cup powdered sugar. Dissolve one ounce of gelatin in a little hot water, mix all lightly together and pour into a mold. When firm, turn out carefully onto dish in which it is to be served.

Pineapple Whip—Grate one large pineapple, sprinkle with powdered sugar, let stand half an hour, then put over fire, with half a lemon and half cup sugar; cook until thick. Beat four eggs very stiff, adding a pinch of salt, then add the hot pineapple a spoonful at a time. Pour into buttered mold and bake in slow oven half hour. Serve with whipped cream.

Pineapple Pie—Grate a large pineapple and mix it with two cups sugar; add well-beaten yolks of three eggs, two tablespoons cornstarch and one and one-half cups sweet cream. Bake in rich crust. Add a meringue made with whites of the eggs beaten stiff with six tablespoons powdered sugar; flavor with pineapple extract. Return to oven to brown slightly.

THINGS WORTH KNOWING

For Growing Girls' Dresses—When making little girls' dresses, allow an extra inch or more on the skirt length and before turning the hem make a tuck on the right side close to the bottom. Lengthen the stitch on the machine and stitch the tuck. When the hem is turned the tuck is on the wrong side and is let out easily when the dress becomes too short.

A dover egg beater will give longer and better service if a drop of olive oil is occasionally put on the pivot at the center of the large wheel which turns the smaller wheels. The cogs on the wheels should be oiled slightly. Do not wash the wheels or the oil will all be removed.

To remove varnish from furniture or woodwork about to be refinished, make a solution of three-fourths part washing soda and one-fourth part lye to one quart water. After using solution, wash off with clear water, leave dry over night, then varnish or repaint. (Do not put hands in solution; tie cloth on stick.)

To Remedy Those Collar-Sawed Shirts—Rip off collar band and rip open shoulder seams. Take in on shoulders. Then trim around to size of collar band. Sew on collar band. Shirt again almost as good as new.

THE TABLE.

Oatmeal Cookies—One cupful hot cooked oatmeal (a leftover reheated), two tablespoons shortening, one teaspoon salt, one cupful sugar, one teaspoonful cinnamon, about two cupfuls flour, one-half cupful halved raisins, one-half cupful chopped nuts, one-half cupful molasses, one-half teaspoonful soda. Mix in order given. Drop two inches apart on a well oiled cooky sheet. Bake in a moderate oven.

Rhubarb Pudding—Make a thick batter as for dumplings. Place a layer in pan, then a layer of prepared rhubarb. (Prepare by cutting up and thoroughly scalding with strong soda water.) Cover with another layer of batter, and steam till done. For a sauce, take sour cream, sweeten to taste and whip. This is a very fine pudding. Graham flour may be used for the batter.

Strawberry Puffs—Take equal parts strawberries and sugar; crush berries and sugar together. (Strawberry butter will do as well.) Grease six cups and set in steamer; put two spoons strawberries in bottom of cups and add two heaping tablespoons of following batter: one egg, pinch of salt, two tablespoons granulated sugar, one cup sweet milk, one heaping teaspoon baking powder, flour to make stiff batter that will not drop from spoon. Steam half hour. Serve hot with cream and sugar.

SCOOP, THE CUB REPORTER — TWO WEEKS IS TOO SOON TO SEPARATE — BY "HOP"

U. S. ASTOR THEATRE

For the first time in the history of Plainfield theatricals, a motion picture actor of high distinction will appear in person at a local theatre and tell the audience his experiences before the camera. Next Monday night, when the feature dramatic photoplay will be "The Sins of the Mothers," in which Earle Williams and Anita Stewart will be co-stars, Mr. Williams will himself appear at the U. S. Astor Theatre and address the audience. He will tell how he left the legitimate stage, for the movies, and how he has become one of the leading men of the Vitagraph Company of America.

Earl Williams, who appears in person at the U. S. Astor Theatre, Monday Night.

Mr. Williams is one of the best known leading men in the motion picture sphere. He will be remembered by Plainfield theatregoers as the star in the thrilling railroad drama, "The Juggernaut," in which a complete train plunged off a trestle. Mr. Williams will tell how this big film was produced and how he came near death when rescuing Miss Stewart in the big wreck scene. He is an engaged speaker and every bit as good looking in real life as in reel life.

The film feature Monday and Tuesday will be "Sins of the Mothers," a story of gambling. The heroine is a beautiful girl, which role is portrayed by Miss Stewart. She loves the races, roulette and all the games of chance. She loves with a passion that is a mania. This craving was born in her. Her mother before her had had the gambler's instinct. She had kept a gambling house.

You see the girl returning from a convent where her mother sent her as a child. You see her about to enter society. She is taught to play cards and her heritage asserts itself. She can't resist it. First it lures her to the bridge tables, then to the races and finally to the notorious gambling house formerly conducted by her mother. You see the interior of the gambling house. You see the raid by her husband, who is the district attorney. He doesn't know she is there. You see what happens. It is quite the most exciting film ever produced by the Vitagraph Company, with the possible exception of "The Juggernaut," the famous railroad drama, and is worthy the patronage of the most discriminating theatregoer. With Mr. Williams in person and this splendid film in which he appears with Miss Stewart on the same program every man and woman and child in Plainfield ought to visit the Astor Theatre, Monday night.

This afternoon and tonight, "The Secretary of Frivolous Affairs," with Harold Lockwood in the leading role will be shown. It is an engrossing film in every respect.

A few dimes may "turn the tide" for you if you invest them in a "Situation Wanted" ad.

INSURANCE THAT INSURES

Most men realize their responsibilities. They know that those whom they support in life must be supported when they are dead, and so they insure their lives. But in many cases they fail to provide for the investing and safeguarding of this insurance fund, with the result that it is often squandered or dissipated.

If you appoint The Plainfield Trust Company as Trustee under your will your insurance money will be invested according to law and your dependent ones will receive an assured income. We consider this matter so important that we have issued a booklet on the subject which will be sent you on request.

SEWAGE DISPOSAL PROBLEM SOLVED BY NEW PROVIDENCE

New Providence, July 10.—The Board of Health has been advised by Borough Engineer William J. Kaufman that the problem of sewage disposal for the Mountain View Park section had been solved, and that all that now remains is to obtain the approval of the State Board of Health.

The plan adopted calls for a 500-gallon tank, in which the sewage will be deposited at the top, forced to the bottom and up again, to be sifted through a screen which will allow the liquid only to pass into a gravel pit built in a concrete vault. The liquid will then filter through the gravel and pass under a partition, and then upward to a tank and a siphon, which will allow 130 gallons only to leave at one time.

The tank was designed by Mr. Kaufman and will accommodate the residences in that locality, replacing four cesspools, which now overflow into the rear of the development. It will be built co-operatively, the property owners having a bid on the work of $325.

VIEWS RELIGION WITH OPTIMISM

Dr. Strong Has No Fear as to Outcome of Struggle Against Wrong.

GOOD TIMES TO LIVE

Union Services Last Night Well Attended—Four Churches Represented and Their Ministers Have a Part—Music a Feature.

The union service last night in the First Methodist Episcopal church was really the first of the summer series, as the service July 4 was given over to the Anti-Saloon League forces. Last night's congregation was a fair-sized one, the four churches in the union plan being well represented. Those present listened to a good sermon by the Rev. Dr. Philip B. Strong, pastor of the First Baptist church, on the optimistic side of present-day religion.

Dr. Strong took for his text part of the sixteenth verse of the sixth chapter of Second Kings: "For they that be with us are more than they that be with them." There wasn't a pessimistic sentence in his whole discourse. He declared that God and right will triumph in the world some day, adding, revently, however, "I don't know when and I don't care."

Permeated with the spirit of the Anti-Saloon League convention at Atlantic City last week, which he attended, the speaker alluded to that gathering in his opening remarks and used that movement against the evils of intemperance as an example of the struggle that is being waged constantly between right and wrong. His arguments were all to the effect that Christianity is not on the wane. He had no patience with those persons who lament the fact that evil exists in the world and sit by with folded hands waiting for the millennium to come and usher in a reign of righteousness.

He challenged his hearers to point to a period in the history of the world in which they could truthfully say that they would rather be living than in the present. He drew a word picture of the times of Christ, when, with the exception of the few followers of the Master, the whole world was in the darkness of sin. He asked his hearers if they would choose the time of Greek philosophers and thinkers, when vice was rampant; the dark ages; the days of the Spanish Inquisition; the times of Wesley; the days of the beginning of educational advantages; the early days of the great discoveries in medicine; the days when slavery flourished; the beginning of the fight against intemperance; even a quarter of a century ago?

Dr. Strong spoke of one great improvement in the condition of mankind following another, and showed that in spite of what pessimists say, the world is getting better and that Christianity is responsible for the reforms. He disclaimed any knowledge as to why God is allowing this world to war, but, quoting from a clerical friend, declares that we measure history by decades, not by centuries, and attempt to judge conditions by the present aspect of things instead of waiting until our vision is made stronger and clearer by the lapse of time.

In the battle against sin mankind has the assistance of good men and women here on earth, the angels in heaven, and God Himself, said Dr. Strong. He contended that the influence and interest a good man has in a friend or relative here on earth is maintained even after death.

Occupying seats on the pulpit last night were the ministers of the four churches holding these union services through the summer—the Rev. Dr. Charles M. Anderson, the Rev. Dr. Charles E. Herring and the Rev. John T. Broek. Mr. Broek offered prayer and Dr. Herring read the scripture lesson. Next Sunday evening's service will be held in the First Presbyterian church. The Rev. Mr. Broek will preach.

AFTER LIGHTLESS VEHICLES.

Another arrest in the vehicle lighting campaign was made by Officer Herrmann, of the North Plainfield police, Saturday night. The offender was Frank Jackson, fourteen years old, of 297 Somerset street, who was driving a wagon without a light at 8:30 o'clock at night. Sentence was suspended upon him this morning when he was arraigned in court.

BROKE HIS PROMISE.

William Rains, colored, 62 years old, of Plainfield, was arrested by Officer Herrmann, Saturday night, in North Plainfield, charged with drunkenness. Chief Marshal Weiss released the man yesterday morning upon his promise to appear in court this morning, but Rains did not keep his promise.

DEATH SUMMONS MRS. ANNIE RHEES

Sister of C. W. McCutchen Passes Away at Her Home in Brooklyn.

Word was received in this city today of the death in Brooklyn yesterday of Mrs. Annie McCutchen Rhees, widow of the late John Evans Rhees, which occurred at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Edward St. John, 2619 Bedford avenue, Brooklyn. She was in her eighty-fourth year.

Mrs. Rhees was a daughter of the late William M. McCutchen and resided with her father in North Plainfield for many years. She took up her residence in the borough about 1867 and lived here until about 1895, when she removed to the home of her daughter in Brooklyn.

Mrs. Rhees was a sister of Charles W. McCutchen, of 21 Rockview avenue, North Plainfield. A son, Dr. Rush Rhees, is president of Rochester University. Her only remaining near relative is her daughter, Mrs. St. John.

While a resident of this city Mrs. Rhees was prominently identified with the First Baptist church and maintained an interest in religious and philanthropic work to the time of her death. From 1884 to 1886 she served as vice president of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society, of the First Baptist church, and was on the board of managers from 1886 to 1897. While a resident here she was also greatly interested in the work of the Plainfield Relief Association.

The funeral will be private from the home of her daughter.

INJURIES FATAL TO JOSEPH SHEA

Brother of Daniel Shea Loses His Life in Effort to Save His Hat.

Daniel Shea, of this city, returned home this morning from Crystal Beach, Ont., where he went last week to attend the funeral of his brother, Joseph Shea, aged 27 years, who died as the result of an accident. Mr. Shea was employed at a park concession at Crystal Beach. He was badly injured at the Amigari crossing of the Grand Trunk Railway on Wednesday evening, July 7, and his legs were so badly mangled that amputation would have been necessary, failed to survive and he died on the day following the accident.

Mr. Shea was attempting to prevent his hat, which the wind had blown off, to get away from him. As he made a clutch for the hat he overbalanced and made a vain effort to retain his footing on the vestibule of the coach on which he was returning to Buffalo from the Fort Erie race track and which, as usual, was so crowded as to make standing necessary. The young man was born in Buffalo and was well liked. He was a noted baseball player, having played on several teams near his home city.

TABLES TURNED BY COURT WHEN ACCUSER LOSES HEAD

"If youse don't take care of her Jedge, there won't noththing be left for nobody but an undertaker when I'se finished wid her." Such was the word of warning handed out by Elizabeth Outlaw, colored, of West Third street, when she appeared against Violet Turner, a colored neighbor, to press a disorderly charge this morning.

"That threat will cost you $3," replied Judge DeMeza, and as the complainant liquidated the necessary sum to secure here liberty she bemoaned the fact that she was not given an opportunity to impress her words on the woman she had made defendant.

The feud between the two women came to a head Saturday afternoon when they met on West Third street and indulged in a hand-to-hand combat. According to the complainant the Turner woman beat and scratched her and the Outlaw woman is said to have used a little hair-pulling to ward off her assailant's attacks. In passing sentence on the complainant and dismissing the charge against the defendnt, Judge DeMeza warned both that a second appearance before him would mean a sojourn at Elizabeth.

DEATH OF CHILD.

Godfrey R. Carey, the seven-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Moses Carey, died early this morning at the home of his parents, 313 Filmore avenue, after a lingering illness. The funeral will be held Wednesday afternoon at 3 o'clock at the house, with interment in the Methodist cemetery.

SUFFRAGE SPEAKER APPEALS TO CROWD

Mrs. Helen Hoy Greeley Gives Stirring Talk at Open-Air Street Meeting.

A large and apparently interested gathering of men and women congregated at Park avenue and Second street, Saturday evening, and listened attentively for over an hour and a half to an exponent of "Votes for Women." The meeting was in charge of the Equal Suffrage League and the speaker was Mrs. Helen Hoy Greeley, of New York city. Mrs. Greeley, who is a graduate of Vassar College and a practising lawyer, has been heard before in Plainfield, but was considered at her best Saturday evening.

Her logical presentation of the cause and the spirit of fairness which characterized all she said, appealed especially to the men in the audience and was received by them with enthusiasm. Mrs. Greeley went over very clearly the change in the status of woman since the middle ages. As she said, "It is too terrible to go back further than that." She frankly admitted the weaknesses of women and pointed out how these shortcomings are the natural outcome of man's attitude toward the sex and his treatment of her in the past.

The emancipation of woman was begun when she was given equal chances with her brother for an education and it is too late now, even if it were desirable, to force her back into the old position of dependency upon the male sex. As Mrs. Greeley said, "Giving to her rights and responsibility of citizenship is only the next logical step and it is bound to come. If it does not come to the women of New Jersey this fall they will go right on working with the same earnestness until they have overcome a little more prejudice on the part of the voters."

The burden of the whole address was a plea to the men to hear both sides of the subject; to read and study and then to vote intelligently and according to the dictates of their own consciences.

"We are not out here," continued the speaker, "to beg votes or to buy votes, but only to ask for a fair consideration of the subject and we are willing to rest our cause on that."

Mrs. Greeley spoke from an automobile which displayed the yellow banners and members of the league, wearing "Votes for Women" sashes were in evidence. In two or three instances there members were accompanied by their young sons who are enthusiastic rooters for the cause.

FRANCIS J. WALSH DIES FROM SHOCK

Employe of Pond's Shop Suffers Paralysis as the Result of Fright While at Work.

As the result of a shock which paralyzed him when a heavy hammer fell near him, while at work in the Pond Tool Machine Company, two weeks ago, Francis J. Walsh died last night at his home, 684 West Third street. He was fifty years old and had worked in the local factory for the past eleven years, where he had a host of friends and associates.

Beside his wife, he is survived by three sons and four daughters. These are: Peter J., Francis L., Edward B., Ella A., Florence M. and Francina Walsh, and Mrs. Joseph Stavish, all of this city. Mr. Walsh also leaves the following brothers and sisters: Rev. Michael A. Walsh, of St. Mary's church, Yonkers, N. Y.; Thomas E. Walsh, Mrs. M. Dumphy, Mrs. P. J. McElroy and Mrs. J. D. Barrett, of New York; Bernard R. Walsh, of Garwood; Peter J. Walsh, of Seabright; Patrick Walsh, of Ireland; Miss Mary Walsh, of Westchester, N. Y.; Mrs. Frank Boylan, Mrs. John Lennon and Mrs. Thomas McEntee, of Ireland. His father, Peter Walsh, also lives in Ireland.

The funeral will be held from the late home Wednesday morning and at 10 o'clock from St. Mary's church. Interment will be in St. Mary's cemetery.

A Wise Investment.

The young man who early in life takes shares in a building and loan association, by the time he marries will find that he has enough saved to finance the construction of a home of his own. If his lot is paid for he can usually arrange a loan to construct a house. The Union Building and Loan will open its 88th series tonight. Its office is No. 146 Park avenue. Ten shares will cost you $5.00 per month, and in a little over eleven years you will have one thousand dollars in return. If you did not start in the January or April series, why not now? The habit once formed will become a pleasure.—Adv. ***

PILLARS RESUME STREET MEETINGS

"Holy Jumper" Leaders Defy Local Authorities and Continue Open Air Services.

NO PERMIT WAS ISSUED

Speakers, However, Tame in Their Remarks and no Demonstration Results—Police Board and Mayor Heard the Teachings.

Defying the city officials to stop them, a representative delegation from the Pillar of Fire, a religious sect with headquarters near Bound Brook, again took up their program of street revivals here Saturday night, following the interruption caused by an uprising two weeks ago when they were holding meetings in a tent on Watchung avenue. Publicity gained through the sensational climax to their services a fortnight ago caused a large and expectant gathering to crowd around the speakers Saturday night. There was no violence attempted and consequently there was no interference on the part of the police. Should the revivalist speakers make declarations that will serve to arouse the ire of any denomination or race, the authorities will intervene with a view to safe-guarding the public and preventing any such demonstration as occurred previously.

During the course of the speech-making Saturday night, Mayor Calkins, members of the councilmanic police board and other city officials, arrived at the juncture of Second street and Park avenue, where the meetings are held, and careful attention was paid to the words of the "Holy Jumper" advocates. Their alleged utterings condemning other forms of religious worship were not heard by the throng present Saturday night and it was apparent that the speakers chose words that would cause offense to no one.

That there is still a refractory element in Plainfield that is opposed to the teachings of the "Holy Jumpers" was evident Saturday night, but as long as the speakers confine themselves to preaching the gospel and do away with personalities no outbreak is anticipated.

Oliver Wilson, one of the leaders of the sect, called upon Mayor Calkins, Saturday morning, and announced that the Pillars would hold a meeting that night, "permit or no permit." The city executive informed him that they would be accorded the same privileges as any other religious organization as long as they exercised the proper discretion and did nothing that would cause ill-feeling among demoninations of people in Plainfield.

It was noted Saturday night that extra police were patroling the beat in the immediate vicinity of the meeting and plain-clothesmen and uniformed officers, headed by Chief Kiely, were prepared to quell any disturbance.

An interesting feature of the gathering developed when Mayor Calkins' car appeared on the scene with a body of "strong men" seated in it. One of the Pillars, evidently believing that it was a carload of disturbers, immediately established a lookout close by and had several of his fellow-members on guard with him when it was announced that the occupants of the auto were none other than Plainfield's highest executive and the police board.

WOMEN'S LEAGUE PLAN A FINE ENTERTAINMENT

An important meeting of the Women's League of St. Joseph's church will be held in the new social hall tonight, to which all members are urgently requested to be present. The president has several important announcements to make and several matters will be brought up for discussion. After the business session the doors will be thrown open to the friends of the league who will enjoy an interesting program of entertainment arranged by the reception committee of the league, under the leadership of Miss Katherine Conshay and a corps of efficient assistants.

Instrumental and vocal selections, refreshments and dancing will occupy the large portion of the evening. Several noted speakers will address the gathering. Prof. Alfred Squier and his orchestra of six pieces will furnish the music for the dancers.

SPECIAL K. OF C. NOTICE.

At the regular meeting of Watchung Council, No. 552, K. of C., to be held tomorrow evening at 8:15 o'clock, business of importance will be brought up for discussion. All members are requested to be present. Quarterly dues are due at this meeting. The new pass will also be given out. A social hour and refreshments will follow the meeting.

PUBLIC HEARING ON STREET WIDENING

Proposed Improvement to Come up for Discussion in Council Tomorrow Night.

Those interested in the proposition of widening Somerset street, between West Front street and the bridge, will be given an opportunity to acquaint themselves with the details of the proposed improvement at a public hearing to be conducted in the Common Council chambers tomorrow night. Councilman Francis J. Blatz, chairman of the councilmanic street committee, has called the meeting and it is planned to have citizens on hand who have investigated the plans and they will be prepared to answer any questions.

According to the petition presented to the Council at its session, last week, the widening will include a strip of five feet on each side of the street, making the thoroughfare the same width on this side of the brook as it is on the other. North Plainfield recently improved its portion of Somerset street in a similar manner and at the present time the street narrows down to almost an angle as it approaches Front street. Several property owners whose land will be affected by the improvement have announced themselves as being in accord with the work, but it is also known that there has developed an opposing faction that will appear at tomorrow night's meeting to offer objections.

Several years ago the matter of widening this important street was brought to the attention of the Council and at that time it was defeated. The juncture of Front and Somerset streets is the terminal for two trolley lines and is the entry point for farmers and other residents of the mountain section who come to this city to do their shopping. If such an improvement is to be made it is apparent that now is the time to do it inasmuch as there is a large building in the course of construction at the intersection of these two streets and authorizing the improvement at a later date will be inexpedient. The city will divide the expense incurred in widening the street equally with the property owners.

FREDERICK T. JACOBS WEDS NEWARK GIRL

Marriage Took Place at Home of Bride's Aunt Saturday Afternoon.

Miss Elizabeth M. Smith, of Newark, and Frederick T. Jacobs, of this city, were married in Newark, Saturday afternoon, at the home of the bride's aunt, Mrs. Thompson, the Rev. Condit, pastor of the Trinity Reformed church, Newark, officiating.

The bride wore white satin with a veil and orange blossoms, and carried a bridal bouquet of white sweet peas. The bridesmaid, Miss Edna Smith, a sister of the bride, was dressed in pink taffeta and also carried white sweet peas.

William E. VanOrden, of this city, was best man. The flower girl, Miss Ella Alden, preceded the bride and carried a basket of roses and sweet peas. The bridal march was played by Mrs. J. Alden, of Jersey City, accompanied on the violin by her daughter, Miss Priscilla Alden.

After the wedding a reception was held after which the couple left on a honeymoon. Many presents were received, including cut glass and silverware; also several checks. The bride and groom are both popular among a large circle of friends. Mr. Jacobs holds a position with The State Trust Company and is a graduate of the Plainfield High School. They will live here.

NOTICES OF NEW TIME LIMITS BEING ISSUED

Notice to delinquents under the Federal tax laws are being sent out from the Newark revenue office, and it is said penalties will be exacted in cases in which payments are not made within the time extensions allowed. For those who fail to pay the income tax within the time limit set the law provides a penalty of 5 per cent. of the total tax and 1 per cent. a month till payment is made. For all other taxes the penalty is 50 per cent. of the total and 1 per cent. a month.

It was stated at the office of Collector Charles V. Duffy, in the Kinney building, that it was impossible as yet to give out the totals received in the various classes of Federal taxation, as the tabulation of the results required much work and time.

GERMANY'S ANSWER MESS OF VERBAGE

Senator Martine Describes Kaiser's Latest Note as Nothing But Talk.

United States Senator James E. Martine has some pronounced views regarding Germany's latest note to this country, it being his opinion that the Germans are "bluffing" to a large extent. When interviewed at his home on Cedarbrook road, Saturday night, on the subject, Senator Martine said:

"The note is not what we had reason to expect from such a great nation as Germany, to whom this country has shown every consideration and courtesy. Her position is untenable and in every way at variance with that of this country. The note is just one mess of verbage from beginning to end. It is nothing but talk, and does not meet the issue squarely.

"We, as one of the greatest countries on earth, had reason to expect a better answer. However, I have no fear. We are not going to have war with Germany or any other country across the sea. God knows that we don't want it. On my way home across the continent in every city and town I heard nothing but words of praise for the peace policy of President Wilson and they are hoping that nothing will occur to involve the country in war. I sincerely hope that there will be an amicable settlement of all differences between Germany and that the pleasant relations of the past will continue."

CAMP 1, P. O. OF A., INSTALLS OFFICERS

Plans for Annual Picnic at Wayside Park, Dunellen, Are Also Discussed.

The regular business meeting of Camp 1, P. O. S. of A., was held Saturday night, in the rooms in the Babcock building, a large number of members being present. Several important matters were brought up for discussion and preparations were made for the annual picnic to be held August 18 at Wayside Park.

Officers for the ensuing term were installed by District President Mrs. Andrew McDowell, assisted by Mrs. Helen Freeman. Mrs. McDowell installed for the fourth consecutive time. The following officers were installed: Assistant to president, Mrs. Mary Clauson; vice president, Mrs. Peter Johnson; conductor, Mrs. Florence Waldron; guard, Mrs. Agnes Purvoy; trustee for six months, Mrs. Peter Johnson; appointments by the president, chaplain, Mrs. Theodore Van Pelt; orator, Mrs. Ora Eckert, assistant recording secretary, Mrs. Sophie Wagnor; good and welfare committee, Mrs. Theodore Van Pelt, Mrs. H. Freeman and Mrs. Mary Clauson. The offices of treasurer, recording secretary and financial secretary were held over until the next meeting.

Mrs. Helen Freeman was elected delegate and Mrs. Lucreta Smith, alternate, to the next convention, which will be held in New York city in October. On Monday night, July 26, Mrs. McDowell will install officers of Camp 60, of Elizabeth, and at that time will make the appointment for the district meeting. Arrangements were made for a delegation from the local camp to make a visit to Elizabeth on that date.

SPECIAL BOROUGH SCHOOL ELECTION TOMORROW NIGHT

The voters of the school district of North Plainfield will vote at a special election to be held in the Somerset School tomorrow evening on matters of importance to the public schools of the borough. The North Plainfield Board of Education wants authorization to complete the remodeling of the Somerset School.

The cost of the work is not to exceed $3,000 over the amount of funds now on hand, $7,183.59, and to authorize the Board to borrow this $3,000 on notes, to be payable at such times as the voters shall fix. The polls will open at 8 o'clock and remain open an hour, or longer, if necessary.

CAMPERS COMING HOME.

The boys who went with the first section of Y. M. C. A. campers to Camp Wawayanda are expected to return home Thursday, when the second section will go. No official word has been received at the Y. M. C. A. from the campers, but letters and messages to parents and friends tell of the royal time they have had.

WILL NOT HASTEN REPLY TO BERLIN

President and Mr. Lansing to Study German Message Carefully.

ROUMANIA'S ATTITUDE

Germans and Austrians Said to Be Displaying Anxiety For Fear That If She Enters War it Will Stop Munitions Going to Turkey.

Washington, July 12.—Earnest and painstaking study of the German reply is proceeding today in Cornish, N. H., and the State Department here, and not until both President Wilson and Secretary Lansing have thoroughly mastered the document will the Secretary go to the summer White House for a conference. It was declared that the Secretary's departure for New Hampshire would be delayed until the President announced his readiness to receive him and discuss the answer. It was admitted on the highest authority that the reports of an early reply to Berlin were without foundation.

"Just when Washington will transmit a new note is not yet indicated. But inasmuch as President Wilson has not seen fit to hasten back from Cornish it is generally assumed here that several weeks will pass before the note is sent.

Plainer than ever does it appear today that the United States and Germany will not come to blows, provided the German policy in fact refrains from further outrages of the Lusitania sort.

President Wilson at Cornish is considering the nature of the new note. He is expected to confer with Secretary Lansing this week and will probably return for the cabinet meeting Friday. This plan, however, is not a final one.

That the President and Secretary Lansing in the new note will not go to the point of terminating the diplomatic exchanges, but at the same time will adhere squarely to the position taken in the June 9 note is the understanding here. The new note will not be intended to force a rupture.

Germany, it is expected, will be given to understand that the consequences she took in the Lusitania case will be serious. The German proposals for insuring safety of American passengers will be treated as not adequate, since in fact, they concede practically nothing to this country.

Paris, July 12.—Austria and Germany are displaying marked anxiety as regards the attitude of Roumania, says a despatch to the Echo, from Salonika. The necessity for the Teutonic nations to send a renewed supply of arms, ammunition and supplies into Turkey makes it imperative for them that Roumania maintain its neutrality and permit the passage of shipments.

German troops have won another victory at Souchez, but an attack of the Kaiser's forces in the Woevre region has been repulsed at every point by the French, the War Office announced this afternoon.

The statement says:

"There was great activity during the night upon various portions of the front. In the sector of Arras the enemy after having launched a large number of asphyxiating projectiles attempted toward midnight to the south of Souchez an attack which failed. A second attack about 2 a. m. permitted him to occupy the cemetery and some sections of the trenches immediately adjacent.

"A very desperate battle with hand grenades took place in the closely situated trenches to the southeast of Neuville-St. Vaast without appreciable gain on either side.

"Upon the plateau to the north of the Oise (region of Queennevieres and De Nouvron) the bombardment on both sides was particularly violent.

"In the Argonne there was fighting with bombs and mines, in which our artillery joined.

"In the Woevre the enemy violently cannonnaded Fresnes en Woevre with projectiles of all calibres and attempted several attacks, one near Saulx en Woevre, the others in the forest of Apremont at Vaux Fery and the Cow's Head. They were everywhere repulsed.

"In the Vosges the Germans exploded a mine in the proximity of our positions to the southwest of Allertswiller, then delivered a strong attack with several companies which was thrown back with important losses. We made some prisoners."

Berlin, July 12.—The German war statement issued today says:

"The Western theatre of war on the northern slope of Hill No. 69, part of the English position has been blown up. There was fighting at close quarters. On the western boun-

MISS HETFIELD DIES IN HER 58TH YEAR

Former Resident of Dunellen Passes Away at Her Home in Newark.

Miss Anna Hetfield, aged 58 years, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Ogden M. Hetfield, of this place, died early yesterday morning at her home, 459 High street, Newark, where she lived with her sister, Mrs. Hattie Mellick. Death was caused by heart disease. The deceased had been confined to her bed suffering with this trouble since the afternoon of June 15. She was taken ill on a trolley car while on her way home from the Fifteenth Avenue School of Newark, where she had taught for the past twelve years.

About fifty years ago the family came to Plainfield from Illinois where they had lived a few years, and where the deceased was born. After a residence of four years at Plainfield the family moved to Dunellen which was then New Market and they lived in this vicinity until the death of the father, O. M. Hetfield, in 1908. Mrs. O. M. Hetfield had preceded her husband in crossing the great divide by ten years, dying on July 4, 1898.

Miss Hetfield received the first part of her education in the village school in this place. It was her ambition to be a teacher and she prepared to enter the State Normal School at Trenton, where she later graduated, in the High School at Plainfield.

She accepted her first position as a teacher at Newtown about 35 years ago. Before accepting her last position as teacher at Newark she taught at Caldwell and Montclair.

The deceased was a regular attendant at church and at the time of her death was a member of the Presbyterian church at Newark. During her occasional week-end and summer visits at Dunellen she always attended the local Presbyterian church. She enjoyed the sermons of the local pastor, Rev. E. R. Brown, very much, and Mr. Brown will be the officiating clergyman at the funeral service which will be held at the home of her brother, W. R. Hetfield, 371 North avenue, on Wednesday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock.

The deceased is survived by three sisters, Mrs. Theodore Miller, of Waldron, N. Y.; Mrs. Hattie Mellick, of Newark, and Miss Mellie Hetfield, of Plainfield, and a brother, W. R. Hetfield of Dunellen.

Mrs. Joel Giddes, of Lincoln avenue, visited her son, Arthur W. Giddes, at Port Richmond, S. I., recently.

JUNIORS INSTALL.

The following officers will be installed at the weekly meeting of W. C. Holton Council, Jr. O. U. A. M., to be held tomorrow evening: Elwood Gary, past councilor; Edward Shively, councilor; Fred Gary, vice-councilor; Otis M. Webber, recording secretary; Fred Vail, financial secretary; John Peters, Jr., conductor; Henry Kirchner, Jr., warden; Harry Dodwell, inside sentinel; William Shively, outside sentinel, and Elwood Gary, trustee for one year.

Mrs. Fred Vail and children, of North avenue, are visiting Mrs. Vail's parents at Dover, and Mr. Vail returned from a week-end trip there last evening.

Judson Vliet, of Front street, visited his father, Jacob Vliet, at Asbury, yesterday.

Mr. and Mrs. Corwin Apgar, of Washington avenue, visited Mrs. Apgar's parents at High Bridge over the week-end.

Mrs. Harriet Humpston, of Point Pleasant, a former resident of this place, is visiting her son, Robert Humpston, of Plainfield.

J. Russell Garretson, accompanied by Jeremiah Flaherty, last last evening for Niagara Falls. They expect to be gone a week.

John Egan, the popular flagman at the Prospect avenue crossing of the New Jersey Central, had Saturday and yesterday off and spent the time in visiting friends in New York and Brooklyn.

William Gill, of Bayonne, who formerly resided here, spent yesterday in the borough as the guest of John Kane, of Prospect avenue.

Mrs. Thomas Beck, of Jackson avenue, is doing well following an operation at the Brookside Sanitarium, Plainfield, three weeks ago and she expcets to be able to leave the institution this week.

Edward Krinic, of Front street, spent the week-end at Bloomsbury visiting his father, Martin Krinic.

Leslie Latham, of Grove street, has left for Belgrade, Me., where he will spend his annual three weeks' vacation.

Mr. and Mrs. Merwin H. Fagely, of New York city, formerly residents of this place, were visitors here over the week-end.

Mrs. oJhn Thauler and children, of Jersey City, are visiting Miss Anna Renouf, of Grove street.

Mrs. Ida M. Giddes has returned to her home at Philadelphia after spending a week in the borough the guest of Mrs. Joel Giddes, of Lincoln avenue. Mrs. Giddes' daughter, Helen, who accompanied her here, will remain here for the remainder of her school vacation.

Mamie Gary, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Elwood Gary, of Dunellen avenue, is spending the summer at Pattenburg, Hunterdon county, the guest of her uncle, A. B. McCrea.

Mr. and Mrs. William W. Giddes, of Lincoln avenue, were recent visitors at Manasquan.

T. W. Day, Jr., of Front street, resumed his duties this morning as fireman on the 8:19 express out of this place after being incapacitated for a little over a week with rheumatism.

'Plains & Fanwood.

The annual setto of the married and single men of the borough was staged on the Park avenue diamond Saturday afternoon, and, while it terminated in defeat for the younger men, it brought out some classy playing and good baseball. The benedicts applied a 7 to 0 coat of whitewash, being helped by a number of fumbles by the single fellows. Storr decked the mound for the marrred men and showed some of the twirling that made him well-known in the baseball circles of the Northern part of the State a decade ago. Carrona held up the other end, but couldn't locate the platter and had poor support. William Taber's work at second and Councilman Cressy's cavorting in the outfield were exceptionally good, while Taber led with the stick, scoring three of the runs on four wallops. Councilman Nichol garnered two runs, the other two being made by Lambertson and Bonnell. The line-ups: Married men—Lambertson, c; Storr, p; Bonnell, 1b; Taber, 2b; Nichol, ss; Ford, 3b; Hand, cf; Ward, lf; Creesy, rf. Single men—Becken, 3b; Barrett, cf; Carter, 2b; Kyte, 1b; L. Lambertson, lf; J. Lambertson, c; Palmer, ss; Carrona, p; Lidgate, rf. A chance will be given to get even at a game to be played in two weeks.

What will probably be the final arrangements for the "community picnic" will be made at a meeting of the committees and those interested to be held in the lecture room of the Baptist church tonight at 8 o'clock. From what has already been made public the affair ought to be a real success, as, besides Governor Fielder as the principal speaker, a brass band will be present and an athletic program and other pleasures are being arranged for.

Mr. and Mrs. M. W. Hyer, of North avenue, are enteraing Mrs. Hyer's sister, Miss Florence Quinn, of Indianapolis.

Bradley Barrett, of Westfield road, is enjoying a two weeks' vacation from his position with the Western Electric Company, of New York.

The Christian Endeavor Society of the Plainfield Methodist church held a picnic on Saturday at Camp Endeavor, which opened on the mountain in back of the 'Plains last week for the summer season. The trip was made to Scotch Plains by trolley, then the distance to the camp was walked. Everyone brought their own lunch and an afternoon of pleasure was had at the camp, where the first batch of children have arrived for a two weeks' outing.

Miss Anna Lou Outwater, of Tilliston road, is visiting the Misses Todd, of Bellevale, N. Y.

John Todd, a former resident, but who now makes his home at Bellevale, N. Y., is in the borough, where he will spend some time with Robert Kyte, of Martine avenue.

Miss Winifred Titus, of Plainfield, has been visiting Miss Claire Hall, of South avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas, of Brooklyn, are registered at the "Homestead," Martine avenue, for the summer.

Although James McDonough has finished taking the census in the borough and Charles French likewise in the township, they are unable to make public any figures until after the State authorities have acted. It is known, though, that both places have grown since the last census in 1910, the borough nearly doubling in population as the result of the building boom it has experienced in the last four years.

The Misses Estelle and Florence Barry, of Westfield avenue, have been spending several weeks at Wallkill, Ulster county, N. Y.

MANY RELIGIOUS WORKERS AT SCHOOL OF METHODS

A number of the prominent Sunday-school and religious workers have enrolled for the course now being presented at the Asbury High School by the School of Methods, under the direction of the State Sunday-school Association of New Jersey. The opening session of the Superintendents' Conference was held Saturday. The school sessions will continue until next Wednesday.

Among the superintendents who spent the week-end in Asbury Park submitting important questions for decision were George E. Hall, of the Temple Baptist Bible school, and Arthur M. Harris, of the First Baptist Bible school, of this city.

REV. C. S. GILLESPIE HEARD BY LARGE CONGREGATION

An unusually large congregation attended the service at the Grace M. E. church last night, when Rev. C. S. Gillespie preached from the text, "God, I thank Thee that I am not as other men are." Luke 18:11. The self-righteousness of the Pharisee was brought down to Twentieth Century life in a most practical and forcible manner. The topic of "A One-eyed Sinner" was given as the up-to-date name for similar characters of this day who have an eye only for the faults of others. Notwithstanding the summer season, the enthusiasm of Grace church seems to continue.

The Sunday-school, although changed to the morning, maintains an attendance of about 200. The mid-week prayer meeting keeps to about 100. Mr. Gillespie is to be out of town Wednesday evening. Miss Emily Marsh will conduct the service. The topic for next Sunday night will be "Thieves and Robbers."

Y. W. C. A. NOTES

The order of exercises for the week at the association is as follows:

Tonight—Swimming class meets in High School pool.

Tuesday—Recreation night at the association. All members are invited.

Thursday—Bible class meets. All attendants will bring suppers at 6:30 and will eat them in the garden at Mrs. Mead's home on East Front street. Miss Harriet Mattison will have charge of the Bible study this week.

Saturday—Supper for business young women. Meeting of orchestra.

ELKS ARE FLOCKING TO PACIFIC COAST

Jersey Delegation Due to Arrive at Lost Angeles Tonight.

Los Angeles, Cal., July 12—"Hello Bill" is on the lips of everybody in Los Angeles. Elks are in evidence everywhere. Every train coming into the city brings more and more of them.

All trains are met by a reception committee, a corps of Elks in cream white suits, and a band playing "You're Welcome Back to California," written in honor of the Elks. Automobiles are provided for the women of the parties, while the Elks "hoof it." The Jersey City delegation will arrive in a special train tonight at 6:30. The Newark "Bills," 125 strong, reach the city over the Santa Fe at a later hour.

The visiting Elks were guests yesterday and spectators in the staging of the new photoplay, "Carmen," and Jerseyites need not be surprised to see familiar faces in the picture representing the days of old Madrid, in which a real bull fight is produced. Geraldine Farrar appeared in the character of Carmen, which she has made famous in grand opera. Senor Tomas Ibarra, imported from Spain, combatted two Chihauhua bulls. Today every Los Angeles Elk who owns a machine appeared at Central Park and all Elks were privileged to "hop in" and ride as far as they liked.

CANNOT DISPENSE LIQUOR AS MEDICINE

New Law Will Govern Druggists After January 1, 1916.

Whiskey and brandy cannot be dispensed as medicine after the first of next year. In consequence every druggist in the United States, who proposes to sell either intoxicant after that date, will be forced to take out a license as an ordinary liquor dealer, paying the usual retail dealer's tax and putting his place under all the local and State excise regulations.

This situation is brought about by the revision committee of the United States Pharmacopoeia to drop both whiskey and brandy from the publication. The elimination of the intoxicants from the book has the effect of withdrawing recognition of them as medicines. The Pharmacopoeia is the official publication for the country and nothing which is not listed therein can be sold as medicine.

According to those familiar with the arguments put forth in the discussion at the Pharmacopoeial convention in Washington, one reason for the change is the growing tendency of physicians not to prescribe liquor as medicine. Representations were made that very few prescriptions from physicians for liquor are ever taken to drug stores. It was asserted that the recognition of whiskey and brandy as mecidines has had a tendency to make the drug store a "blind tiger." This is especially true in "dry" territory.

YALE WEEK AT THE FAIR.

San Francisco, July 12—Yale men, past and present, are the centre of attraction at the big Exposition this week. Gathering today from far and near, the Yale men opened headquarters for a jolly good time during "Yale Week," with reunions and entertainments.

BIG CARGO FOR ITALY.

Boston, July 12—The Italian steamer Verona will leave here today for Italian ports with a big cargo of supplies for the army, and with a large number of reservists gathered here from all sections of the United States.

PYTHIAN KNIGHTS AT ASBURY PARK

Annual Field Day on Wednesday at the Shore to Be Big Affair.

The Knights of Pythias of New Jersey and from a number of States will be largely in evidence on Wednesday, at Asbury Park, on the occasion of the big Pythian Field Day. Special trains from all sections will roll into Asbury Park on that day and unload hordes of enthusiastic Knights. Specials will run from Allentown, Pa.; Philadelphia, Pa.; Trenton, Mt. Holly, Plainfield and Bound Brook, Newark, Hoboken, Jersey City, New York, Brooklyn and many other sections.

All specials will be provided with bands of music. The Knights, after enjoying a good time at the shore, will join in the "rainbow" parade in the evening. Many enjoyable treats are promised during the day. At 1 p. m. the Rathbone Bible class will be held at the Asbury Park Casino. Many candidates will be presented for initiation in this class. Each lodge in the State is trying to go on record by having one or more candidates for this occasion. At 2:15 p. m. the Uniformed Rank, K. of P., will drill for prizes, and at 4 p. m. a special grand lodge session will be held in the Asbury Park Auditorium, when the grand lodge rank will be conferred on all past chancellors. Special Jersey Central Railroad trains will leave Jersey City at 8:11 a. m.; Jackson Avenue station, 8:15; Broad Street, Newark, 9:00, and Elizabethport, 9:15. Returning trains will leave Asbury Park at 8:30 and 11 p. m.

U. S. ASTOR THEATRE

Earle Williams, the most popular motion picture actor in the world, will appear in person for the first time on any stage since his entrance to the "movies," at the U. S. Astor Theatre tonight. Mr. Williams, who has long been a friend of Frank P. Hall, proprietor of the Astor, will deliver an address about his experience before the camera and tell of his life before he became a "movie" idol. This is the first time in the history of local amusements that a motion picture actor of Mr. Williams' prominence has appeared at a theatre in person. Mr. Williams, like his co-star, Miss Anita Stewart, with whom he appeared in "The Goddess" and "The Jaugernaut," has a host of admirers in Plainfield and it is safe to say that all will turn out tonight to greet him.

Mr. Williams is the leading man of the famous Vitagraph Company of America, makers of some of the biggest motion pictures ever produced. He is a native of California, and a nephew of James Paget, one of the most noted actors of the past generation. He entered theatrical work as a boy in New Orleans, and later was with Miss Rose Stahl in "The Chorus Lady," and juvenile in Mary Mannering's "Glorious Betsey." He joined the Vitagraph Company to while summer idleness away, and has remained to become an international favorite. In addition to the appearance of this famous young man, "The Sins of the Mothers," a drama of powerful theme, with Mr. Williams and Miss Stewart as stars, will be shown, together with a supplemental program of extraordinary quality. This picture is adopted from the $1,000 prize scenario recently submitted in the contest conducted by the New York Sun. It is a photo drama of engrossing interest throughout and the popular stars are seen at their best. Altogether it is a program of the highest merit that will be presented at the Astor Theatre tonight.

OPEN AIR SERVICE.

The open air services of the Park Avenue Baptist church held Sunday evenings on the lawn adjoining the church are growing in numbers and interest. The attendance last night, in spite of the threatening weather, was very large and the meeting one of marked interest and helpfulness. The grounds are now lighted sufficiently to enable the congregation to use hymn books and last night a spirited service of song preceded the talk by the pastor, Rev. Birney S. Hudson. Irving Manley sang with splendid effect "The Ninety and Nine."

REV. DR. STRONG WILL TELL OF BIG CONVENTION

The Rev. Dr. Philip B. Strong will make his report of the Anti-Saloon League Convention at Atlantic City last week, to which he was sent as a delegate from the First Baptist church, at the Wednesday evening prayer meeting. Dr. Strong was greatly impressed with the magnitude of the convention, the enthusiasm manifested and the great results being accomplished, and alluded to it in his morning sermon yesterday. He will no doubt present a very interesting and optimistic report.

His sermonette yesterday morning just before the sermon, was to the young people of his congregation. Dr. Strong related an incident of the convention, the singing of one of the convention songs, "The Walls of Jericho," which he described with interesting exactness. Additional anecdotes of the convention may be expected Wednesday evening.

PROBING DOUBLE MURDER.

Pensacola, Fla., July 12—A special Grand Jury convenes today in Santa Rosa county to hear the evidence against the three Roberts brothers and N. Mitchell, the four alleged murderers of Peter Weyman and his wife. A visit was made by State Attorney Stokes to the scene of the crime, where he heard the statements of all the witnesses. Upon his return he secured the order for the special Grand Jury. If true bills are returned the men will be placed on trial at once.

UNION COUNTY COURT OF COMMON PLEAS.

Notice of Hearing Objections to Assessments For Street Improvements in the City of Plainfield.

Andrew J. Gavett, Vincent W. Nash, Jr., and Frederic E. Mygatt, the Commissioners appointed by the Union County Court of Common Pleas, by order entered on the thirtieth day of April, 1915, to estimate and assess benefits conferred by the permanent street improvements in the City of Plainfield, under the ordinances of said city specified in said order, said ordinance being also hereinafter specified, and the character of the work and improvements for which said assessments have been made and a description of the sections of the particular streets and avenues thereof which are included in said assessment, being as follows, viz.:

Geraud Avenue, from the northwesterly curb line of West Front Street to the bridge over Green Brook;

Monroe Avenue, from the macadam on West Eighth Street to the center of Sherman Avenue;

West Fourth Street, from the macadam on Clinton Avenue to the City Line;

under the ordinance of said city entitled, "An Ordinance for the Permanent Improvement of Certain Streets and Portions of Streets of the City of Plainfield, with permanent and durable macadam pavement, and to provide the Necessary Funds in advance of the Collection of Assessments for Benefits," Approved July 6th, 1914, which ordinance was adopted under and by virtue of the Act of the Legislature entitled: "An Act to authorize the improvement of streets and highways in cities of this State, and to provide for the payment of the expense of the same, and for the assessment of the benefits of such improvement upon the land and real state benefited thereby," approved July 13th, 1898, and the amendments and supplements thereto, having made and filed in the office of the clerk of said court, a report in writing of their estimates and assessments, accompanied by surveys and maps prepared by the City Surveyor under their direction, showing lots or parcels of land and real estate peculiarly benefited by such improvements, respectively, the total cost of the whole work upon each of the sections of said streets or avenues improved as aforesaid, under the aforesaid ordinance the portions assessed upon the City at large, and the names, so far as ascertained, of the owners of the said lots or parcels of land and real estate, and the amount of the assessment to each owner for each of said lots or parcels of land and real estate for the said benefits, and the excess thereof to be paid by the City at large, and raised by general tax, and the other matters required by said acts of the Legislature, by reference to said report and maps more fully and at large appear.

Notice is hereby given, that said Union County Court of Common Pleas has fixed the 30th day of July, 1915, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, or as soon thereafter as the Court can attend to the same, at the Court House in the City of Elizabeth, as the time and place for hearing before said court any objections that may be made to such assessments, when and where all parties may be heard, and has directed the publication of this notice.

JULY 12TH IN HISTORY.

100 B. C.—Birthday of Julius Caesar, Roman emperor.

1566—First stone of the walls of the Tuilleries at Paris, laid.

1776—Lord Howe arrived at Staten Island with 30,000 troops, chiefly Hessians, to aid his brother, General Howe.

1796—U. S. Consul at Algiers secured freedom of 94 prisoners taken from American vessels.

1798—Malta surrendered to Bonaparte by Knights of St. John, who had possessed the island for 270 years, raising it from destitution to wealth and luxury.

1804—Alexander Hamilton died of his wound received in duel with Aaron Burr. America thereby lost its most valued adviser, on whom Washington depended for advice on civil and military matters.

1817—Henry D. Toreau, American author, born. He died in 1862.

1894—England offered to settle to Japan and China, to end the Corean dispute.

1914—Died, Justice Horace H. Lurton, of the U. S. Supreme Court.

Plainfield, N. J., July 12, 1915.

TEACHING CHILDREN TO PLAY.

Occasionally we hear complaint by an ill advised citizen, that our taxes are too high because the city is aiding many activities which should not expect municipal support. Some people even criticize the continuation of the present splendid playgrounds, on the theory that every child knows how to play, and it is all nonsense to spend so much money to teach them what they already know.

Perhaps an investigation by the Russell Sage Foundation, into the amusements of school children, provides the best proof of the necessity of continuing the splendid work in this city, and extending it to communities where such centers have been neglected. The investigation in question was conducted in Springfield, Illinois, which the foundation considered a city were average representative conditions can be found, of course excepting the very largest communities and the smallest towns.

One of the first things learned was that the old fashioned games are no longer popular. Leap-frog, hare and hounds, duck on davey, prisoners base, and the other things that amused most of the present middle aged and older generation are no longer in style. In fact only one boy in a thousand had ever heard of these games and he had been raised in a country village.

The only pastimes reported by more than twenty per cent. of the younger classes in the schools were baseball, kite flying, reading and moving pictures. Of these the movies were the favorites. High school students were even more devoted to the movies. Of the boys in the high school eighty-six per cent. attended the movies regularly; of the girls eighty-four per cent. were habitual patrons. Regardless of sex, half of the students danced, most of them patronizing public dance halls.

It is obvious, of course, if reliance is to be placed on the result of the investigation, that open air games are no longer popular. About the only healthful, active game played it seems, is baseball. Kite flying is not bad, but it is hardly vigorous, and it requires by far too much of a stretch of both fact and fancy to call dancing a muscle-building pastime. The new recreations in fact, call nerves and emotion into exercise rather than muscles. They make for physical and, very likely, for moral flabbiness. If the Sage foundation is sure that Springfield is the average in this respect it has uncovered its facts none too soon. They demand grave reflection.

It's tough work getting out a newspaper these days. The reporters in their rambles and the office force as they look out of the window think of the fellow who is on his vacation, and what they will do when they get off for a couple of weeks a little later. The mind rambles to the time when the whole family will pile into an automobile or a trolley car, ma and pa and the kiddies, with brimming full lunch baskets; or to the time when the single men will be escorting their best girls to Coney Island or Asbury Park or some other nearby resort. Every Thursday when the excursions leave the North Avenue Station, the thoughts of those behind are on the one who is fortunate enough to get a "day off" for a dip in the briny. It's certainly lucky that little that is "big" breaks in Plainfield in July and August. We're afraid that full justice could not be done to it.

Only nineteen mosquitoes were captured throughout the county in forty fifteen-minute collection periods on Wednesday night of last week by a squad of fourteen inspectors of the Mosquito Extermination Commission, according to a report by Chief Inspector Gies at a meeting of the board Tuesday afternoon. Mr. Gies stated that the extermination work has been unusually successful so far this season, despite the frequency of wet weather, and that few complaints have been received.—News Item.

It's a cinch that if the inspectors worked in Plainfield they had their eyes shut and were too tough skinned to be nipped.

If the prediction is true that Plainfield has gained about four thousand inhabitatnts since the 1900 census, as has been intimated, we are fortunate. In nearly every city in the state where the figures have become known, disappointment has been expressed over the small gains made, few if any places reaching a ten per cent. increase. 4,000 more inhabitants in Plainfield would mean practically a twenty per cent. gain over the 20,550 recorded in 1900.

Recent developments at the new postoffice have lead more than one person about town to inquire when is sand not sand, and when is a brick not a brick. The government has a very watchful inspector on the job, and from rejections he has made it is evident that he was very much needed.

The chilly weather has given what swimmin' holes there are nearby here a rest that they have never before enjoyed in July. What's happened to all the good old fashioned summer weather, anyway?

Too bad a few of those circuses that appeared here in the rainy spell do not show up about now. They might get a good days' business in Plainfield.

THE FORUM

Editor, Plainfield Daily Press:

It was very good of you, unsolicited, to mention my seventy-eighth birthday in The Daily Press of today. At present I can only say, thank you. Please pardon me if I tell your large circle of readers that I don't know the taste of intoxicating drinks, or tobacco. I often tell people, "that I neither drink, smoke, snuff, chew or swear." I take a cold bath mornings summer and winter alike, and over fifty years I have tried to do as well as teach, "Jesus Christ and Him crucified." "Go thou and do likewise."

ALASKA COPPER YIELD.

Seattle, Wash., July 12.—The production of copper in Alaska will this year reach the phenomenal figures of from $20,000,000 to $25,000,000, it is estimated from the production to date. The value of Alaska's entire output last year was only $3,365,000. The value of the shipments now runs upwards of two millions a month. The richest copper ore in the world is being worked in the country back of Cordova. The high grade ores of the region run about $225 to the ton. Many new mines are opening up, inspired by the higher price of the metal. Every copper property in Cordova is running full blast and there is not an idle man in the section. As soon as coal is available, through the building of the government railroad, an immense smelters will be erected at Cordova.

CUT OUT PARTY MUSIC.

Toronto, Ont., July 12.—The only change the Toronto Orange order is making in its celebration today is to eleminate party tunes. During the parade the only music played will be hymns and patriotic airs. There has been no thought of following Ulster's example and doing away with the parade, which is a fixture here.

YOUNG PEOPLE TO MEET.

The Young People's Society of the German Reformed church will meet tomorrow night in the parish house on Duer street.

JAILERS MAY THANK THEIR LUCKY STARS

Fear That "Ice-Wagon" Connors' Plan Would Materialize Causes Action.

Elizabeth, July 12—When Charles, alias "Ice Wagon" Connors, left the county jail Saturday manacled and under the close guard of George C. Otto, the sheriff, and Constable Harris, there went with him the fear of a general jail delivery which the authorities have reason to believe would have resulted had the notorious gem thief remained much longer a prisoner in the institution. Unquestionably the "master mind" of the jail, Connors has kept the authorities on the qui vive for months.

Several months ago, shortly after he was brought here from Chicago charged with robbing the home of Ernest R. Ackerman, former State Senator, in Plainfield, of gems worth $17,000, the jail warden discovered a plot for a wholesale delivery and frustrated it. Connors was believed to have been the brains bock of the scheme. Two weeks ago Warden Johnston discovered a rude bag dangling from the end of a string outside Connors' cell window. The bag was made of two towels and dropped outside the window by Connors.

Hugh Kelly, now in jail as his accomplice, is alleged to have obtained the two hack-saws found in the bag. With these Connors planned to saw the bars of his cell. Howard Good, another young man and a pal of Kelly's, pleaded guilty Friday to conspiring with Kelly for the escape of Connors.

Upon examination of Connors' cell after he had left for State Prison to start serving his sentence of not less than three and a half and not more than seven years, the jail authorities came across some ingenius tools, including a handle fashioned from a scrub brush, which the burglar no doubt intended to use for the hack saws found in the bag, several nails, a small penknife and a small bag, apparently made from a pocket cut from the prisoner's trousers.

Connors was awakened at 5:30 o'clock Saturday morning, and shortly after 6 o'clock was speeding in a Pennsylvania train for the State Prison at Trenton. He had been in jail pending action on his appeal from the conviction. Word was received only Friday that the Supreme Court had upheld the conviction and Sheriff Otto lost no time in hustling Connors off to Trenton. The sheriff, apparently, did not care to be responsible for him any longer than necessary.

Connors was convicted solely on fingerprint evidence. Marks left by him on the porch pillars of the Ackerman residence were responsible for his conviction. His trial brought to Elizabeth some of the most celebrated Bertillion experts in the country.

PERSONAL.

Mr. and Mrs. Willard H. Cook, recently of Jersey City, have removed to their former home at 222 Morris street, this city.

Miss Frances Newman, of Duer street, spent the week-end visiting relatives in Brooklyn and Sheepshead Bay.

Mr. and Mrs. P. K. Dilts, of Jackson avenue, are spending the week at Ocean Grove.

Mrs. J. Davis, of Boston, will spend several weeks with her sister, Mrs. Kalman Rothberg, of Madison avenue.

Mrs. Henry Kramer, of New York city, is spending the month of July with her son, Herman Kramer, of Elmwood place.

WINE GROWERS AT FRISCO.

San Francisco, July 12.—Eastern, Middle Western and foreign delegates to the International Viticultural Congress reach this city today after inspecting the grape-growing sections of the state. Several thousand vineyard men were present when the Congress opened today. A special exhibit has been arranged, to show all phases of the wonderful development of the wine industry in the United States. It was the spirit of the Congress that the fermented juice of the grape should be the universal table drink. On Wednesday the Exposition will celebrate "Wine Day," in honor of the visitors. Wines of all the world will be served at the various national pavilions and state buildings, and unique exercises will be held at the "Grape Temple."

KNIGHTS OF KHORASSEN.

Asbury Park, July 12.—The Knights of Khorassen, 12,000 strong, from all sections of the country, have pitched their tents here for the imperial palace session. The Khorassen Knights are a military and dramatic organization of the Knights of Pythias, and many leaders of the Pythian orders have come to the session. The features of the convention will be drills by uniformed companies for prizes amounting to $6,000. The opening of the big convention today was a scene of splendor. Mayor Clarence E. F. Ketrick welcomed the visitors and Grand Chancellor J. G. Baird, of North Carolina, responded. The Imperial Palace session will continue until Saturday.

MANY LOCAL PEOPLE VISITED THE SEASHORE

Hundreds Flock to Points of Interest Over the Week-end.

Ideal weather conditions for week-end outings prompted hundreds of Plainfielders to seek the seashore resorts Saturday and yesterday. While the Atlantic coast watering places were favored by a majority many went to Staten Island and inland lakes and mountains. The trains bound for the seashore were filled with week-end excursionists and those coming in late last night and early this morning brought many a weary traveller.

Today was blue Monday, and the lowering clouds were not the sole cause for the weary atmosphere. Many there were who dosed on office stools or typewriters to reflect on the strenuousness of the week-end and to wonder whether or not these kind of outings really paid. Adding to the general complaint of weariness was the discomfort that came as an aftermath of lolling under the rays of Old Sol. There was a general response to the roll call for sunburn victims. All hands, from the boss down to the office boy were willing to admit that they really felt the effects of their outings both in pocketbook and ambition.

Asbury Park seemed to be the center of attraction for Plainfielders seeking the seashore yesterday. During the morning hours dozens of Queen City residents bathed in the surf at Fourth avenue and acquired what sunburn they could up to the time the beach patrol ordered all out of the briny deep to give Neptune his weekly half holiday. The Mermaid that left here at 2:13 Saturday afternoon carried over fifty local recreation seekers who dropped over at points of interest between Matawan and Point Pleasant.

Raymond Randolph, of West Front street, spent the week-end at Long Branch as the guest of Charles Wendell, formerly of this city; Cornelius Regan, James C. Carroll, Guy Snyder and David Wardrop visited Keansburg; Miss Helen Brynairski, Miss Frances Newman, Miss Dorothy Stelle and Harold Davis were seen at Sheepshead Bay; Mrs. Frank Rowley, of Grove street, spent Sunday in Rutherford; Samuel Rothberg, Harry Rothberg and Miss Sadie Rothberg visited Staten Island; Mr. and Mrs. James Nash, Miss Rose Nash and James J. Nash spent yesterday away from home, and many others took similar outings.

Three excursions went via the Central Railroad to Asbury Park, giving this resort a week-end population that was several thousand above normal. Ocean bathing was at its best and scores took a number of interesting side trips in autos and other simveyances. Knights of Pythias from this city and county, and from all over the State, will pilgrimage to Asbury Park for the annual convention Wednesday and the advance guard was out strong yesterday.

WILL OF ROBERT H. COOK IS ADMITTED TO PROBATE

The will of the late Robert H. Cook, who died in this city June 25, was filed for probate in the office of the Union county surrogate in Elizabeth, Saturday. It names Charles S. Cook, a son, and Ida B. Cook, a daughter, as the executors. The only other survivor is the widow, Mrs. Mary E. Cook. The value of the estate is not mentioned in the document filed with Surrogate Parrot.

Mr. Cook was well known in this city and for many years he was engaged in the lumber and coal business with his brother, A. D. Cook. His estate is said to be a large one and consists of considerable realty in this city.

dary of Souchez we are making progress. The much fought for cemetery of Souchez, south of the road to Arras, is again in our possession. It was captured last night by storm after a fierce struggle. Two French officers, 153 men, four machine guns, and one bomb thrower was captured.

"At Combres and in Ailly forest the enemy commenced an attack last night, after a strong artillery preparation. Near Combres the enemy succeeded in penetrating our lines, but were driven out again. In Ailly forest the enemy's infantry attack broke down under our fire in front of our position. North of the hill in the Ban De Sapt sector the section of the forest has been cleared of all our enemy."

DEATH OF INFANT.

The funeral of Gilbert Cartwright, the eight months' old son of Mr. and Mrs. John Cartwright, of West Sixth street, who died at the home of his parents, yesterday, will be held at the residence tomorrow night at 8 o'clock. Private interment will take place Wednesday morning in Hillside cemetery.

Miss Lottie May Geiger, of Atlantic City, is spending the month of July with her aunt, Mrs. F. S. Moore, of Park avenue.

SCOUT WARNING FROM COMMISSIONER

Boys Are Cautioned About Starting Fires in Underbrush or the Woods.

Scoutmasters within the Plainfield jurisdiction were warned today by Commissioner Allen E. Beals against permitting their scouts to build fires in the woods or in any place where underbrush might communicate fire to standing timber and against permitting their scouts to appear in parades, or in any capacity whatever in their scout uniforms in furtherance of any commercial enterprise. Troops having fife and drum equipment are prohibited from parading as scouts or permitting any part of the equipment owned by a scout troop, or bearing any insignia of the Boy Scouts of America, from taking part in any such enterprise. The penalty for violation of this rule is courtmartial and possible censure or dismissal.

State Fire Wardens have recently captured a number of boy scouts in the woods making ready to take their scout tests for cooking and preparing to compete for making fire without matches. These boys have been fined for various amounts. The extreme penalty is $50 per person. Scout masters communicating with the commissioner will be advised regarding proper action to take to avoid danger of violating the law.

When the Plainfield Boy Scout Council meets tonight matters relating to the establishment of a summer scout camp will be taken up and applications for merit badge examinations will be received. The commissioner will address the scoutmasters on "Keeping the Boys Interested."

JOURNALISTIC OPINIONS

What Do You Know?

Do you know that an editor or a reporter for a newspaper can in his rounds stop and ask a hundred persons "what is the news?" and ninety out of the hundred will reply "Nothing special,' and yet 50 out of that number know something that, if not found in the next paper, will astonish them greatly and disappoint them more, and perhaps make them madder than hornets. Don't be afraid to let the newspaper man know it.—Westfield Standard.

Go to Church.

Changes in the habits of people are noticeable with the recurrence of the hot weather. Many who during the cooler seasons of the year are regular in attendance upon divine worship and active in the work of the church appear to lose their zeal as the temperature rises. Consequent on this and the absence of many of the congregation at seaside and rural resorts, the activities of the churches are reduced to a minimum or totally discontinued.

Rest and change are much desired elements in prolonging health and life, but there ought, however, to be no neglect of religion at any season of the year. Completely to abandon church going is to set a bad example before the rising generations and to instill in them, unconsciously perhaps, a disregard for the higher things in life.

There is no inspiration for the clergy, many of whom are strangers occupying pulpits in the absence of the regular pastor in order to "keep the line intact" in preaching to half empty pews. The strongest speakers with the biggest message are often affected by the meagerness of their audience, hence the loss is twofold. Those who made the effort to attend church fail to get the full effect of the discourse, while those absent lose it all.

If your vacation is spent at the seashore or in the country, make it a point this summer to go to church. Your example in so doing will have a tremendous influence upon the community, while in a more material way the church you happen to attend will prosper. Many of the little churches in the summer resorts depend upon visitors for their maintenance and it ought to be a privilege to help support these outposts.—Newark Evening News.

Borough Treasurer and Collector Isaac J. Stites has long been known as adamantine in his allegiance to the Republican party. Even in the great Bull Moose defection in 1911 and 1912 his faith never wavered. Judge then of the sensation created among local politicians when an article appeared in one of the leading Plainfield publications recently stating that Mr. Stites is a Democrat, and classing him in the same category with Councilmen Castner and Ryan as a Democratic officeholder, whose term expires this year. Many of those who read it nearly expired too, from surprise.

A Call reporter immediately sought out Mr. Stites and attempted to get some verification of the rumor. The popular treasurer, however, would not corroborate the story. He did say, however, that if it were true that he had become a Democrat, that Cashier A. J. Hamley, of the First National Bank, would probably be his opponent for re-election.

The journalist went on his way cogitating. It may be all a misprint on the part of the Plainfield paper, a mere case of misapplied energy in the jokesmith line or—horrible thought—Mr. Stites may be going to enlist on the William Bryan bandwagon—or, perhaps water-wagon would be a better term.

We await further development with abated breath.—Dunellen Call

LIST OF EXCURSIONS FOR JULY AND AUGUST

According to the schedule there are seven more excursions from this city to Asbury Park during the remainder of the season. By a strange co-incidence, there is no excursion on July 22, while there are three during the second week in August.

The next excursion will be that of the Crescent Avenue Sunday-school together with those of the schools of Grace Episcopal, Holy Cross, Heavenly Rest, St. Stephen's, Seventh-Day Baptist, New Market Baptist, Dunellen Presbyterian and Bethel chapel.

The other excursions scheduled are as follows: First Baptist and Temple Baptist, July 29; Knights of Columbus, August 10; Trinity Reformed, August 12; Hope chapel, August 14, and Warren chapel, August 19.

You can't, even through a "For sale" ad, sell that used article for its original cost, nor near it; but you can get its cash value at the present time for it.

RUBAIYAT OF THE EX-FAN.

Myself, when young, did eagerly frequent
The baseball park, where pleasant hours I spent
In hurling bottles, rocks, and other junk,—
Attempting to destroy the umpire gent.

One day the Umpire person threw a fit;
They called a cab and threw him into it.
Then unto me the Manager did yell
"Say, Kiddo, wilt thou Umpire?"
And I bit!

Whereat, some one of the loquacious lot
At my first rank decision waxed hot
And to his Fellow Criminals did shout:
"Let's kill the crooked Geezer on the spot!"

With them the Seeds of Wisdom did I sow;
I tried to bluff—but couldn't make it go;
And when the smoke and dust had cleared away
I found myself and shoulder-blade detrop.

A book of verses, underneath the bough,
Is all the sport my doctors will allow,
And when wild fans approach me I declare
I never cared for baseball anyhow.

MODERN DEFINITIONS.

The Baby.

A baby is a small person about which there is great diversity of opinion. This is because every baby is considered perfect by the parents and a perfect nuisance by everyone else.

There is really nothing new about the baby. Its institution dates back to the beginning of the world, and at that time it was a garden production. The garden idea, however, is now obsolete, and for many years the baby has been grown in the house with early transplantings to the sunlight.

Every baby has a good voice, a distinct resemblance to some rich relative and an afternoon nap. The voice is heard by everyone, but the resemblance is heard chiefly by the rich relative. The afternoon nap is heard of everywhere as being necessary to the baby, but sometimes the nap is more honored in the breach than in the observance. After the nap the baby is unable to understand why it should be expected to sleep again at night, and everyone else is unable to understand why it should want to stay awake. The baby's decision, however, always carries the day—or rather the night.

There are millions of babies, but only two kinds—boys and girls. The boy baby is always the maternal and paternal selection for the Presidential chair, and the girl baby is expected to some day become the wife of a gentle and loving millionaire who will do his best to appreciate her.

Later on the Presidential nominee develops a strong desire to become a motorman, and the future millionaire's wife is seen to blush at the mentioning of the plumber's son. The fond parents sigh gently. In point of looks, likewise, babies generally bear a strong resemblance to their well-financed and unencumbered relatives.

Fashions may come and fashions may go—but babies will always be in style.

DAVID MEMIN SUCCUMBS TO A LINGERING ILLNESS

David Memin, aged nineteen years, of 1238 Fifth avenue, New York city, died at a camp adjoining the Van Ness property on East Front street, Saturday afternoon. Pulmonary trouble was the cause of death. The body was removed to the Mortuary Parlors of J. J. & C. A. Higgins, after which it was shipped to the Cypress Hills cemetery, New York, for interment.

Mr. Memin came to this city about a month ago, and lived in a tent in the open in the hope that a change would improve his health. He is survived by his parents, who reside in New York. Emanuel Kapelsohn, of 1248 West Front street, is an uncle of the young man.

HELEN COX SLIGHTLY INJURED BY AUTOMOBILE

Helen Cox, the twelve-year-old daughter of Mrs. Helen Cox, of 218 Watchung avenue, who was struck by the automobile of A. S. Herr, of the Plainfield Business College, Saturday noon, is getting along nicely, according to the attending physician, Dr Albert Pittis, and will be out in a few days.

Mr. Herr was going north on Watchung avenue and saw several children, among them the little Cox girl, playing in the street near the new postoffice site. He sounded his horn in warning and the children ran out of the way, then Helen Cox stepped back directly into the automobile and was knocked down. She was struck by the fender of the car and the wheels passed over her legs.

Mr. Herr was absolved from all blame in the matter by eye-witnesses. Dr. Pittis was summoned and attended to the child's injuries, which consisted of cuts and bruises. Fortunately no bones were broken.

The Y. W. H. A. will hold its meeting at the High School tomorrow night. A large turnout is expected.

On Wednesday the swimming pool is open for women and all who attend are invited to remain and enjoy an hour in the gym.

ASSESSORS WILL CONFER WITH LOCAL TAXPAYERS

The Plainfield Board of Assessors wishing to give every taxpayer an opportunity to make complaints regarding their assessments for the coming year, has arranged to meet at the city offices on North avenue tomorrow, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday evenings at 8 o'clock. The assessors extend a cordial invitation to all interested to meet them and confer about property valuations before the books are finally approved and sent to Elizabeth.

CHARLES JOHNSON'S FUNERAL.

The funeral of Charles Johnson, who died last Tuesday at Roselyn, L. I., was held yesterday afternoon from his late home on East Seventh street, at 2:30 and at 3 p. m. from the Swedish Lutheran church. Rev. Karl Anderson, pastor of the church, conducted the service, in the presence of a large gathering of relatives and friends. The flowers were beautiful and many. Burial was made in Hillside cemetery.

FIRE IN CLOTHING STORE.

A fire, similar in origin and results to the one in Grover Casahn's South avenue grocery store Friday night, occurred yesterday afternoon about 2:30 o'clock in the clothing store at 514 West Third street kept by Samuel Abrams. Matches, kept under the counter, became ignited in some unknown manner and did about $100 worth of damage before the fire department put the blaze out with chemicals.

Important Announcement

Regarding misleading advertisements.

A certain theatre has billed this city announcing that the Great Paramount Picture — George Beban in comes direct from the Astor Theatre, New York.

THE ITALIAN

So that our patrons and the public in general, may know that this is not true and that our reason for making these facts known is, that there is a great picture produced by the Paramount Company which played at the Astor Theatre, in which Mr. George Beban played the leading role, entitled THE ALIEN.

We don't want our patrons to be misled by the announcements that THE ITALIAN is the picture that played at the Astor Theatre, New York, for the reason that we are going to show the real Paramount Picture that played at the Astor Theatre, New York—

George Beban in
THE ALIEN
Very Soon.

This is not the first time that this company has been obliged to comment on misleading advertisements by other theatres.

At Elizabeth, N. J., where we operate the U. S. Garden Theatre, and had advertised to show "The Eternal City," the Broad Street Theatre, in Elizabeth, came out with glaring advertisements that they would show this big production at their regular price of admission, 5c and 10.

To convince our patrons of Elizabeth that this could not be done, we offered at that time $100 to be paid to any charitable institution, if this theatre could show "The Eternal City" at any price within 6 months.

This theatre has not shown "The Eternal City" and at the present time are not even operating having closed their theatre two weeks ago.

We have, since taking the management of the U. S. Astor Theatre, offered all of the biggest photoplays possible to book, at times at an expense that did not justify us showing these big photoplays at our regular price of admission, but we are determined that the public of Plainfield should see photoplays of merit, advertised truthfully at all times.

It is needless for us to state here that through this policy we have built up a successful business at the Astor Theatre in the short space of four months time.

A word further about Charles Chaplin Comedies.

Our policy in all of our houses has been to show only the latest pictures in which Mr. Chaplin appears.

These pictures are very expensive.

We could book some of the old subjects as low as $3.00 a day and mislead our patrons into believing that they are going to see a new comedy. But we don't believe in these methods.

When we advertise
CHARLES CHAPLIN
In a new comedy
You can rest assured it is his latest picture.

Very shortly
ANITA STEWART
Will appear at this Theatre

W. L. GLENNEY IS P. C. C. CHAMPION

Defeats F. O. Reinhart in the Finals of a 36-Hole Match on Local Course.

SCORE WAS 3 AND 2

O. H. Fleming Scores First Honors for Golf Committee Cup and Wins Sweepstakes—Results of Other Matches.

W. Lester Glenney is golf champion of the Plainfield Country Club, defeating Frank O. Reinhart on Saturday in a 36 holes match in the finals. The first 18 holes were played in the morning at the end of which Reinhart was 1 up. In the afternoon Glenney played better golf than his opponent and got an early lead which he held to the finish. The match in many respects was one of the most interesting of the season. Glenney won the match 3 up and 2 to play.

The honors won by Mr. Glenney were held for four years by his brother, Will T. Glenney, who last year defeated the present holder in the finals. The latter was defeated in the first round of this year's play and by a singular co-incident his brother won the championship.

In the finals of the second sixteen, H. L. Conrad beat J. Whitney Baker, 3 up and 2 to play, while in the finals of the third sixteen F. S. Barr beat Burnett C. Kenyon, 4 up and 2 to play.

In the finals of the defeated eight of the first sixteen, L. G. Carman beat W. M. Alling, 2 up and 1 to play, and in the finals for the second sixteen J. R. Shoemaker beat W. A. Engeman, 6 up and 4 to play. In the finals of the third sixteen, Harry Williams beat A. W. Kleinecke, 1 up.

O. H. Fleming won first honors for the Golf Committee Cup, weekly competition, with the low net score of 65, his gross being 77. These cards were returned:

O. H. Fleming, 77, 12-65; H. H. Craig, 88, 16-72; H. E. Butler, 85, 12-73; Morris J. Dumont, 86, 12-74; J. P. Stevens, 102, 25-77; Burnett C. Kenyon, 93, 16-77; L. G. Carman, 88, 10-78; W. G. Cooke, 96, 18-78; S. T. Perrin, 96, 17-79; W. A. Engeman, 90, 11-79; L. B. Alling, 107, 19-88. The leading scores for the Sweepstakes event were:

O. H. Fleming, 77, 12-65; H. H. Craig, 88, 16-72; J. P. Stevens, 102, 25-77.

DISGRACEFUL TEAM WORK BEATS FRANK KRAMER

Alfred Goullet, who is trying hard to wrest the national cycling championship from Frank Kramer, who has held it for fourteen years, got a step nearer the much-longed-for title yesterday afternoon at the Newark Velodrome, when he defeated Kramer in a one-mile title race. Alfred Grenda also led the East Orange rider over the tape, Kramer finishing in third place and Bob Spears in fourth. Grenda and Goullet won the race by one of the most flagrant pieces of teaming seen at the local track this season, and while the referee disqualified Grenda, who came in second, he allowed Goullet's victory to stand.

Both riders gave Kramer an exceptionally high ride on the last turn of the race, going into the homestretch, and it was practically an impossibility for the American to get by. Grenda did not stick to the pole on the last lap, as he was supposed to, and when he struck the last turn he sent Goullet a trifle high. The blonde Australian made things a great deal worse by making Kramer go within a few feet of the top of the track.

HERE'S A RARE ONE.

Cedar Rapids, Iowa, July 12.—"Fred" Mellinger, of the Cedar Rapids Central Association team, yesterday pitched twenty-four innings, winning a double header with Marshalltown, 4 to 0 and 3 to 2. He shut the visitors out in the first game with four hits and allowed them only two runs on eleven hits in the second game of fifteen innings.

HOLIDAY CUP WON BY R. M. SMITH

Defeats W. P. Taylor in Play-off for Trophy at Park Golf Club.

In the play-off of the tie for the Holiday Cup at the Park Golf Club, Saturday, between R. M. Smith and W. P. Taylor, the former won with a score of 97, 30-67, while his opponent's score was 82, 9-73. H. E. Blazier and W. H. Nischwitz, holders of the Officers' medal, lost to Royle T. Phillips and Charles B. Morse, challengers, 1 up. This is a challenge trophy, the holders being required to meet any team in the order of challenge.

R. M. Smith also won the first honors for the President's Cup, while Harry G. DeMeza and W. P. Taylor won two and one points respectively. These scores were posted:

R. M. Smith, 97, 30-67; H. G. DeMeza, 96, 28-68; W. P. Taylor, 82, 9-73; Walter Whitehead, 93, 18-74; Royle T. Phillips, 90, 15-75; Charles B. Morse, 92, 17-75; R. G. Campbell, 96, 21-75; R. G. Morse, 92, 15-77; A. A. Cannon, 99, 21-78; H. E. Blazier, 88, 9-79; H. H. Woodland, 97, 16-81; W. H. Nischwitz, 103, 20-83; C. J. Hand, 111, 19-92; G. H. Hillman, 135, 38-97.

CLIFF RANDOLPH HAD ONE BAD INNING AND LOST

In a game played at Perth Amboy, yesterday, Cliff Randolph's delivery was nicked for fifteen safeties and the Amboy Pacers were forced to take a 9 to 8 trimming by the St. Anthony clan. Five runs in the third inning gave the winners a lead that could not be overcome.

The score:

LEAGUE MOGULS TO MEET.

Several officials of the National League of Baseball Clubs reached New York last night to attend a special meeting of the league to be held tonight. The purpose of the meeting is to define more clearly the rule adopted this season limiting the number of players to be carried by each club to twenty-one players. Among those who arrived last night were President John K. Tener, of the league; August Herrman, of Cincinnati, and Barney Dreyfus, of Pittsburgh.

CAPTAIN "BILL" SCHOOLEY OUT TO REGAIN HIS TITLE

William Schooley, the former local man, who was beaten by Harry Rohlffs in the hurry-scurry canoeing event at the last Branch Brook Park regatta, will have a chance to regain his lost laurels Saturday, when he meets his conqueror again in the hurry-scurry event.

Besides entering in this section of the day's water sports, Schooley, who captains the crack Tuscaroras, will compete in the fours, while he also is entered in the singles and doubles, the last named being the race in which he and his partner, Burtt, are picked as sure winners.

GILBERT NICHOLS AGAIN WINS "MET" GOLF TITLE

Wild as a Western broncho on the tee, but steady as a dray-horse on the greens, Gilbert Nichols, of Wilmington, the metropolitan open golf champion of 1911, again won that title at Fox Hills Saturday afternoon, in the play-off of Friday's tie with Robert G. McDonald, of the Buffalo Country Club.

By coming in with a 34, one of the finest in journeys of the entire tournament, Nichols, after being out in 39, won with 73, five strokes better than McDonald. If the latter could only have preserved a better balance between the long and short game he would have made a better finish.

McDonald held the lead or was on even terms till the ninth hole, where Nichols for the first time was able to get to the front with an advantage of a stroke. This position Gil held till the twelfth, when the Western New Yorker squared. The next hole proved his Waterloo, for he topped his brassie into the ravine, losing two strokes, and after that it was all Nichols to the end.

The gallery that followed the players was so large that a rope had to be called into use. Fully a thousand golf enthusiasts were on hand to see this match, one of the most interesting in the history of metropolitan golf and one entirely worthy of close study with the aid of the following analysis:

	Nichols.	McDonald

BRICKLEY AT PENN STATE.

Pittsburgh, Pa, July 12.—Charles Brickley, one of the greatest players the gridiron ever produced and who was largely responsible for the brilliant performances of the Harvard eleven during the past four years, will next fall assume charge of football at Pennsylvania State College, succeeding Bill Hollenbeck, famous Pennsylvania University star, as head coach. This is vouchsafed for by one who is well up in State athletics and who is closely connected with the football activities at that institution. A number of Plainfield boys are active in athletics at Penn State.

BILL SEERY REWARDED.

"Seery Day," in honor of Bill Seery, the player-manager of the Singer team, was celebrated at Elizabeth, Saturday afternoon, in conjunction with the Singer-Pathe Freres New Jersey Manufacturers' Baseball League game, which was won by the former team, 3 to 2. Manager Seery was presented with a black leather traveling bag by Commissioner George McMillan, of the Athletic Park Commission, the gift of the Singer team.

FLEMINGTON BEATS PENNINGTON

Flemington, July 12.—Flemington defeated Pennington here Saturday afternoon by the score of 3 to 2. Flemington tied up in the seventh and Bellis lifted one over the centre field fence for the circuit in the eighth frame. The score:

Cleveland, O., July 12.—Joseph L. Birmingham, former manager of the Cleveland American League Baseball team, Saturday filed suit for $20,000 in Common Pleas Court here against Charles W. Somers, owner of the team, to recover salary and damages alleged to be due because Somers terminated his contract, discharged him as manager and released him as a member of the team.

Netherwood Piles Another Defeat on the Cellar Champion.

The First Baptist City Leaguers were defeated by the Netherwood team Saturday afternoon by a score of 4 to 3. Nine errors are charged against them, five of which were made by two new men, who, however, proved themselves very valuable additions to the outfit by getting five of the seven hits made off Stewart.

Patterson allowed the winners only six hits, two of which were doubles. In the fifth inning, by bunching taps and by profiting by their opponents' errors, the Netherwood artists registered three runs, enough to win the game.

"Wren" Townley and Ralph Smalley, two N. P. H. S. cracks, played brilliant games and as a whole the team showed up better than it has ever done before.

INTERESTING RACE FOR TENNIS TITLE

Competitors Fail to Reach Semi-Finals as Expected, But Tomorrow is Close.

Contrary to expectations the competitors in the Plainfield Country Club's open tournament, to decide the tennis singles championship of Plainfield and North Plainfield, failed to reach the semi-finals Saturday afternoon, Beers, Cornwall, Bellows and Day remaining in the running after the completion of the fourth round of play. Some good matches were included in Saturday's program, one of the most interesting features being the defeat of Paul R. Collier, the interscholastic champion. This was accomplished by Tom Day, 3d, who annexed a pair of 6 to 3 verdicts after dropping the first encounter by a score of 6-8. Indications point to a spirited race for the title and those following the play narrow their choice down to Day and Beers for the crown.

Beers has displayed unusual form throughout the early rounds and has had little difficulty in disposing of his opponents. In Saturday's contests he put Aleck Baltzly away by counts of 6-1, 6-4. In the third round Beers was returned a winner against Harold Brown with scores of 6-1, 6-0.

Jack Cornwall had the busiest session of any player Saturday afternoon, engaging in two hard matches and he was handed a default. In the second frame he defeated New Stevenson, 6-1, 7-9, 6-0. In the third he won by default from R. Gough, and in the fourth he defeated W. Williams.

The summaries:

Second round—Jack Cornwall defeated New Stevenson, 6-1, 7-9, 6-0.

Third round—Stanley Bellows defeated A. A. Hassell, 2-6, 6-2, 6-0; A. D. Beers defeated Harold S. Brown, 6-1, 6-0; Jack Cornwall wan from R. Gough by default; W. Williams defeated D. Anderson, 3-6, 7-5, 6-4.

Fourth round—A. D. Beers defeated Aleck Baltzly, 6-1, 6-4; Jack Cornwall defeated W. Williams, 6-2, 6-3; Stanley Bellows defeated E. M. Baker, 7-5, 5-7, 6-3; Tom Day, 3d, defeated Paul Collier, 6-8, 6-3, 6-3.

Besides placing the Hopes in the lead, the results of Saturday's games created a general change in the standing of each of the clubs with the exception of the Baptists, who by reason of another reverse, are still in the cellar. This team was defeated Saturday by genuine hard luck, the Netherwood team marching off with a 4 to 2 victory.

The surprise of the day, however, was the grand revival of spirit exhibited by the Saurer combination, which overcame Lou Brown's Clintonians in a well-played contest. It was either team's game up until the last man approached the plate.

The Tabs dropped and the Hopes immediately assumed the first place responsibility. The Hope victory was not as much of a surprise as some may think, because Dick Schott and his assortment of curves were all "set" for the event. Saurer and Clinton Avenue are now tied for fourth position.

HOPES TROUNCE THE T. A. B. S. COMBINE

League Leaders Displaced by Virtue of Loss Saturday Afternoon.

The Tabs no longer lead the City League, having been defeated Saturday by the Hope Chapelites, the score being 5 to 1. Up until the fifth inning it was either team's game, but in the sixth canto the Chapel boys rushed three tallies over the pan, putting the game on ice and busting up a nice pitching duel between Tone Denny and Dick Schott. Two errors by the Tabs were costly in view of the fact that the hitting power of the team was not such that it could regain the ground lost by the slips. Only five hits were obtained off the delivery of Schott, while Tone Denny allowed eight taps to be garnered off his twirling. There was very little extra base clouting done during the fray, Brennan being the only one to secure a smash of this kind, his wallop allowing him to reach the keystone sack. Jack Denny and Art Grisley were the heavy hitters of the afternoon, each getting two safe blows.

SAURER STOCK TAKES BIG BOOST AFTER WIN

Factory Team Returns to Form and Beats Clinton Avenue Aggregation.

What has proven to be the best game staged in this city in many moons was the Clinton Avenue-Saurer tilt on Parker Field last Saturday, the latter team getting the better end of a 6 to 5 score. Gleason, a product of the local City League, hurled the pill for Martin's crew and only eight hits were made off his delivery. The Clintonians started to get runs as soon as the conflict began, wild throws by two Saurer men and a single by Lou Brown securing the first tally for them. They got two more in the third on a series of wild heaves and two singles. However, the Saurer pitcher came up and lifted the pill over the centre fielder's head, a hit that was good for four bags, but he got barely to second. Huffmeister followed with a triple, scoring the big hurler, but he himself was left stranded on third. In the fourth and fifth frames the shopmen got four runs on three singles and a homer by Britt Martin. The Clintons registered a tally in the seventh and in the first half of the ninth, while the Saurer combination was inactive. But in the last half of the ninthe the Martin men went at it with a will and when two were out and the bags were crowded Lou Dixon came up smiling. Louis singled and the misery was over. "Tush" Jaeger and Lou Brown were easily the fielding stars of the day while "Box" Apgar won much favorable comment by catching in faultless style. Benny Rosenson allowed only seven hits, but still lost his game.

WITH SCORE A TIE; GAME IS FORFEITED

Dunellen Ball Contest Ends in Fracas at the Start of Tenth Frame.

With the score of a most interesting game between the Plainfield Juniors and the Dunellen Boy Scouts, played at Dunellen, Saturday afternoon, standing tie at 10 to 10, Umpire Sheehan forfeited the game to the Dunellen Scouts by the score of 9-0 shortly after the locals had gone to the bat at the start of the tenth inning because they refused to play to a decision in which he called Shortstop Mullin out upon the ground that Mullin had been touched by his coach at third as he overran the bag in an attempted steal from second. There were no outs at the time. Mullin, who was the first up, had singled and stolen second. The game was not forfeited until after a full five minutes of wrangling.

Bennie Dodwell, the former Plainfield High School star, appeared for the first time Saturday in the role of coach for the Scouts. Lewis pitched for the Scouts in the place of Maskell, the regular pitcher, who had burned his right hand with powder while fooling just before the game started. The locals scored seven runs in the first three innings off him. The runs came as the result of five hits, two bases on balls and three errors. Lewis settled down in the fourth and from then on until the ninth the locals went out in one, two, three order.

Albert Dealaman occupied the mound for the locals at the start in the place of Butler, the regular twirler, who was unable to be on hand. Dealaman fared very well until the sixth, when the Scouts solved his benders and knocked him out of the box. Velard, who has been playing first base, relieved Dealaman. Before he was able to check the slaughter the Scouts had scored six runs. This made the score stand 10 to 7 in their favor.

The score stood this way until the ninth, when the locals tied the score, obtaining three runs on singles by Brandt, Cohen and Semer, and an error by LaRue.

The feature of the game was Maskell's shoe-string catch of a line drive from A. Dealaman's bat, after which he doubled up Semer at second. Right Fielder Grindlay, of the Scouts, was hit on the head by a pitched ball in the sixth inning and retired in favor of Schneiderwind.

CITY LEAGUE MEETING.

There will be a City League meeting tonight in the Daily Press office. Several important matters are to be discussed and it is likely that there will be an understanding reached in the case of Aaron Hirsch, for whose services both the Saurer and Netherwood managers were angling. A report on the matter of getting either a pennant or watch fobs for the champions in the league race will be read tonight.

BOROUGH BOWLING CARD.

The following matches have been carded for the week on Gates' borough alleys: Tonight—Kunzleman vs. W. Conover, Howe vs. Kunzleman, Luthman vs. Conshay, Smalley vs. Thorn, Ferrero vs. Kunzleman; Thursday, Voorhees vs. Squires, Miller vs. W. Conover, Connolly vs. Snyder, McKenzie vs. Conshay.

NO GROUNDS, NO GAME.

The Saurer-Knights of St. Peter ball game, scheduled to be played at New Brunswick yesterday, was cancelled owing to the inability of the Knights' manager to secure suitable grounds.

Local Have Two Big Innings in Sunday Afternoon Attraction.

The Tabs handed the New York Senators a 4 to 0 defeat at Avon Park yesterday, Jack Denny and Dick Lawton allowing only three hits. The winner's reached Newman for four bingles, none of which were extra base clouts.

The Senators' catcher had a weak arm, six men stealing on him. The weak hitting power of the local lads was in evidence at many stages of the game, but luckily there were no critical moments.

Art Kyle and Hallihan were the fielding stars of the day, each handling several difficult plays. The score:

ATHLETES OF BOTH SEXES COMPETED AT DUNELLEN

The athletic meet for boys and girls, which was scheduled to have been held under the auspices of the Dunellen Board of Trade on the afternoon of the Fourth but was postponed on account of the heavy deluge in the morning, was held Saturday afternoon, at Maurer Oval, Dunellen.

The first event, the flag race for girls from 6 to 8 years, was won by Margaret Romayne. Mildred Harris was second. They both received two silk American flags as prizes.

Next came the flag race for boys between the same ages. Elmer Mingle was first and Henry Smith second. The boys received the same kind of awards.

The roller coaster race for boys from 8 to 10 was substituted by a running race. The race was won by Richard Sullivan, who received a penknife. Randolph Stryker was second and he received candy.

A running race was likewise substituted for the rope jumping contest scheduled to be held by girls from 8 to 10. The race was won by Josephine Liable, who received a gold lavalier. Helen Ayers was second and she received candy.

The foot race for boys from 10 to 12 was won by Elmer Harrison, with Richard Sullivan a close second. The first prize was a penknife and the second candy.

The running broad jump for boys from 12 to 16 was participated in by nine lads. Archie Munn won the event with a jump of 11 feet, 7½ inches. Bert Jennings was second, the measurement of his leap being 11 feet, 6 inches. First prize was a fishing reel and second candy.

The rope jumping race for girls of 6 to 8 was substituted by a running race. Nine girls entered the contest. The race was won by Margaret Romayne. Irene Titus was second. Both prizes were candy.

The foot race for boys from 6 to 8 was participated in by a field of twenty. The race was won by Elmer Mingle, with Henry Smith a close second. Bill Deering, who was expected to win the event, was blocked off at the start. He nevertheless finished third. First prize was a baseball and the second candy.

By reason of a large entry the potato race was divided into two heats. The first for girls ranging between the ages of 6 to 8, was won by Josephine Liable, who received a pair of roller skates. Mildred Harrison, who finished second, received candy.

The second heat of the potato race, which was participated in by older girls, was won by Evelyn Dix. Hazelle Apgar was second. Both received candy.

The foot race for boys from 8 to 10 was won by Richard Sullivan over a field of thirty-three. Samuel Latham was second. First prize was a pair of boy scout shoes and second a glass of candy.

The shoe race for boys and girls was the most exciting event of the afternoon. The entrants in this event divested themselves of their shoes, which were piled in a heap. The participants then lined up at about a hundred feet away and raced for the pile. The winner of the event was to be the one who, after getting his or her shoes on and laced or buttoned, was to be the first back to the starting point. When the racers, made up of fourteen boys and five girls, reached the pile there was one grand scramble for their footwear. Henry Smith proved to be the coolest and he rambled home first. Edward Dix was second. First prize was a pair of shoes and the second a glass of candy.

The last event was the marathon race. The course of the race was thrice around the diamond of the baseball field. There were ten entries. The race was won by James Greenhalgh, who received solid gold cuff buttons. Bert Jennings was second and he received candy.

FISHING NOTES

William L. Julliard, "Wren" Townley, "Al" De Nise and Wilbur Smalley brought home a fine mess of bass from Head Gates, where they spent Sunday.

Dick Randolph and Cliff Manning caught 300 pounds of the finest sea bass ever seen in this vicinity. The scene of their labors was Barnegat Bay.

Weak fish are biting well in Princess Bay, Jamaica, Raritan Bay and Barnegat.

According to reports the streams in New Jersey are in the finest condition, although the present season has been a strenuous one.

Th salt water fishing season closes on July 15.

INDIAN LEAGUE "HIKE."

Members of the Y. M. C. A. Indian League will participate in an all day hike tomorrow. Starting from the building at 9 o'clock, they will go to Holly's pond, a favorite rendezvous for the boys, and spend the day in picnic style. Physical Director Robert L. Meermans has arranged a program of games and athletic events for the day.

BOUND BROOK AHEAD.

Yesterday the Bound Brook Beer took the measure of the Johnson and Johnson B. B. C., of New Brunswick defeating them in an interesting contest, the score of which was 3 to 2.

FINE WEATHER PROMISED FOR THURSDAY'S OUTING

If you contemplate going to the shore this summer, why not go down to Asbury Park, Thursday and secure accommodations for yourself? The annual excursion of the Sunday schools of the Crescent Avenue, Grace Episcopal, Holy Cross, Heavenly Rest, St. Stephen's, Seventh-Day Baptist, New Market Baptist and Dunellen Presbyterian churches and Bethel chapel, offers a splendid opportunity for you to view all the many new attractions at the shore resort and at the same do your cottage or room hunting.

The first section leaves Dunellen 8:04, Clinton avenue 8:06, Grant avenue 8:09, Plainfield 8:15. Second section follows immediately, stopping at Plainfield and Netherwood. Trains will leave Asbury Park at 6:30 p. m.

The committee in charge of the outing assures everyone of a good time and has provided baggage room for baby carriages, and any luggage that you wish to take with you.

MANY ATTEND FRESH AIR HOME SERVICES

A large number of Plainfield people took the opportunity yesterday afternoon to visit the Nethewood Fresh Air Camp, at which time the formal opening service was held. An interesting program of music, singing and speaking by the children was given and an address by Rev. Dr. Birney S. Hudson, pastor of the Park Avenue Baptist church, on the wonderful work done by the institution in Plainfield, calling attention to the congestion of the homes in the East Side of New York city, was warmly listened to. J. D. Loizeaux also spoke in a complimentary vein of the splendid opportunity the local camp offers the tired city mothers and their babies.

At present there are three hundred at the camp, while another delegation will arrive this week from the city, making a total of 400 boys and girls by the end of the week. The camp is always grateful for any contributions from the public of money, fruit, vegetables and clothing.

PATRICK MC GRATH'S FUNERAL.

The funeral of Patrick McGrath, who died last Friday, was held from his late home, 664 South Second street, this morning, and later from St Mary's church, where a mass of requiem was said. Rev. Father B. M. Bogan officiated in the presence of a large gathering of friends and relatives. The floral offerings were numerous and handsome and included many set pieces. Burial was made in St. Mary's cemetery.

SCOTTISH CLAN MEETING.

Clan McKenzie, Order of Scottish Clans, will hold an important meeting in the Exempt Firemen's Hall on Park avenue tonight at 8 o'clock. A social hour will follow.

OFFICERS TO ATTEND INSTRUCTION SCHOOL

Orders Issued for the Annual Period of Rifle Practice at Sea Girt.

Sixty non-commissioned officers of the First Battalion, Second Infantry, N. G. N. J., will spend this week at Sea Girt attending the school of instruction. Many of them left Saturday, while others went yesterday morning, as they were required to be in camp by noon on Sunday. The local men will be from Company K.

Orders have also been issued for the annual period of rifle practice on the Sea Girt ranges. Companies F and C will shoot for record on August 11, and Companies I and K on August 12. This will be the only opportunity the privates of the First Battalion will have to go to the State reservation this year, and it is likely that entire rosters of the companies will make the trip.

At the National Guard trophy match which was shot at Sea Girt last Saturday, the Second Regiment teams secured first and third prizes, while another ranked sixth place in the standing of the team teams participating. On the team winning the first prize were: Major William B. Martin, Captain Silvester, Lieutenant A. R. Phillips, Lieutenant Keyser, Lieutenant James Dabb and Lieutenant Charles R. Bohn. The team winning the third prize consisted of Captain Bodine, Lieutenant Disbrow, Privates Donnington, G. W. Silvester, Alexander and Haig. On the other team representing the regiment were Lieutenant A. I. Littell, Sergeant Christopher, Lieutenant Woodward, Captain Stockton, Private A. R. Silvester and Private Gimbel.

LETTERS OF ADMINISTRATION FOR WILLIAM APGAR ESTATE

Letters of administration were granted Saturday to Paul S. Queen, of Flemington, on the estate of William Apgar, who died in this city, February 22, last. The heirs are five adult daughters, according to the application.

In the petition for letters of administration it is stated that the total value of the personal estate involved does not include more than $1,000.

MINERS RETURNED TO WORK.

Joplin, Mo., July 12.—A strike of nearly 5,000 lead and zinc miners, which began here two weeks ago, ended today, when every mine in the district resumed operations. There was no settlement. The men went back to the miners and asked for their places at the old wage scale.

NEW YORK GETS 1917 CONVENTION

Metropolis Endeavorers Win Out in Competition Against Six Cities.

Christian Endeavorers are pleased to know that the 1917 International Christian Endeavor convention is to be held in New York city. Competing against six other cities for the honor, the Metropolis won when the Board of trustees of the United Society met in Chicago. The live committee of New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania young people that worked to urge the holding of the convention in New York city, will continue its labors, aiding the convention committee that will be appointed by the New York city union. The State president, J. T. Sproull, and the State press superintendent, F. L. Mintel, of Rahway, have represented New Jersey in the preliminary work.

Commercial bodies in the Metropolis joined with the Christian Endeavorers of the city in extending the invitation and pledged support. In fact, the convention expenses were underwritten before the committee submitted its plea. The Triumvirate of States—New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania—backed by the United Society of Christian Endeavor, will now get right at the task of trying to secure 50,000 delegates.

Buyers Are Found by Advertising—Because They Are Opportunity-Hunters!

If you have something to sell—real estate, personal property of any sort—there's a buyer for it. You don't know who he is, or where he is. You'd be helpless in trying to locate him—but for the fact that he is trying to locate you!

For buyers are opportunity-seekers. And they have learned that the Plainfield Daily Press classified columns are 'the Happy Hunting Grounds' for opportunities. Thus, when your "ad" starts upon its quest it meets the man for whom it was written—also upon his quest. And that's how "results" follow classified advertising.

Self-interest will induce hundreds of people to read and consider your "Business Opportunity" ad.

The FORESTER'S DAUGHTER

A ROMANCE OF THE BEAR TOOTH RANGE

By HAMLIN GARLAND

Copyright, 1914, by Hamlin Garland

AUTHOR'S FOREWORD

This little story is the outcome of two trips (neither of which was in the Bear Tooth forest) during the years 1909 and 1910. The golden trail is an actuality for me. The camp on the lake was mine. The rain, the snow I met, the prying camp robbers, the grouse, the muskrats, the beaver, were my companions. But Berea McFarlane was with me only in imagination. She is a fiction, born of a momentary powerful handclasp of a western rancher's daughter. The story of Wayland Norcross is fiction also. But the McFarlane ranch, the mill and the lonely ranger stations are closely drawn pictures of realities. Although the stage of my comedy is Colorado, I have not held to any one locality. The scene is composite.

It was my intention originally to write a much longer and more important book concerning Supervisor McFarlane, but this is merely the very slender story of a young western girl who, being desired of three strong men, bestows her love on a tourist whose weakness is at once her allurement and her care. The administration problem, the sociologic theme, which was to have made the novel worth while, got lost in some way on the low trail and never caught up with the lovers. I'm sorry, but so it was.

CHAPTER I.

The Happy Girl.

THE stage line which ran from Williams to Bear Tooth (one of the most authentic then to be found in all the west) possessed at least one genuine Concord coach, so faded, so saddened, so cracked and so splintered that its passengers entered it under protest and alighted from it with thanksgiving, and yet it must have been built by honorable men, for in 19— it still made the run of 120 miles twice each week without loss of wheel or even so much as molting a scrap of paint.

And yet whatever it may have been in its youth it was in its age no longer a gay dash of color in the landscape. On the contrary, it fitted into the dust brown and sage green plain as defensively as a beetle in a dusty path. Nevertheless it was an indispensable part of a very moving picture as it crept, creaking and groaning (or it may be it was the suffering passenger creaking and groaning), along the hillside.

After leaving the Grande river the road winds up a pretty high divide before plunging down into Ute park, as they call all that region lying between the Continental range on the east and the Bear Tooth plateau on the west. It was a big spread of land and very far from an eastern man's conception of a park. From Dome peak it seems a plain; but, in fact, when clouds shut off the high summits to the west this "valley" becomes a veritable mountain land, a tumbled, lonely country, over which an occasional horseman crawls, a minute but persistent insect. It is, to be exact, a succession of ridges and ravines, sculptured (in some far off, post glacial time) by floods of water, covered now, rather sparsely, with pinons, cedars and aspens, a dry, forbidding but majestic landscape.

In late August the hills become iridescent, opaline with the translucent yellow of the aspen, the coral and crimson of the fire weed, the blood red of huckleberry beds and the royal purple of the asters, while flowing round all, as solvent and neutral setting, lies the gray-green of the ever present and ever enduring sage brush.

Through this gorgeous land of mist, of stillness and of death a few years ago a pale young man (seated beside the driver) rode one summer day in a voiceless rapture which made Bill McCoy weary.

"If you'd had as much of this as I have you'd talk of something else," he growled after a half dozen attempts at conversation. Bill wasn't much to look at, but he was a good driver, and the stranger respected him for it.

Eventually this simple minded horseman became curious about the slim young fellow sitting beside him.

"What you doing out here anyhow—fishing or just rebuilding a lung?"

"Rebuilding two lungs," answered the tourist.

"Well, this climate will just about put lungs into a coffee can," retorted Bill, with official loyalty to his country.

To his discerning eye "the tourist" now became "a lunger." "Where do you live when you're to home?"

"Connecticut."

"I knew it."

"How did you know it?" The youth seemed really interested to know.

"I drove another fellow up here last fall that dealt out the same kind of brogue you do."

Bill was prevented at the moment from pursuing this line of inquiry by the discovery of a couple of horsemen racing from a distant ranch toward the road. It was plain, even to the stranger, that they intended to intercept the stage, and Bill plied the lash with sudden vigor.

"I'll give 'em a chase," said he grimly.

The other appeared a little alarmed. "What are they, bandits?"

"Bandits!" sneered Bill. "Your eyesight is piercing. Them's girls."

The traveler apologized. "My eyes aren't very good," he said hurriedly.

He was, however, quite justified in his mistake, for both riders wore wide rimmed sombreros and rode astride at a furious pace, bandanas fluttering, skirts streaming, and one was calling in shrill command, "Oh, Bill!"

As they neared the gate the driver drew up with a word of surprise. "Why, howdy, girls? Howdy?" he said, with an assumption of innocence. "Were you wishin' fer to speak to me?"

"Oh, shut up!" commanded one of the girls, a round faced, freckled romp. "You know perfectly well that Berrie is going home today. We told you all about it yesterday."

"Sure thing!" exclaimed Bill. "I'd forgot all about it."

"Like nothin'!" exclaimed the maid. "You've been countin' the hours till you got here. I know you."

Meanwhile her companion had slipped from her horse. "Well, goodby, Molly. Wish I could stay longer."

"Goodby. Run down again."

"I will. You come up."

The young passenger sprang to the ground and politely said: "May I help you in?"

Bill stared, the girl smiled, and her companion called: "Be careful, Berrie, don't hurt yourself, the wagon might pitch."

The youth, perceiving that he had made another mistake, stammered an apology.

The girl perceived his embarrassment and sweetly accepted his hand. "I am much obliged, all the same."

Bill shook with malicious laughter. "Out in the country girls are warranted to jump clean over a measly little hack like this," he explained.

The girl took a seat in the back corner of the dusty vehicle, and Bill opened conversation with her by asking what kind of a time she had been having "in the east."

"Fine," said she.

"Did ye get as far back as my old town?"

"What town is that, Bill?"

"Oh, come off! You know I'm from Omaha."

"No; I only got as far as South Bend."

The picture which the girl had made as she dashed up to the pasture gate—her hat rim blown away from her brown face and sparkling eyes—united with the kindliness in her voice as she accepted his gallant aid, entered a deep impression on the tourist's mind, but he did not turn his head to look at her—perhaps he feared Bill's elbow quite as much as his guffaw—but he listened closely, and by listening learned that she had been "east" for several weeks, and also that she was known, and favorably known, all along the line, for whenever they met a team or passed a ranch some one called out, "Hello, Berrie!" in cordial salute, and the men, old and young, were especially pleased to see her.

Meanwhile the stage rose and fell over the gigantic swells like a tiny boat on a monster sea, while the sun blazed ever more fervently from the splendid sky, and the hills glowed with ever increasing tumult of color. Through this land of color, of repose, of romance, the young traveler rode, drinking deep of the germless air, feeling that the girl behind him was a wondrous part of this wild and unaccountable country.

He had no chance to study her face again till the coach rolled down the hill to "Yancy's," a ranch house, where they were to take dinner and change horses.

With intent to show Bill that he did not greatly fear his smiles the youth sprang down and offered a hand to assist his charming fellow passenger to alight, and she, with kindly understanding, again accepted his aid, to Bill's chagrin, and they walked up the path side by side.

"This is all very new and wonderful to me," the young man said in explanation, "but I suppose it's quite commonplace to you—and Bill."

"Oh, no—it's home!"

"You were born here?"

"No, I was born in the east, but I've lived here ever since I was three years old."

"By east you mean Kansas?"

"No, Missouri," she laughed back at him.

She was taller than most women and gave out an air of fine unconscious health which made her good to see, although her face was too broad to be pretty. She smiled easily, and her teeth were white and even. Her hand he noticed was as strong as steel and brown as leather. Her neck rose from her shoulders like that of an acrobat, and she walked with the sense of security which comes from self reliant strength.

She was met at the door by old lady Yancy, who pumped her hand up and down, exclaiming: "My stars! I'm glad to see ye back! 'Pears like the country is just naturally goin' to the dogs without you. The dance last Saturday was a frost, so I hear—no snap to the fiddlin', no gimp to the jiggin'. It shorely was pitiful."

Yancy himself, tall, grizzled, succinct, shook her hand in his turn. "Ma's right, girl, the country needs ye. I'm scared every time ye go away fer fear some feller will snap ye up."

The young tourist—he signed W. W. Norcross in Yancy's register—watched her closely and listened to every word

The Girl Behind Him Was a Wondrous Part of This Wild and Unaccountable Country.

she spoke with an intensity of interest which led Mrs. Yancy to say privately:

"'Pears like that young 'unger' ain't goin' to forgit ye if he can help it."

"What makes you think he's a 'unger?'"

"Don't haf to think. One look at him is enough."

Thereafter a softer light—the light of pity—shone in the eyes of the girl. "Poor fellow! He does look kind o' peaked. But this climate will bring him up to the scratch," she added, with optimistic faith in her beloved hills.

A moment later the downcoming stage pulled in loaded to the side lines, and everybody on it seemed to know Berea McFarlane. It was hello here and hello there and how are ye between, with smacks from the women and open cries of "Pass it around" on the part of the men, till Norcross marveled at the display.

"She seems a great favorite," he observed to Yancy.

"Who—Berrie? She's the whole works up at Bear Tooth. Good thing she don't want to go to congress—she'd lay Jim Worthy on the shelf."

Berea's popularity was not so remarkable as her manner of receiving it. She took it all as a sort of joke—a good, kindly joke. She shook hands with her male admirers and smacked the cheeks of her female friends with an air of modest deprecation. "Oh, you don't mean it," was one of her phrases. She enjoyed this display of affection, but it seemed not to touch her deeply, and her impartial, humorous acceptance of the courtship of the men was equally charming, though this was due, according to remark, to the claims of some rancher up the line.

She continued to be the theme of conversation at the dinner table and yet remained unembarrassed and gave back quite as good as she received.

"If I was Cliff," declared one lanky admirer, "I'd be shot if I let you out of my sight. It ain't safe."

She smiled broadly. "I don't feel scared."

"Oh, you're all right! It's the other feller—like me—that gets hurt."

The northbound coach got away first, and as the girl came out to take her place Norcross said, "Won't you have my seat with the driver?"

She dropped her voice humorously. "No, thank you. I can't stand for Bill's back."

Norcross understood. She didn't relish the notion of being so close to the frankly amorous driver, who neglected no opportunity to be personal. Therefore he helped her to her seat inside and resumed his place in front.

Bill, now broadly communicative, minutely detailed his tastes in food, horses, liquors and saddlers in a monologue which would have been tiresome to any one but an imaginative young eastern student. Bill had a vast knowledge of the west, but a distressing habit of repetition.

In this informing way some ten miles were traversed, the road climbing ever higher and the mountains to right and left increasing in grandeur each hour, till of a sudden and in a deep valley on the bank of another swift stream they came upon a squalid saloon and a minute postoffice. This was the town of Moskow.

Bill, lumbering down over the wheel, took a bag of mail from the boot and dragged it into the cabin. The girl rose, stretched herself and said: "This stagin' is slow business. I'm cramped. I'm going to walk on ahead."

"May I go with you?" asked Norcross.

"Sure thing! Come along."

As they crossed the little pole bridge which spanned the flood the tourist exclaimed: "What exquisite water! It's like melted opals."

"Comes right down from the snow," she answered, impressed by the poetry of his simile.

He would gladly have lingered, listening to the song of the water, but as she passed on he followed. The opposite hill was sharp and the road stony, but as they reached the top the young easterner called out, "See the savins!"

Before them stood a grove of cedars, old, gray and drear, as weirdly impressive as the cacti in a Mexican desert. Torn by winds, scarred by lightnings, deeply rooted, tenacious as tradition, unlovely as Egyptian mummies, fantastic, dwarfed and blackened, these unaccountable creatures clung to the ledges. "What do you suppose planted those trees there?"

The girl was deeply impressed by the novelty of this query. "I never thought to ask. I reckon they just grew."

"No, there's a reason for all these plantings," he insisted.

"We don't worry ourselves much about such things out here," she replied, with charming humor. "We don't even worry about the weather. We just take things as they come."

They walked on talking with new intimacy. "Where is your home?" he asked.

"A few miles out of Bear Tooth. You are from the east, Bill says—'the far east,' we call it."

"From New Haven. I've just finished at Yale. Have you ever been in a city?"

"Oh, yes! I go to Denver once in awhile, and I saw St. Louis once, but I was only a yearling and don't remember much about it. What are you doing out here, if it's a fair question?"

He looked away at the mountains. "I got rather used up last spring, and my doctor said I'd better come out here for awhile and build up. I'm going up to Meeker's mill. Do you know where that is?"

"I know every stovepipe in this park," she answered. "Joe Meeker is kind o' related to me—uncle by marriage. He lives about fifteen miles over the hill from Bear Tooth."

This fact seemed to bring them still closer together. "I'm glad of that," he said pointedly. "Perhaps I shall be permitted to see you now and again? I'm going to be lonesome for awhile, I'm afraid."

"Don't you believe it! Joe Meeker's boys will keep you interested," she assured him.

The stage overtook them at this point and Bill surlily remarked, "If you'd been alone, young feller, I'd 'a' give you a chase." His resentment of the outsider's growing favor with the girl was ludicrously evident.

As they rose into the higher levels the aspen shook its yellowish leaves in the breeze and the purple foothills gained in majesty. Great new peaks came into view on the right, and the lofty cliffs of the Bear Tooth range loomed in naked grandeur high above the blue green of the pines which clothed their sloping eastern sides.

At intervals the road passed small log ranches crouching low on the banks of creeks, but aside from these—and the sparse animal life around them—no sign of settlement could be seen. The valley lay as it had lain for thousands of years, repeating its forests as the meadows of the lower levels send forth their annual grasses. Norcross said to himself, "I have circled the track of progress and have re-entered the border America, where the stagecoach is still the one stirring thing beneath the sun."

At last the driver, with a note of exultation, called out, "Grab a root, everybody; it's all the way down hill and time to feed."

And so as the dusk came over the mighty spread of the hills to the east and the peaks to the west darkened from violet to purple black the stage rumbled and rattled and rushed down the winding road through thickening signs of civilization and just at nightfall rolled into the little town of Bear Tooth, which is the eastern gateway of the Ute plateau.

Norcross had given a great deal of thought to the young girl behind him, and thought had deepened her charm. Her frankness, her humor, her superb physical strength and her calm self reliance appealed to him, and the more dangerously because he was so well aware of his own weakness and loneliness, and as the stage drew up before the hotel he fervently said, "I hope I shall see you again?"

Daddy's Bedtime Story—The Crow That Thought He Could Sing.

All He Could Sing Was "Caw, caw, caw."

"OF all the silly creatures I ever heard of," daddy told his two children. "I think the silliest was the crow that thought he could sing.

"It happened out in the peaceful country, all on a hot midsummer day. The green things were growing out in the fields, and the corn was coming up in straight rows out of the ground and was nodding and curtsying in the mild breeze to show how glad it was to be up and about under the warm sun.

"My story really begins some days before that particular midsummer afternoon when the birds had the nicest kind of a concert in the grove. It begins when the old black crow flew around and over the cornfield, eating the farmer's corn. That was not nice of the crow, which is a thievish creature. The farmer man didn't like it either, for he grew that corn to sell and not to be eaten by the thievish crow. So he put up a scarecrow to frighten the crow, but it didn't frighten that old thief at all. He had grown used to scarecrows.

"And one day—what do you think?—something happened that was so interesting that the old crow left off stealing corn long enough to hear it. He heard a tuneful bobolink telling a little brown Jenny Wren of a concert the birds were going to have down in the green grove upon an afternoon two weeks later.

"'We're all going to practice our very best songs,' said the bobolink. 'I understand that M. Nightingale is in extra good voice, and his aria will be worth coming miles to hear. And everybody will do his best.'

"And the old crow had then and there the oddest ambition you ever knew a crow to have. And what do you suppose it was? Why, he just made up his mind that he would sing at that concert too.

"So he went away and practiced till his throat was hoarse. And the day of the concert there he was. He stepped forward pomposly with a word for the owl, who was director.

"The owl smiled. He was a wise old owl and had known too much to try to sing. But he could see a joke ahead on the old black crow.

"And after those wonderful warblers, the nightingale and the thrush and the whippoorwill and all the rest had sung their solos and been applauded, the wise old owl, with a wink that the crow could not see, said, 'M. Crow will now sing "Rocked In the Cradle of the Deep."'

"Old Mr. Crow ruffled his feathers and started. And all he sang was one note—'Caw, caw, caw,' like that.

"The other birds flew away and left him cawing. Do you blame them? And the wise old owl laughed."

Glimpses of Married Life

BY MRS. EVA LEONARD

Nell and Jo Parsons retired to the kitchen with the oysters and the cake brought in by Dr. Ellson and Mr. Parsons for the impromptu spread, to celebrate the Mortons' homecoming.

"Tell me all about Olive." Mrs. Parsons was stirring the milk to keep it from scorching.

"I wrote you that she had refused Fred Joplin, didn't I?" Nell answered, looking up. She was carefully marking the frosting with a knife to make the pieces of cake even.

"No, you don't mean it! He is considered such a catch. What was the matter?"

"No one knows anything about the clock works of Olive Dunn. She says he's too undeveloped. You know she's old for her age. It's the unusual relation between her and her father. He's a very brilliant man. You know Fred has devoted his entire life to having a good time and has taken nothing seriously." Nell had finished cutting the cake.
